Short History of Slovene Literature

By F. T. SUHADOLNIK

As an aid to the singing and also an encouragement in that line Luther composed his cathechism in verse and adapted it to song thus encouraging the use of singing still more.

The Slovene reformers used Luthers work as their model and they also issued cathechisms on this form. Trubar himself published six cathechisms in verse and with melodies "Auslegung in gesangweis." In the Abecedarium he rhymed the Lord's prayer for the use of the people.

Trubars hymnal was preceeded by the one that was published by the radical Kolumbner group. Even at the time of Trubar's stay at Ljubljana, Kolumbner was collecting the hymns for his book but Trubar would not consent to publication due, as he claimed, because of the poor rhythm. Even Trubar's refusal did not hamper the publication for it was published in 1563 under the editorship of Juricic. The hymnal was published at Urah in the printery of Ungnad. The edition was not widely accepted because Trubar did all to suppress it. His main objection was some of the hymns contained violent attacks on the Catholic Clergy, which protest he more than negated with his "Cerkvene ordingo" which was mentioned earlier.

After four years Trubar's own hymnal appeared. The "Church Hymnal" contains the hymns some with musical notation and some without them but with an indication of the airs to which they were to be sung. The references are mostly to well known airs. It's preface shows clearly the purpose of the publication. Even the title page bears the testimony to the main purpose "Ta celi Catehismus, eni Pfalmi, inu tih vigshih Godij Stare inu Noue krfzhanske Piefne of P. Truberia, S. Krelia inu od drugih sloshene." It was evident that the purpose of the hymnal was to serve as a rhymthed cathechism of the faith. After this edition three other editions appeared; in the third Jurij Dalmatin is represented for the first time with some of his works.

In 1575 Trubar published another hymnal containing three Spiritual Poems" with the music, which he composed during a "long and serious illness." Together with his hymnal he also published six songs taken from the Old Testament (mostly Psalms) together with a Christmas carol by Schweiger. Almost simultaneously Dalmatin's "Passion" appeared in Ljubljana. The whole collection mentioned was in cluded in the fourth edition of the Hymnal which appeared in 1579, under the editorship of Trubar and Dalmatin. This edition contains an increased number of poems. Sixth edition contains a still greater number and includes also the morning and evening hymns that Bohorcic composed for his children. The last edition of the Hymnal appeared in 1595 under the editorship of Felician Trubar, and contained still greater number of new poets and authors. Some were also adapted from the Kolumbner—Juricic hymnal.

The hymnal was not the work of any individual man but a symposium of all the Protestant writers of the time. It is interesting to note that the book increased the number of authors as the editions appeared and when the final edition was published the first contributors were already in their graves. It took the hymnal 45 years to become what it finally be-

The final edition contains 100 hymns, 69 of which have the music attached. German, Czech and Latin were the source of 46 of the collection while the majority of them are the original compositions of the men who contributed to the various editions. Some of the Hymns though original in texture show the influence of the German Protestants, so great is the influence that some seem to be free translations of the German masters of the time. Of the individual authors Dalmatin is represented with 28 compositions, closely followed by Trubar's 24 and Krelj's 11. 24 of the hymns are anonymous four of which are old Slovene church songs; Christmas song, two verses of the old Easter song a song for Penticast, and the ten commandments. Nor did the old songs always have the old form. They were changed to fit the dogmas of the Protestant religion.

The prosody and the metric arrangement of the hymns are not arranged according to the strict rules of poetry but have been composed according to the spirit of the music that accompanied them. Movement does not depend upon strict meter or poetical feet. Their form closely follows the system of the Meister singers who composed their composition by the adaptation to the musical movement. The accents are counted rather than measured as is the case in strict poetry. Rhythm is arranged according to verses rather than the sound of the lines. Frequently alliteration and assonance take place of the rhyming of the final works. In general the quality of the Slovene hymnal is surpassed by the quality of the German Protestant

The popularity of the Hymnal can be estimated from the many editions. Their use was not confined to the Protestant churches and Protestant services but they were used by the Catholics until they were forbidden to be used because of their anti-Catholic nature. Nevertheless it served as a sample of the Catholic hymnal which came later which contained some of the hymns of the Protestant book as late as the middle of the 18th century.

VI. __ Literary work of Catholic clergy. Contemporary manuscripts

It had been stated before that the defense of the Catholic clergy owing to the conditions of the times were necessarily very weak. That condition remained for some time to the embarassment of the Catholic Church. Had the clergy had the same advantages Protestantism among the Slovenes would have become a grand gesture rather than an era in the history of the Slovenes and the Slovene literature. There iis no really prominent preacher in the ranks of the Catholic clergy of that time. And there was no prominent literary priest who could use the invention of printing as effectively as did the Protestant reformers. All that was written in that Protestant era consists mainly of manuscripts that were found in the fly leaves of prayer books that were the possession of some priest or other. The principle of these was a book that belonged to a priest in Gorica. They are in the ma some prayers that were necessary for the mass and a outline of some sermons.

The Catholic clergy was not slow in reacting to Bowlers, the stimulus of the progressive Protestants. The chief friend was bishop Textor who very zealously! fluenced Ferdinand for the support of the schools which the Catholic students for the priesthood cou receive an education similiar to that of the Protest preachers. Slowly but surely the counter attack w formed. It was not very effective until many ye after. Catholics began to publish books though the number was small enough. The first, printed at Grant dec in 1574, was a catechism. It appeared fully of year before the first Protestant book was printed Ljubljana (Protestant books were printed in German, No copy of the Catholic catechism remains. All that known about it is found in Trubar's German preface "Catehisma sdviema islagama" (Ljubljana, The references that Trubar makes to the book are follows, "Some good christians and faithful follower of the Holy Church in Krajn have forwarded, during the last autumn a new Jesuit catechism printed in vene with the title 'Compeudium Catechismi Cathon in Slavonica Ingua...Per Fratrem Leonhard Pacheneckerum, professum ac Sacerdotum coener Victoriensis almi Ciftercienfis ordinis, Graecii Styll Metropli, 1574" He continues as follows "The cateur ism is a defense of the Seven Sacraments, Seven Capital sins crying to heaven for vengence, the poral Works of Mercy, Invocation of the Saints, Ave Maria, and other foolhardy practices" Include in the same preface is included some mention of? pute which Trubar had with an unknown Slovene Jesus published a treatise which showed that the Cathon Church was the true church and Luther's the wrong one he rises to the defense "And since the Jesuits have begun to write, as I have stated, in the Slovene again the evangelical faith, I have in spite of sickness and old age composed a lengthy sermon and caused it be printed with the catechism. In the "register" angerily inscribes "Those Jesuits, the new monks ... Papists, rich, deceivers of old people and of children write Slovens ? write Slovene."

FRANKIE SIMMS MEETS DEMPSEY

Jack Dempsey, who has been at the Public Auditorium the past week with the Sportsmen Show, stopped at Charley O'-Connell's gymnasium to see Frankie Simms in action. He was impressed with Frankie's o physique and thinks that Simms olis one of the strongest heavy-1 weights in the ring. His 4 punching powers should, as in O Jack's case, carry him to the top. Jack advised more box-5 ing and ring experience.

Jerry, the Greek, who was the former champion's chief trainer Goals Fouls P. also had something to say. " 7 seen lots-a champeens. Simms 7 luk goot. Beek an' strong only o he lazy, like the Dempsey."

Interlodge Spotlight

Collinwood Boosters JSKJ A. Baraga J. Laurich Baraga has the highest bowling average in the Interlodge league. He also bowls in the Industrial loop where he has an average of one hundred eighty-five. The highest score he ever rolled was a remarkable two hundred eightynine game for which he received a turkey and a cash prize. In addition to bowling he also enjoys baseball, swimming and roller skating.

Baraga is getting good support from Johnny Laurich. Both have been mainly responsible in keeping the Booster team close to the top.

The most embarrassing moment in Johnny Laurich's life came about at the A. B. C. Tourney. He was in the act of delivering the ball, when his shoe got caught on the slides. He fell to the floor and slid past the foul line. Laurich is also a good dancer. However, he does not fall or slip while dancing.
