Last Saturday evening, a group of Rovers, Utopians and Spartans went to a farm to enjoy a corn roast which was given by the Rovers. After their arrival there, they waited and waited for the Rover president, Miss Frances Nemec to arrive with the corn She and Mr. Joe Bohinc and another girl friend, started for the farm with the corn-but never reached their destination. What caused it? Motor trouble!

Can't you just imagine that crowd waiting for their corn? Well-they waited until 2 o'clock and still no corn. Know what they did then? Well-they just walked to the next farm and picked some corn and roasted that After that, the corn roast was a success—but they certainly did

Buildings and Tomorrows

When the builders of a $6,000,000 apartment hotel in New York City wanted to fill the cornerstone with objects, which when the cornerstone is opened in some future generation, will best represent the manners and thoughts of today, they consulted artists, writers, musicians to select the objects. They selected the follow-

The inscription on the cornerstone reads: "Dedicated to yesterday's charm and tomorrow's convenience."

With the trend of modern building such as it is, one wonders why architects and owners of buildings should be anxious to preserve today's modern objects when the building will be cleared away to be superceded by another building. It seems that edifaces are constructed only to make room for other things in the next fifty or a hundred years.

Nothing but the most brutal and destructive war would wipe out all records of the things which we think today are the ultramodern and the buildings which at best are temporary in our way of thinking would be wiped out also and no one would give a secondary thought to things which are placed in conerstones. The next generation, which according to the trend of times, will tear down the buildings, will know the things which are modern today. If the trend to build was to make it permanent and have history practical housewares that are a beautiful concert was given at the helped. show that buildings are built for hundreds of years as they are in other places, cornerstone objects would have some significance.
