Introduction

In the recent catalogue and check-list of Staphylinidae (Löbl and Besuchet, 2004; Anlag, 2009) only 24 species of the subfamily Pselaphinae are listed for the European part of Turkey.

The Strandzha mountain region (including Black sea coast) is situated in the border area between Bulgaria and Turkey and has some specific characteristics (fairly low altitude combined with varied mountainous relief). The geographic and climatic specifics of the Strandzha mountain has determined special characteristics of the vegetation which is a conglomerate of European, Black Sea, Caucasian species, differing in origin, biological peculiarities and levels of development. They are divided into four large groups of vegetation families: Pre-coastal forests, marshlands and dunes; East beech-tree and durmast formation with evergreen bushes, East beech-tree formations in the high mountain area (500 - 700m) and Xerothermic beech-tree formations with or without remainders of Mediterranean vegetation.

All this contribute to considerable species diversity and existence of rare species, as well as ones that are not widespread in the rest of the two countries.

The current paper presents the results of two field expeditions in Yildiz (Strandzha) Mts. and Black Sea coast during the summer and autumn of 2009.

Materials and methods

The material was collected using the following methods:

Sifting - with litter reducer. The leaf litter and rotten wood was sifted and examined in place or soil samples (2,5-3 kg) was taken for Winkler/Moczarski extractors; night hunt with light - a lamp 160W MBTF and black light tube (F8T5 - 365 nm) was used; sweeping - with entomological net and with handy one-hand blower Partner GBV 325.

One part of the specimens are mounted using standard procedures, second part is preserved in alcohol. All materials are preserved in the author collection.

In order to avoid repetition of GPS coordinates and altitude data, they are given only in the first mentioning of the record.

Conclusions

As a result of this report 23 Pselaphinae species are established for the investigated region. One genus (Fagiezia Jeannel, 1950) and 6 species (Bibloplectus ambiguus, Bryaxis roumaniae, Bythinus leonhardinus, Bythinus acutangulus lunifer, Brachygluta trigonoprocta and Fagiezia impressa) are new to the fauna of Turkey.

New localities are mentioned for Delenda carthago and Bythinus balkanicus, which were known only from the vicinity of Belgrad Ormanları (Karaman, 1957, 1969; Anlaş, 2009) till now.

As a result, including the species mentioned in Anlaş (2009), the total number of the Pselaphinae species in European part of Turkey is 38. Having in mind the geographical position of the area (between Europe and Asia) and variety of natural habitats within this territory the richness of the studied fauna must be greater.
