REPORT, &c.

ABOUT two years having elapfed fince the prefent colony at Sierra Leone was fet on foot, the Directors of the Sierra Leone Company think it proper to give in this report à brief hiftory of its progrefs to the prefent time: they will then lay before the Court an account of the Expenses which have been incurred, and of the general finances of the Company; and they will afterward enter into a more particular description of the Prefent Situation of the fettlement, arranging their information under the four following heads; Health, Trade, Cultivation, and Civilization.

IN order to introduce the flort Hiftory that is proposed, it may be proper to flate A fome fome circumftances antecedent even to the formation of the prefent colony.

In the year 1787, a number of gentlemen fubscribed a few thousand pounds, as a fund for affifting fome hundreds of deftitute blacks, then in London, to fettle at Sierra Leone, where a confiderable diffrict of land had been ceded by the native chiefs for that purgovernment very liberally feconded pofe: these views, by taking upon itself the expenfe of transporting the blacks thither, and of fupplying them with neceffaries during the first fix or eight months of their refidence in Africa. It might naturally be expected that perfons of this defcription, crouded together on fhipboard, would be very unhealthy, and the event did but too well justify the fuppofition. The number of them that left England was 460, of whom 84 died during their detention in the channel, or on the paffage; and near a hundred more fell victims either to their own intemperance, or to the hardfhips they were exposed to during the first rainy feason. The remainder of this body of men, after having built themfelves a town, and improved gradually in their circumstances, were dispersed in the year 1790, on account of their being involved (though not through their own fault) in the confequences of a difpute between the natives and the crew of a British vessel, who had fet fire to the town of a neighbouring chief. They were again again united in the year 1791, through the interference of the Sierra Leone Company's Agent, and fixed themfelves in Granville Town, which is about two or three miles distant from Free Town, the Company's prefent chief fettlement.

When the Act of Parliament had paffed for incorporating the Sierra Leone Company, and a confiderable capital appeared likely to be raifed for carrying on the undertaking, the Directors had an opportunity of rendering, as they conceived, a very important fervice to the colony, by the acquifition of an additional number of free black colonifts, acquainted with the English language, and accuftomed to labour in hot climates. A delegate from a body of blacks in NovaScotia, fuppofed to amount to a few hundreds, who was then in England, reprefented that the perfons who fent him hither had migrated to Nova Scotia at the end of the American war, having received from government certain promifes of lots of land, which had never been ftrictly fulfilled; that both the foil and the climate of Nova Scotia, as well as many other circumftances in their fituation, were complained of by them, and that many of them were defirous of becoming colonists at the fettlement which they underftood was likely to be made at Sierra Leone.

The Directors concurred with the Delegate in applying to his Majesty's Ministers for a paffage for them at the expense of government ment, and having obtained a favourable anfwer to their application, they immediately availed themfelves of the fervices of Lieut. Clarkfon, who very handfomely offered to go to Nova Scotia, in order to make the neceffary propofals, and to fuperintend the collecting and bringing over of fuch free blacks to Sierra Leone, as might be willing to migrate. All the particulars of the terms, on which the Company engaged to receive them into the colony, were contained in a printed declaration, of which the following is a copy:

"The Sierra Leone Company, willing to "receive into their colony fuch free blacks as are able to produce to their agents "Lieut. Clarkfon, of his Majefty's Navy, and Mr. Lawrence Hartfhorn, of Halifax, or either of them, fatisfactory teftimonials of their character, (more particularly as to honefty, fobriety, and induftry) think it proper to notify, in an explicit manner, upon what terms they will receive at Sierra Leone, thofe who bring with them written certificates of approbation, from either of the faid agents, which certificate they are hereby refpectively authorifed to grant or withhold at difcretion.

" It is therefore declared by the Company, that every free black, upon producing fuch a certificate, fhall have a grant of not lefs than twenty acres of land for himfelf, ten for his wife, and five for every child, upon fuch terms, and fubject to fuch charges and " and obligations, with a view to the general " profperity of the Company, as shall here-" after be settled by the Company, in respect " to grants of land to be made by them to " all settlers, whether black or white.

"That for all ftores and provisions, &c. "fupplied from the Company's warehoufes, "the Company shall receive an equitable compensation, according to fixed rules, "extending to blacks and whites indifcriminately.

"That the civil, military, perfonal, and commercial rights and duties of blacks and whites fhall be the fame, and fecured in the fame manner.

"And for the full affurance of perfonal protection from flavery to all fuch black fettlers, the Company have fubjoined a claufe contained in the Act of Parliament, whereby they are incorporated, &c.

The number of Nova Scotians who were willing to embark for Sierra Leone, proved, to the great furprife of the Directors, to be no lefs than 1196. The acceffion of fo large a body of people could not fail to produce many important confequences, and to give, in fome meafure, a new character to the whole undertaking.

The Directors turned their attention in the first place, to the fupply of the immediate wants of these numerous colonists; and they, at the fame time, brought forward a plan for the enlargement of the Company's capital, which was raifed to the fum of £.235,280: a cona confiderable portion of it having been fubferibed after the intelligence from Nova Scotia was received.

The first vessel fent out by the Company from England, reached Sierra Leone in February 1792, and she was soon followed by two other vessels from hence, one of them carrying a considerable number of passengers. There went out in all, by these ships, rather more than 100 white perfons; of whom about 40 were Company's servants, or artificers, at a yearly falary; 10 were settlers; 16 were foldiers; and between 30 and 40 were women and children.

In the fucceeding month the Nova Scotia fleet arrived, confifting of 16 veffels, from which there were landed 1131 blacks, many of them labouring under the effects of a fever first contracted in Halifax, of which 65 had died during the paffage. Mr. Clarkfon, whofe humanity had led him to embark on board the hospital ship, had also narrowly escaped with his life, from a violent attack of the fame diforder; he was extremely weak and ill when he landed at Sierra Leone, and he recovered very flowly.

After two or three weeks delay, arifing from a palaver (or council) of the natives, which however ended favourably for the Company, the fcite on which the first body of blacks fent from hence had originally fettled, fettled, was pitched upon as the most proper fpot for the intended fettlement. The land on which the town was to fland was cleared in a few weeks more, by the united labour of the Nova Scotians; and the feveral ftreets having been first marked out by the furveyor, they then began to erect each for himfelf a fmall temporary hut, using the common materials of the country, except that the flooring was furnished in some cases by deals from hence. The colonists proceeded with the utmost eagerness in this work, for they feared left they fhould be overtaken by the rains, which might be expected to commence in lefs than two months from the time of their beginning to build. The town was named FREETOWN, in confequence of an inftruction fent out to this purpofe.

The Directors, aware of the danger to which it was poffible that many of the fettlers might be exposed through the want of fufficient shelter, during the first rainy season, thought it a point of duty to purchase and fend out the York, a ship of 850 tons, fitted up with a view to their accommodation, which they loaded with various stores, as well as frames of houses and materials for building. They confidered that, besides carrying out a large cargo, she might ferve as a receptacle for those whose houses were unfinissed, or as an hospital for the fick, and might afterwards be converted into a storehouse for the Company. She arrived indeed too late to be of of any advantage to the colony during the chief part of the fickly feafon, having been driven back by a ftorm after leaving England : fhe proved however of very confiderable ufe afterwards, both as a ftorehoufe and floating factory, as well as in facilitating the loading and unloading of other veffels; and fhe was alfo, for fome time, the place of refidence for many fervants of the Company.

The precautions taken by the Directors, and the early as well as liberal fupply of neceffaries fent out by them, unhappily were not effectual in preventing a confiderable mortality during the first rainy feafon. The rains began about the third week in May; many fettlers houfes were not completed, the Company's storehouse was but imperfectly built, and their fervants, efpecially those of the lower order, were very badly accommodated : the foldiers alfo were liable, from various caufes, to be much exposed, and the few fettlers who went from England, were leaft of all prepared to meet the impending difficulties of a rainy feafon. Perhaps the high degree of health which almost univerfally prevailed at the period antecedent to the rains, by creating too much confidence in the goodness of the climate, especially among the Europeans, might occasion some flackness in making the neceffary preparations.

It is obvious from this general view of the flow progrefs of the colony, that no attempt could as yet have been made to furvey and mark mark out the promifed lots of land; the building of a temporary town having hitherto engroffed nearly the whole attention both of Nova Scotians and of the Company's fervants: nor had any fteps, worthy of being mentioned, been as yet taken with a view to commerce; though, through the miftaken advice of the Company's commercial agent, fome goods for trade had been fent out by the very firft fhips.

The Directors think they ought not to conceal from the proprietors, that a confiderable degree of mifunderftanding had prevailed, antecedent to this period, between the Governor and the Council; and that to their inefficiency, during the first three or four most important months, a part at least of the fubfequent calamity is evidently to be traced.

Eight of the principal fervants had been nominated to be members of the council, and all the inferior officers had been enjoined to pay the fame obedience to their orders which they owed to the Court of Directors themfelves. The office of Governor having become vacant at the time when the first ship failed, Mr. Clarkfon, who had given great fatisfaction by his conduct in Nova Scotia, was requested to fill the fituation till a fucceffor should be appointed, and he had the casting vote in council.

The Directors, alarmed by the evident want of order and energy betrayed even by the first accounts, adopted the temporary expedient dient of throwing the whole refponfibility on Mr. Clarkfon, giving him permiffion at the fame time to affume the whole power. Whether the Directors erred in dividing the authority among fo many as eight perfons, or whether the blame belonged more properly to the Governor and Council, it is not perhaps material now to canvas. The Directors acquit the body of acting counfellors of all wilful mifconduct; with the exception indeed of one perfon detained in their employ, but not originally appointed by them, whofe knowledge of the natives and of the country made him appear a perfon of importance at the outfet of the undertaking, but whofe habits of intoxication, idlenefs, and irregularity, as well as want of accuracy in his information, it is neceffary to mention as one chief caufe of the first difficulties of the Colony, and of the first commercial disappointments of the Company. It is partly to be afcribed to the extraordinary neglect of this perfon (whom it was the duty of the Governor and Council to direct and control) that the colony was not fupplied with any fresh provisions before the fickly feafon arrived. The Company's fhips were not employed for this purpose, as was directed to be done; and the original body of inftructions to the Governor and Council, drawn up by the Court of Directors and read to the proprietors, received little or no confideration till long after this period. Confusion in the accounts, in the flores, in the government, in the information mation fent home, and in the operations of every kind prevailed; and this confusion not only tended to aggravate in many ways the diffress of the fickly feason, but it ought, perhaps, to be flated as one principal occasion of the extraordinary mortality.

The Directors by no means make thefe obfervations with any perfonal views, but they think it their duty, when they are flating the material events that have happened, to declare also their own impartial opinion of the caufes which have led to them. And as all the diffreffes and difficulties of the colony were during the first rainy feafon at their height, they think it proper to be very particular in their description both of the antecedent flate of things, and of this calamitous period itfelf. The difference, and indeed the contraft, that has been experienced between the first and fecond rainy feafons, enables them to do this without fear either of greatly difpiriting the proprietors, or difcrediting the undertaking.

The ficknefs was the moft fevere and alarming at the beginning of the rains: about 800 blacks were fuppofed to be laid up at one time, and very few paffed through the whole of this trying feafon without fomeindifpofition. The diforder, which was the fever common to hot climates, while it affected in different degrees the blacks and whites almoft indifcriminately, proved much the moft fatal to the Europeans, and efpecially to thofe living living on fhore; among whom the mortality was, at one time, fuch as to excite reafonable apprehenfions concerning the practicability of the whole undertaking, in the minds of any perfons not well acquainted with the peculiar circumftances of the cafe.

In the height of the fickness, all the medical perfons, with but one exception, were laid up, fo that a few of the chief fervants only could be properly attended. The ftorekeepers, living in a damp ftorehoufe, were fome of the first victims ; increasing difficulty and confusion in the delivery of the flores was the confequence : a retail shop had not yet been fet up, nor had a money-medium been eftablished; the doors of the storehouse were continually crouded, but neither food nor phyfic, nor the other necessaries for the fick, though supplied by the Directors in fufficient quantities, were properly distributed. The fettlers huts, which were very fmall, were also many of them damp, and a few were as yet unfinished: a great depreffion of fpirits at the fame time generally prevailed, which produced a total helplefinefs in the cafe of one or two families from England, and this was one chief aggravation of the diforder.

The Directors will not here anticipate all the more particular information which they will have to give on the head of the colony's health, fince it will be found in its place in a fubfequent part of this report; they will at prefent only mention that almost one one half of the whites living on fhore were carried off during this dreadful feafon, and nearly one tenth of the Nova Scotians.

The colony was just emerging from that flate of diffress into which it had been thrown. when a new event of a perplexing kind called for the attention of the government. A ship arrived from the Isle of * Bulam, having on board a great number of paffengers, many of them extremely fick, who defired to be received into the colony. The Directors of the Sierra Leone Company had previoufly declined accepting propofals to go out as colonists, made to them in England by many of the fame perfons who went to Bulam ; for they had conceived the first fuccefs of their colony effentially to depend on the exclusion of all Europeans; those alone excepted who, being in the regular pay of the Company were entirely fubject to them. They were afraid that even a few men from hence of an improper caft, in the fituation of independent fettlers, might materially pre-judice or endanger the undertaking; that they might corrupt the morals of the colony, refuse due obedience to government, as well as excite a fpirit of general difcontent; and if for any of these causes they should be ex-

* The Isle of Bulam, on which the Bulam Association proposed to make a settlement, is situated near the mouth of the Rio Grande, about two and a half degrees, or about 175 miles north of Sierra Leone. The Bollam, or Bulam Shore, hereafter spoken of, is the shore immediately opposite Sierra Leone. —See Map. Cluded cluded from the fettlement, that they might then only be driven, efpecially if they had left debts in England, to feek a precarious livelihood, by various improper means, among the neighbouring natives, and perhaps eventually to turn to Slave Traders.

The Directors had been determined by these confiderations to forbid for the prefent, with a very few exceptions, the admiffion of Europeans into the colony; they had alfo deemed it neceffary to inquire very flrictly, both into the characters and circumstances of those who went out in their fervice; and they had made it a rule to let no man go to Sierra Leone, who left debts in England undifcharged ; a rule of great use and importance, the principle of which must be given up if the Bulam adventurers, who were a body of men unknown to the Sierra Leone Company, should be received there. The Directors had taken the precaution of informing the Governor and Council very fully of their fentiments, on the whole of this important fubject; and they had directed that every friendly affiftance should be rendered to the Bulam colony; but in cafe it should happen that they should leave Bulam and come to Sierra Leone, that they were not to be allowed permanently to fettle there. The Sierra Leone government, in conformity with these instructions, declined receiving the paffengers from Bulam as refidents into the colony; but after fupplying the fick with a few neceffaries, who were accommodated for a fhort a fhort time on fhore, they furnished them with a veffel to affist in bringing them back to England, as their own ship, the Calypso, was exceedingly crouded.

The Directors have thought it proper to ftate thus fully and explicitly, both the orders fent out and the motives which operated with them on the occasion that has been just fpoken of : they were by no means actuated by narrow views of monopoly and jealoufy of other traders; nor shall they ever fuffer themfelves, as they truft, to be governed by any fuch principles; and they are perfuaded alfo, that they fhall only fecond the views of the proprietors, by giving encouragement and affiftance to any prudent and well regulated schemes of settlement on the coast of Africa. fo far as it can be done without too much expense to themselves, and without committing to any fresh hazard the interests of their own colony.

The chief object that engaged the attention of the government of Sierra Leone after the ficknefs abated, was the diffribution of the lots of land; a work much more arduous than had been expected. It was found impracticable indeed to give at once to each individual his lot of twenty acres; those lands of the Company which are either contiguous to the water fide, or within a reafonable diftance from Freetown, not being fufficient for the purpose. Even the labour of cutting the neceffary paths, and of measuring fo great a tract tract of country, would have been too great to be eafily accomplished in a fingle feason. The Nova Scotians were made fo fenfible of this, that they were willing to accept of four acre lots for the prefent, of which however they now became exceedingly eager to have immediate poffeffion. Both the Directors and the Sierra Leone

Government were earnest to have this important work effected; for they were bound by the spirit of the promises made in Nova Scotia to lofe no time in distributing the land, they were urged alfo by the continual importunities of the colonists, and they were at the fame time influenced by pecuniary confiderations to attempt the most speedy accomplishment of the bufinefs; fince each colonist either continued to draw from the public ftores a gratuitous allowance of provisions, until his lot of ground was given him, or elfe was employed in working under the Company, when perhaps there was no great occafion for his fervices.

The orders fent out by the Directors on the fubject of provisions, extended only to an allowance for a term that was specified, and applied equally to the Nova Scotians, to the Company's fervants, and to the few colonifts from hence. The government were inftructed to give to all these universally three months full allowance, equal to the common army allowance, and three months half allowance; but they, conceiving that the motives tives which fuggefted the giving of this gratuity, as well as the equity and even the neceffity of the cafe, called for fome extension of it, thought proper to continue giving it to all those colonists who were kept out of poffeffion of their four acre lots of land, and who were not engaged in the Company's employ. The Directors, though fensible of the great charge to which they were fubjecting the Company, on taking all circumstances into their confideration, could not refuse their acquiescence in these measures of the government.

The importance of proceeding with as little delay as poffible in the diffribution of the lands was fo ftrongly felt in the colony, that the Company's Surveyor of buildings (who took on him the duty of the Surveyor of lands, the latter having returned on account of ill health to England) attempted with the greateft fpirit to begin his operations, together with a party of Nova Scotians, even before the rains were over; but he was repeatedly ftopped by ficknefs. Nearly the whole fucceeding dry feafon was confumed before the complete furvey and diffribution of the four acre lots were finished, though very great and conftant exertions were made, and a large party of men were employed in the work.

The Directors feel much regret at having to mention to the Proprietors, that the land adjoining to the fettlement has proved by no means means fo good as every account received before the inftitution of the Company had led them to expect. The defcription given of it in the work of Lieutenant Matthews, to which they had in fome measure trufted, is far more favourable than further observation of that particular part of the country would have justified. The Directors state this to be a disappointment of the most ferious kind, to which may be afcribed many of the difficulties, and a great part of the unexpected charges, that have attended the eftablifhment of the colony. The fcite of Freetown is unqueftionably the beft that can be found, in respect of the falubrity of the air, the goodness of the water, and the convenience of the landing-place; it can hardly fail therefore to continue the chief place of trade, though other parts at a moderate diftance, particularly those on the opposite fide of the river, will be found the most favourable to cultivation. Confiderable pains and expense have been beftowed on the improvement of the landing-place; feveral other public works of the first importance, fuch as the crecting of a church, hofpital, warehouses, and other buildings (of which the frames were fent from hence), the fencing and cultivating of a garden of experiment, and the execution of fome measures for the defence of the colony, have also constantly occupied a confiderable number of the Nova Scotia blacks, and have caufed a very large expense.

expense. The Directors have the fatisfaction of observing, that no fort has been thought neceffary.

As the fecond dry feafon advanced, the colony appears to have been improving in all refpects. An alteration was made in the mode of government, a new council of three perfons having been determined on by the Court of Directors inflead of a council of eight; and two gentlemen of confiderable experience *, the one ufed to a new colony, the other to a tropical climate, were the counfellors fent out.

Regular minutes of council were kept from this period, and alfo a journal of every material transaction in the colony, copies of which were fent to England from time to time. Periodical reports of the progress of each principal fervant of the Company, in his particular department, were alfo made to the government, and transmitted, together with their remarks thereon, to the Directors; an indent was fent home of all the European articles likely to be confumed annually by the colonists; a more correct mode of correfponding was entered upon; and the original instructions of the Court, as well as various parts of their fubfequent letters, were now, for the first time, fully answered.

* Mr. Dawes and Mr. Macaulay.

At the fame æra when this improvement took place in refpect to the intelligence fent to England, the internal order of the colony appears to have advanced materially. New plans were formed for the maintenance of the police and the administration of justice; more general harmony began to prevail alfo among the Company's fervants; fome pains were taken to bring up and fettle properly the Company's accounts which had fallen into great confusion, and more regularity of every kind was introduced : at the fame time the public works gradually advanced, a plan was formed for rebuilding the town on a more extensive fcale; and the natives (who continued perfectly friendly and often flocked to the fettlement) appeared to view the improving flate of Sierra Leone with increasing fatisfaction,

The breaking out of the war indeed at this time damped the hopes, and in fome meafure interrupted the progrefs, of the rifing colony: the embargo laid on fhipping in England, at the beginning of it, detained fome of the Company's veffels at a very inconvenient period; the prohibition to fend out provisions, except in fhips armed, as well as failing with convoy, proved alfo highly detrimental to the fettlement : great murmurs were excited by the temporary want of flour, which was the confequence, and the dread of not being able to get from the neighbourhood a fufficient quantity of rice (the fubflitute for bread to which 3 B which the Directors trufted) occasioned very ferious uneafinefs to the government. The additional price that was laid on the Company's goods, in confequence of the war, aggravated the discontent of the colonists; and a part of the proposed plan for rebuilding the town was about this time vehemently objected to by the Nova Scotians, they refufing to admit of a refervation of ground near the fhore, which the Government thought proper to make for the fake of public convenience : this last dispute was settled, after some degree of conceffion on the part of the company. The fecret caufe, however, to which the Directors have been informed that much of the diffatisfaction prevailing at this period may be traced, was the unbecoming conduct of one of the Company's fervants, who, on Mr. Clark-fon's leaving the colony, took occafion to prejudice a confiderable party of labourers working under him, against the fucceeding government. This body of men made an attempt to raife the price of labour in the colony, which was already very high, by combining to leave their work; but not finding the government inclined to yield in any mea-fure to their wifhes, they returned, after a week's interval, to their employments, and the Company's fervant who was iuppofed to have fown the feeds of this diffention, and who had alfo manifested the greatest difrespect towards the government, having come to England, was difinified from the fervice.

For

For the fake of fatisfying the minds of the colonifts, and fecuring the peace of the fettlement, it was agreed that two delegates, to be chofen by the whole body of Nova Scotians, fhould be fent to England to lay their complaints before the Court of Directors. This measure appears to have immediately produced the good effect expected from it.

Many circumftances happened during the courfe of this fecond feafon, which clearly demonstrated the practicability of introducing cultivation, trade, and civilization into Africa, although the prevalence of the Slave Trade, and the counteracting influence of the perfons engaged in it almost every where impeded, more or lefs, the views of the Company. One of the Members of Council, accompanied by another fervant of the Company, made a voyage to the Island of Bananas, the Camarancas River, and the Plaintain Island, all lying to the fouth of Sierra Leone, converfed with fome of the chiefs, and happily removed, in a great meafure, the prejudices which they had imbibed against the Company, whose defigns had been reprefented to them as directly hoftile to their intereft. As much information on the general fubject of Civilization will be given in detail hereafter, no more than the brief mention of the fuccess of the Company's endeavours to interest the chiefs in their favour, feems in this place neceffary.

The

The advancing flate of a regular plantation of the Company, worked by native labourers, on the fide of the river oppofite to Freetown, is another fubject neceffary to be noticed here, in order to give a just idea of the progress of the Colony; but this also, as well as the benefits derived from the labours of the Company's botanist, will be more particularly spoken of under the head of Cultivation.

. The Directors are forry to mention, that the exertions of their mineralogist, who was promifing to himfelf great fuccefs in his refearches, were fuddenly terminated by an unhappy accident which brought on his death. His impatience to purfue the objects for the fake of which he went out, led him, contrary to the opinion of the Governor and Council, to attempt an incursion into the interior country before the rains were over : he was furnished with goods to the amount of f_{200} or \pounds 300, with which he proposed to trade as well as to purchafe neceffaries during his journey, and he was attended when he fet off by one or two free blacks. It appears that he was after a fhort time plundered of his goods, in a part of the country where fome danger of this fort might have been apprehended. When he got back to Sierra Leone, he was too weak and exhausted by a fever, which he had contracted during his expedition, to give any diffinct account of his misfortunes, or of the hardships he had suffered on his return, and he died a few days after. A number

A number of other circumftances very interefting to the colony, and to the feelings of the Directors, have happened from time to time, which, if they were all detailed, would extend this report to a very confiderable length: the recital of them would tend to fhew the variety of unexpected difficulties, accidents, and dangers to which a new colony is fubject, and more fully to explain the caufes of that very large expenditure which the Directors will have to ftate: it would alfo ferve to exhibit the growing ftrength of the colony; and to prove that it has now become much more able to furmount any common accident, than it had been during its earlier infancy.

One event not yet noticed deferves to be particularized; that of the arrival at Sierra Leone of the late King Naimbanna's fon, who had come to England for education, and his death within two days after. His character and improvement in learning will make an interefting article, when the particular point of the Civilization of Africa is confidered. His father, who was king or chief of Sierra Leone, died a few months after the inftitution of the colony, to which he fhewed himfelf on all occafions the firmeft friend, and the news of his decease occasioned his fon's return. It is not at all probable, that if the fon had lived he would have been elected King by the chiefs with whom the choice lies; for they feem disposed in this instance.

instance, as has been the custom in other cafes, to prefer fome perfon of a more advanced age to all the young relations of the deceased. But though the Directors had no expectation that the fon would fucceed to the fituation of his father, yet there were circumftances which led them to hope that he would not fail to render most important fervices to the Company on his return to his native country; and they therefore with to pay to his memory the just tribute of obferving, that they confider the death of fo fincere a friend to the Sierra Leone Company, and of fo enlightened an African, as one of the calamities with which they have been vifited, and as one of the inftances in which Providence has been pleafed to difappoint the immediate hopes and expectations of the infant colony. A fufpicion arofe amongst his countrymen, in confequence of the groundlefs fuggestion of a black, that he had been poifoned by a fervant of the Company on thip board, and a long palaver was held upon the fubject ; by which, though it ended favourably, fome alarm was excited in the fettlement, and fome very unreafonable expenses, through the neceffity of entertaining a great concourfe of natives, were incurred.

The Directors in giving this hiftorical account of the colony, which they have now brought down to the beginning of the fecond rainy feafon, have not fpoken of the Trade of of the Company, that being a fubject which will be better treated of by itfelf. It muft be obvious, from the view of things which has been given, that the eftablifhment of the colony, involving as it has done the happinefs of above a thousand perfons, and implicating alfo in a great measure the future commercial interests of the Company, has hitherto been the chief object. Confiderable exertions however were made during the fecond dry feason in the way of trade, the Governor and Council having followed up the orders fent out on this fubject with great fpirit.

But here the Directors have to mention another calamity very lately announced to them, which is likely to produce fome degree of inconvenience to the colony, as well as interruption to the trade; but which is chiefly to be lamented on account of the pecuniary loss attending it, namely, the destruction of the Company's ftore-fhip the York, with a confiderable quantity of goods in her, by fire. These confisted partly of the cargo of the ship Harpy, which had lately arrived from England, and partly of African produce, va-lued at about $\pounds 4000$, which had been col-lected by the Company's fmall veffels up and down the coaft, and was on the point of being fent to England. The fire is stated to have happened in the day time, but to have fpread nevertheless with great rapidity, having caught the awning over the deck: fome attempts were made to induce both the natives and fettlers fettlers to affift in extinguishing it, but they all refufed to approach the veffel, conceiving that a large quantity of gunpowder was on board, nor would they credit any affurances to the contrary. The whole lofs fuftained by the Company on this occasion, is calculated by the Governor and Council at above f. 15,000. No infurance had been made either on the veffel or the goods in her, which indeed it would not have been very practicable to effect, to any confiderable extent, under all the circumftances of the cafe. The fame veffel which brought home the account of the fire, brought also the first information both of the collection of this African produce, and of the arrival at Sierra Leone of the goods which were burnt.

The Directors have the fatisfaction of obferving to the Court, that the fame difpatches which conveyed this unhappy intelligence, brought alfo very favourable accounts of the colony, particularly in refpect to healthinefs, up to the end of the fecond rainy feafon. In the period corresponding to that which had carried off, in the preceding year, one tenth of the blacks and nearly one half of the whites, no particular mortality had happened; and yet the laft feafon is faid to have been more unfavourable than ufual, the rains having been heavy, and the mortality in the neighbouring factories uncommonly great. It is obfervable alfo, that the refidents on fhore are are found now to have their health much better than those on ship-board, the experience of the second year being in this respect the reverse of the experience of the first: even the mortality on ship-board, however, appears in the second year to have decreased. On the whole therefore the Directors trust, that fince the colony has shood its ground even during the worst part of a very unhealthy year, it may now fairly be considered as in a state of progressive improvement.

Having thus brought the Hiftory of the fettlement down to the period of Chriftmas 1793, the Directors will ftate in the next place fome circumftances which have taken place in England, before they proceed to give an account of the fums which have been expended, and of the prefent ftate of the Company's capital.

It has been already mentioned that two delegates, chofen by the body of Nova Scotians, were permitted by the Governor and council to go to England, in order to lay the various complaints of their conflituents before the Court of Directors. They prefented a petition purporting to be the fenfe of the whole body, couched in ftrong terms, which however the Directors have fome reafon to think were not thoroughly approved by a great part of the Nova Scotians : the petition had never been fhewn to the Governor and Council. The points complained of were, chiefly, the the high price of goods at the Company's florehoufe; the inadequate wages paid to them by the Company for their labour; the nonfulfilment of certain promifes faid to have been made to them by Mr. Clarkfon; and a variety of trifling inftances of fuppofed mifconduct in the fucceeding Governor.

The Court of Directors, after fully confidering the petition, and hearing the evidence of the delegates thereupon, came to the following refolution, which was communicated to them:

" Refolved, 199 off of nwoh

"That the Court confider the petition of the Nova Scotians as hafty, and the facts therein mentioned as chiefly founded on miftake and mifinformation.

"That it appears to have been drawn up and agreed to, at a time when the unfortunate delay of the Company's fhips, through the breaking out of the war, had occafioned fome temporary diffrefs and diffatisfaction, which fome defigning perfon or perfons then in the colony may have contributed to increafe.

" The Court are of opinion therefore, that " through the arrival of the large fupplies " lately fent from hence, and the continued " care and attention of the Governor and " Council to the interefts of the colony, every " material caufe of diffatisfaction will have " ceafed before the arrival of thefe refolutions at " at Sierra Leone. As it is undoubtededly " the interests of the colonists, fo the Di-" rectors truft it will also be their general " wifh, to promote harmony and to difcoun-" tenance all factious attempts to difcredit " the Government of Sierra Leone; fince on " their due obedience to government, under " the bleffing of Providence, their happinefs, " their liberty, and perhaps their very lives, " depend. It is on this ground that the " Directors earneftly exhort the general body " of Nova Scotians, both as freemen and " as Chriftians, to difcourage all unreafon-" able difcontent, to pay refpect and obe-" dience to the government : and if, contrary " to the Directors expectations, any actual " grievances fhould exift at the time of re-"ceiving this refolution, the Court of Di-" rectors recommend it to the Nova Scotians " temperately to reprefent the cafe to the "Governor and Council. But if they fhould " hereafter conceive it to be neceffary to " prefer their complaints hither, that they " will, in fuch cafe, previoufly acquaint the " Governor and Council with the purport of " them; in order that the Court may receive " their fentiments thereupon, and may thus " have the whole of the fubject at once be-" fore them."

The delegates having been made acquainted with the above refolution, a very hafty remonftrance from them was the confequence, in which they betrayed the fame kind of vehemence hemence and difrespect to the Court of Directors, which had occasionally been shewn to the government at Sierra Leone. * After about two months further detention in England, during which it was thought proper to make them a small allowance for their subfistence, and after some further interviews with the Directors, they set fail, having apparently become perfectly well disposed to the Company.

The Proprietors must probably have been led to reflect in the courfe of the preceding Hiftory, and especially in confequence of the last mentioned circumstances, how important as well as difficult a part of the Directors duty it has been, to give tolerable fatisfaction to the Nova Scotians on the one hand, and to avoid every profuse and improper application of the Company's funds on the other. And indeed the Directors have fo often had occafion to notice to the Court the trouble and expense which the Nova Scotians have occafioned, that fome doubt may probably have been excited, concerning the general expediency of the meafure of introducing them into the colony. A few further observations feem therefore neceffary to be added, in order to leave a just impression both of the advantages and difadvantages which have refulted from the migration of this body of men to Sierra Leone.

It must be admitted that the charge which they have brought on the Company has been extremely great; the grant of provisions, which was made on the principle already mentioned, may be estimated at about twenty thousand pounds; the Company's establishment has in almost every part of it been unavoidably enlarged in proportion to the number of colonifts; the Company's fhips have been neceffarily employed in a great measure for their use; and an expense has likewife been incurred in the diffribution of the lands allotted to them ; fome lofs has alfo been fuftained by taking more of them into the Company's employ, than were always wanted for the public fervice, and by allowing them at the fame time a rate of wages which, though complained of in feveral of their memorials to the government, was at leaft twice as high as that given to the natives, who neverthelefs are nearly equal to the Nova Scotians in the article of common labour; though it must be confeffed that the natives are totally incapable of fome very neceffary branches of work, with which the Nova Scotians are tolerably well acquainted.

Thefe are the principal charges to which the Company has been fubjected by the acceffion of this body of colonifts: they are charges of which for the most part it was, from the nature of them, impossible to make any just estimate before-hand, and the extent of which, on account of the unexpected number that embarked, as well as the various delays and difappointments that happened at Sierra Leone, was certainly not forefeen. But it should be remembered, that when the Directors invited these fettlers to Sierra Leone they acted neceffarily on probabilities; they were aware that various circumftances very difficult to be calculated might arife, but a prompt decifion on their part was indifpenfible. They thought it prudent, on the whole to make the promifes in the declaration that has been read to the Court, and the Nova Scotians have croffed the feas on the faith of having them fulfilled. The Directors however fairly avow, that, befides a literal compliance with the ftipulations made in Nova Scotia, they confider themfelves alfo to be under a moral obligation not to leave the colonifts to experience any extremities, which the Company can relieve, until it shall be poffible for them to fupport themfelves by their lands, or by fome other means : and on this ground it is that they have never yet hefitated to fend out to the fettlement whatfoever goods they had reafon to believe were frictly neceffary for its confumption; leaving it to the diferetion of the Governor and Council to furnish such articles, as they thought fit to the colonifts on credit.

If

If those expectations which the Directors formed, and which they think they had good reafon to form at the time when they invited over the Nova Scotians, had been fulfilled; if the land round Freetown had been as fruitful as it was defcribed; and the Nova Scotians had proved as manageable and as industrious as they were reprefented, and as they appeared for fome fpace of time to be; the charges would then unqueftionably have been lefs, and the advantages on the other hand would have been much greater, than they have proved: nor can any doubt be entertained that the transplanting of this body of men to Sierra Leone would, in that cafe, have been a meafure in a high degree beneficial both to themfelves, to the Company, and to Africa.

But even under all the difficulties and difappointments which have arifen, the advantages that have refulted from their migration have been many and important; though they have been advantages that have accrued rather to Africa and to the colonifts themfelves, than to the Proprietors.

A more rapid improvement in the healthinefs of the fettlement, through the more enlarged fize of the town, and the more extended cultivation of the foil, a greater facility in inducing valuable men to go out on account of the greater importance of the undertaking, a more confiderable extension of the Company's reputation and influence in Africa, and a quicker progrefs in civilization, but, above above all, a far greater fecurity hereby obtained againft any attack that might be dreaded either from the natives or any other enemy all thefe are advantages which evidently belong to an undertaking on a larger, rather than to one on a fmaller, fcale; and if therefore there be no danger, left the funds which may properly be defined to the eftablifhment of the colony fhould be exhaufted before it has arrived at maturity, it can hardly be denied that fo powerful a body of colonifts muft afford a far better profpect of fucceeding in the great objects of the inftitution.

The Directors in proceeding to lay before the Court an account of the Expenses which have been incurred, and a general flate of the Company's finances, have only further to premife, that in difcharging their important truft, they have endeavoured to practife that species of æconomy which is connected both with found policy and with fubftantial justice. They have had a duty to fulfil to three defcriptions of perfons: to the Proprietors in the first place, with whose money they have been entrusted; to their fervants at home and abroad, who ought to be fairly requited according to the nature of their fervices; and they have alfo been under that obligation of duty to the colonifts which has been already spoken of. To reconcile these different. different, for they will not call them contending, claims, has been the great object of the Directors.

They will ftate first the Expenses incurred in eftablishing the colony, of which, though the total can hardly fail to be tolerably correct, yet many particulars, in consequence of the causes already stated, are taken merely from estimate.

THE Directors have thus ftated, as correctly as they are able, the whole expenditure that has taken place, and the fituation of the funds of the Company; but they cannot difmifs this fubject without obferving, that they confider the expenses of which they have been giving the account as extremely great, and as very far exceeding every idea which the Proprietors can be fuppofed originally to have formed of their probable extent. The extraordinary magnitude of them has been owing to a variety of unforefeen circumstances, which, though already touched upon in the preceding narrative, the Directors will fhortly recapitulate. They appear principally to be the following:

First, the inefficiency of the original body of counfellors, who gave occasion to great irregularity in the outset of the colony, and it is to be feared also, to much prodigality and waste.

Secondly, the fickness and mortality of the first rainy feason, which not only fuspended for a time almost all the industry of the colony, but likewise tended to aggravate, in various ways, several chief heads of expense.

Thirdly, the unproductiveness of the land adjoining the town, which by diminishing the means of present support to the colonist, has necessarily thrown an increased weight of expense upon the Company.

Fourthly, the burning of the York, a miffortune fortune of the first magnitude, if confidered in a pecuniary light.

Fifthly : one further circumstance remains to be mentioned, namely, the breaking out of the war; an event, which befides putting the Company to the expense of furnishing additional protection to the fettlement, has raifed the coft of the European articles carried thither to a confiderable degree; which has therefore increased the expense of living at Sierra Leone, has tended to prevent the decreafe that might have been looked for in the price of labour, and has thus enhanced the charge of profecuting those public works in which the Company, at a more early period, thought proper to engage. The Directors might alfo notice a number of other difadvantages to which the Company has been fubjected by the war; fuch as the long detention which it has occasioned to fome of their veffels, and the difficulty and expense of procuring and maintaining failors: the uncertainty which the war has caufed in the transmission of intelligence, may also be ftated both as a pecuniary difadvantage and a very material inconvenience.

Having thus enumerated the principal unforefeen caufes whereby the charges of eftablishing the colony have been aggravated, the Directors wish to notice two particular heads of expense in the preceding account, which have exceeded their expectation very confiderably confiderably indeed : they allude to the charge of \pounds 20,000 for provisions, and that of \pounds 17,840 for maintenance of fuch part of the Company's fhipping, as has been applied to the protection and use of the colony.

The Directors have the fatisfaction of obferving, that of these two chief heads of charge, the former has now entirely, and the latter has very nearly, ceafed; and they with to inform the General Court, that they are using their best endeavours to put a period in like manner to all expenses, except those which either fall under the head of Trade, and Cultivation on the Company's own account, or belong to the annual eftablishment. They trust indeed that the reduction of expenfes which they have been aiming at, is now nearly effected; and that while the chief difficulties of the colony are fubfiding on the one hand, the Company's burthen in fupporting it is ceafing alfo on the other.

On the whole, when the Directors review what is paft, they are ready to own that they fee fome things, which, if poffeffed of more experience, they might have conducted in a more frugal or advantageous manner; they however perceive many of the untoward circumftances which have arifen, to have been fuch as human forefight could not have anticipated, nor human wifdom have controlled: they they can also look back upon many escapes and deliverances which the colony has experienced, not through any care or management of those whom the Proprietors have appointed to fuperintend it, but through that help of Providence alone, which has hitherto protected it .- When they look forward, they are led, from their own past experience, to expect fome further difficulties and dangers, not now poffible to be diffinctly spoken of or provided against: and they are aware also that the beginning of colonization has been in general arduous, hazardous, and expensive; far more fo than the minds of those who first engaged in fuch undertakings have been difposed to believe. The Directors therefore by no means allow themfelves to indulge any expectations of rapid and uninterrupted fuccefs, yet they are induced, by the gradual advances towards maturity which the colony has already made in the midst of many difficulties, to entertain an increasing hope of its establishment and future profperity; and they feel for their own part very fufficient encouragement fleadily and cheerfully to perfevere. They are confcious however, that after all the attention due to fuch an undertaking has been given to it, they must leave the event to the Supreme Disposal of Him, who can either disappoint utterly, if he pleafes, the most favourite schemes of men; can obstruct and fuspend for a while their accomplishment; or can crown them, if he fees fees fit, with the most fignal and unexpected fuccefs.

They will proceed now to fpeak of the feveral heads of which they gave notice that they fhould treat particularly, in the introduction to this Report.

THE Directors have already mentioned the caufes to which they are perfuaded that the mortality in the first rainy feason at Sierra Leone ought to be ascribed; but their observations on this subject will be very much illustrated and confirmed by the statement of fome particulars respecting it.

The upper fervants of the Company who went out in the first year, were twenty-fix in number; these confisted of eight counfellors, a chaplain, several medical persons, a secretary, accountant, and some others, who were all well accommodated : no more than four of this class in that year died, and of these four deaths only two can properly be charged to the climate.

Of lower fervants, fuch as clerks in the ftore-houfe, overfeers, a gardener, baker, and feveral artificers, there went out fifty-nine perfons, their families being included, of whom no lefs than twenty-nine died; many of thefe were often exposed to the rains, and feveral of them were intemperate; they were alfo in general uncomfortably lodged, and, in confequence of the fickness prevailing among the furgeons, they could have but a fmall fhare of the medical attendance.

Of fettlers there went out, including their families, families, eighteen, of whom no lefs than thirteen died; fome of thefe were much addicted to liquor, and their fituation was in every refpect worfe than that of the last mentioned class.

Of foldiers there went out fixteen, who were almost universally intemperate: when it is also confidered how they must have been circumstanced in other respects, it cannot excite much furprise that so many as eleven of these should have died.

In all there went out in the first year, one hundred and nineteen white perfons, of whom fifty-feven died.

In the fecond year, all the foldiers and fettlers, as well as the families of the lower whites, having either died or returned to England, the whites refident in the colony were reduced to about forty, of whom only four or five have died.

The Directors do not include in this account any deaths among the officers and crews of the Company's fhips, becaufe, as they were not always flationed at Sierra Leone, the queftion of the healthinefs or unhealthinefs of the colony is not much affected by the degree of mortality among them; nor has any complete return on this fubject as yet reached England. The Directors are led to judge however, from the information which has been received from the greater part of their fhips, that between twenty and thirty white failors may have died on board of all their veffels in the the fpace of two years: the whole number of failors in their fervice has feldom exceeded one hundred and forty, or one hundred and fifty, and the mortality may perhaps therefore be fairly computed at about feven or eight per cent. per annum.*

The mortality among the Nova Scotians has been as follows. The number of those that landed in the year 1792 was eleven hundred and thirty-one, many of them being very ill through the remains of a fever which appears to have been fatal to a few of their original body in Nova Scotia, and to have carried off fixty-five of them during the paffage : of thefe eleven hundred and thirty-one perfons thus landed, forty died within a few weeks after they reached Sierra Leone, evidently in confequence of the fame fever : the whole body then became extremely healthy, but when the rainy feafon was fet in, an almost universal sickness prevailed, of which ninety-eight Nova Scotians died, which was nearly one-tenth of their whole number.

In the fecond rainy feafon, although fome return of ficknefs has been experienced, yet

* It appears from the evidence of the fubftance of the mufter rolls from Liverpool and Briftol, given in to his Majefty's privy counfel, and inferted in their lordfhip's printed report, that the mortality among the failors during one voyage in the Slave Trade, is about reventy-one per cent. eight hundred and fifty-eight failors having died out of four thousand and eighty, who formed the crews of one hundred and twelve thips.

the deaths among the Nova Scotians have been very few indeed. The account which the Directors have received does not extend to the whole year, but it appears that not more than five of them have died during three of the most unhealthy months.

The following is an extract from a report of the Company's phyfician, written in the most unfavourable period of the last rainy feafon, being dated the 14th of October, 1793.

" Although the degree of ficknefs fince " the commencement of the prefent year has " been upon the whole comparatively fmall, " and the lofs fuftained by deaths triffing, yet " those months which have elapfed fince the " beginning of the rains have proved more " fickly than all the preceding. The Nova " Scotians have experienced during the rains " a confiderable share of fickness, but in .. general the complaints were trifling. They 66 appear now to be fo well accuftomed to " the climate, that there is little reafon to " apprehend any great mortality among them. " There are but few who ftill fuffer from the " effects of last year's fickness, or whose " health is precarious. Few places perhaps " in England, of the fame fize, can fhew a " greater number of fine healthy looking " children than are daily to be feen in our " fchools; the heat of the climate appears to " have little effect upon them .- During this " period fevers have been pretty frequent " among the whites; I have every reafon " to " to hope the fick lift is on the decreafe, and " I flatter myfelf they will all be reftored " to health. One very unfavourable circum-" ftance has attended our fick this year, the " want of flour; it being ferioufly felt by " those in health, much more fo by the fick."

The fubfequent difpatches of the 26th December, 1793, give a much more favourable account of the health of the colony at that time, and mention the mortality of that whole year to have been as already flated to the Court.

The Directors think it proper here to add a remark that chiefly regards themfelves, concerning that vaft mortality among the whites which happened in the firft year. The Proprietors muft have obferved that the greateft proportion of deaths was among the fettlers, the foldiers, the lower fervants, and artificers. It affords the Directors no fmall fatisfaction to reflect, that inftead of urging any of thefe to adventure out, they refufed to engage many perfons of each of thefe three defcriptions, whom they were earneftly folicited to fend, and were with difficulty prevailed on to carry out thofe who went.

The unwillingnefs of the Directors to take out that clafs among whom the mortality was the greateft, namely, the European fettlers, gave umbrage to feveral perfons who were very eager to become African colonifts, and in D 2 part part perhaps gave occasion to the inflitution of the Bulam Company.

Their indifpolition to enlarge the number of foldiers, among whom, next to the fettlers, the mortality was the greateft, occafioned the refignation of one or two of their chief fervants, and at the fame time drew a ftrong remonftrance from feveral gentlemen, who were purpofing to adventure out. The Directors were alfo fo much aware of the various evils which might refult from the maintenance even of their fmall military eftablifhment, that they wrote to recall all the foldiers as foon as the peaceablenefs of the natives was afcertained, but the order arrived too late.

They were fo fenfible alfo of the danger to which the artificers and their families, who formed a material part of the third clafs, were exposed, (most of whom through an accident at fea were likely not to arrive till the eve of the rainy feason) that they offered to difcharge a great part of them in England, not only indemnifying them for their loss of time, but adding also fome gratuity; a few accepted the offer, but a great part, including almost all those who had families, were bent on the profecution of the voyage.

The Directors have mentioned these minute circumstances, for the fake of letting it appear that they have been far from eager, on their part, in preffing those to go to Sierra Leone who have run the greatest risk of their lives in adventuring thither, and for the fake of of pointing out alfo the extreme danger to which those perfons are exposed on their arrival in a tropical climate, who are either unprovided with the means of comfortable accommodation and fublistence, or who are likely to fall into any habits of intemperance; for the above detail will shew that these are the two principal causes to which the extraordinary mortality is evidently to be traced.

The Directors having thus endeavoured to give an exact and impartial account of those circumftances and events in the colony which relate to the fubject of Health, are defirous of leaving its character in this refpect to reft on the fimple evidence of the abovementioned facts; they will only add, that they are not aware of any reafons why the climate of Sierra Leone fhould prove eventually inferior to that of many fettlements between the tropics, in different quarters of the world, of which the healthinefs is now undifputed; for fome of these have been much more unfavourable to the health of the first fettlers than Sierra Leone has yet proved : it feems therefore very reafonable to expect, that in proportion as cultivation advances, and all the accommodations of life improve, the fame gradual amendment will take place in the healthinefs of this colony, which has been experienced in other cafes.

TRADE.

TRADE.

IN fpeaking of the Trade of the Company, the Directors have rather to mention the orders given and the fteps taken, with a view to its inftitution, than to report much actual progrefs.

They fent out a moderate affortment of goods for trade by the very first ships, but though this was done in confequence of the advice of the commercial agent himfelf, who took charge of them and who was well acquainted with the coaft, yet no effort to difpofe of them was made during his continuance in their fervice. The chief part of thefe articles confequently remained on fhip-board during the rains; even many of those intended for immediate use in the colony were not delivered out of the veffels till after this period, and it is to be feared, that through the misconduct of this person, as well as the inefficiency of the Council and the confequent confusion in the colony which has been ftated, while many individuals were lofing their lives on the one hand, no fmall part of the Company's property was diffipated on the other.

The irregularity that prevailed in the commercial department, was much aggravated by the illnefs of almost all the perfons employed in in it. The fickness of the chief ftorekeeper was fuch that he was obliged to return to England; the chief accountant died; the chief commercial agent, who has been already fpoken of, died alfo, without having rendered up any regular accounts; feveral inferior ftorekeepers, as has been mentioned under the preceding head, fell victims to the fevere duty which the difficulties of this period imposed on them; and the perfons who, through the necessity of the cafe, were appointed on the fpot to fill the vacancies, were little ufed to book-keeping; one perfon alone remained (the prefent book-keeper) who was properly acquainted with mercantile bufinefs.

Thus it has happened, that the Directors, who thought they had done every thing that depended on them to fecure punctuality in accounts, from the very inftitution of the colony, have found themfelves entirely deprived of the proper means of examining into the expenditure and application of all the first cargoes; and they are forry to add, that although one of the Members of Council applied himfelf, for a confiderable time, to the eftablishment of a proper fystem of bookkeeping, yet his efforts alfo have been rendered abortive through the burning of the York, whereby all the most material books of the colony were destroyed.

The Court will not wonder that the Directors were flow in fending out articles for trade trade at a time when fo much confusion was known to prevail in the colony, and when the commercial fervants, who had died or returned to England, were not yet replaced. The Company's prefent commercial agent however carried out a large affortment fuited to the African market, a great part of which was immediately distributed on board the Company's fmall veffels, which went with them down the coast; the remainder, as has been flated, were unfortunately destroyed on board the York.

In order to give a more complete idea of the commercial plans of the Directors, it may be proper here to mention the number of veffels of every kind belonging to the Company, and the fervices in which they are employed. They have one fhip, the Harpy, of 380 tons burthen; another, the Amy, of 200 tons; and ten veffels of 35 to 120 tons. The York, of 850 tons, having been deftroyed, one of the two larger fhips is for a time likely to be used in her ftead as a ftore fhip, while the other of them may carry goods to and from Sierra Leone; all the fmaller veffels being chiefly engaged in collecting produce on the African coaft, which they are ordered to convey to the colony as the place of deposit.

The Court, in the outfet of their undertaking, were led from various caufes to purchafe rather than to charter the veffels which carried ried out goods for Sierra Leone: but the vaft expense which has been found to attend their larger ships, has difinclined them from making any further purchases of this fort.

It should be observed, that the chief part of those heavy expenses which have been hitherto incurred in the maintenance of the fhipping, and which have been much enhanced by the war, though mentioned under this head, have been stated in the account as a charge on the Eftablishment of the colony, and not on the Trade of the Company. The Directors however have the fatisfaction of knowing, that every one of their finaller veffels has been for fome time employed in trading expeditions, and that of their two large ships, one is now engaged in trade, and the other is made use of at Sierra Leone both as a receptacle for goods and a protection to the colony. and a mand ad

The Governor and Council have thought proper, as a fubfidiary means of fecuring a confiderable quantity of produce, to eftablifh a few fmall factories, chiefly in the neighbouring rivers, which has been done at a trifling expense. The French flave factory at Gambia, which commanded one branch of the river Sierra Leone, being fituated a few miles above Freetown, has recently been relinquished. Other openings of various kinds have arifen, the particulars of which the Directors will not be expected to detail; and though no more than a fmall quantity of African produce, produce, amounting to a few thousand pounds, has, for the reasons already mentioned, as yet reached England; yet in no respect do the Governor and Council state the prospects of the Company to have more confiderably improved, than in the openings in the way of Trade which have appeared in the last year; and especially in the latter part of it, when the general declension of the African commerce, through the failure of mercantile credit in England, was very observable on the coast.

The Directors must here remark, however, that they look forward to the period of the abolition of the Slave Trade, as the great æra when a confiderable commerce in African produce may be expected to commence. When the Africans, who have been long habituated to European articles, shall find that nothing will be taken in return but the produce of their land and labour, then this produce must unquestionably increase. They already fhew a difposition to till the foil, if adequate encouragement be given them, as the facts which will be cited under the head of Cultivation will fufficiently evince : and as foon as the Slave Trade shall fail them, there is therefore the ftrongeft reafon to hope that cultivation will immediately proceed; and it is not unnatural to fuppofe that those articles may be raifed, and those plans of industry adopted, of which the banks of the river Sierra Leone will have fet the example.

The

The Directors are not without hope that if any meafure should be taken by the British parliament, even for the limitation of the Slave Trade, it may have fome falutary effect in promoting African industry, increasing the produce to be collected, and thus ferving the Company. As yet they labour under difadvantages, which they truft will not always be impofed on those who refuse to unite a traffic in their fellow creatures with a trade in natural produce: they also willingly fuffer fome prefent lofs by furnishing articles rather fuperior in quality, and fomewhat different in kind, from those commonly fent to Africa; and in many refpects they have endeavoured to purify the principles of the African Trade, which they have found in general to be dreadfully corrupt. In particular they have reftrained, and in fome cafes abolifhed, though not without a temporary inconvenience, the cuftom of making large prefents of rum to the chiefs connected with them. They trust alfo they have gone to the root of another evil, by introducing a confiderable quantity of coin into the colony, and thus fubftituting the plain and certain medium of dollars in place of the former one of bars;* which having been a medium of calculation that was extremely variable and confused, and merely nominal, has occasioned much

The Directors have reafon on the whole to hope, that they have acquired fome credit in Africa, not only by the general principles of their undertaking, but by the approved quality of their goods alfo, as well as by the fairnels of their fervants in all their commercial transactions; and however flow they may have appeared in their progress, they trust therefore that they have laid fome foundation, on which a commercial intercours may advantageously proceed.

CULTIVATION.

CULTIVATION.

THE fubject of Cultivation may be divided into two heads, that on the Company's own account, and that produced, or likely to be produced, either on the lands of the Nova Scotians or among the natives themfelves.

It was a part of the original plan of the Directors, to fet on foot as foon as poffible two or three plantations on their own account, and they accordingly fent out three managers (or planters) and feveral overfeers used to tropical cultivation. The diffreffes of the colony during the first rainy feafon induced one of the planters to quit the place, an opportunity being afforded him of returning to the West indies ; many of the overfeers died ; of the two planters that remained, one was employed for a time in preparing a cotton plantation near Freetown, but as he has returned to England, and as the land in queftion has been much wanted for other purpofes, this undertaking is fuspended for the prefent; and a few of those Nova Scotians whofe lots of land proved particularly barren, have now the temporary use of this fruitful fpot, from which crops of various articles ufeful to the colony have been raifed.

Of

Of the other plantation undertaken on the Company's account, which is ftill fuccefsfully proceeding under the management of the remaining planter, who went out by one of the first ships, the Directors propose to speak very particularly; fince they believe that this is the first experiment of the kind which has been made in Africa, and that a minute account of its progress may ferve to throw confiderable light on the question, whether it be practicable to cultivate the lands of that continent by means of the free labour of its own inhabitants.

When it was found that the foil around Freetown was not fo favourable to cultivation as was expected, the planter who has been last alluded to, * with the fame laudable and ardent zeal which has ever fince diftinguished him, made many fucceffive expeditions both down the coaft, along the river fide, and into the interior country, with a view of learning the quality of the foil in all the more diftant parts. He reported that he had found extremely good land on the other fide of the river; offered, if any purchase of it could be made, to fettle himfelf there among the natives, and to attempt, with their help alone, a regular plantation. A mile fquare of land was obtained without difficulty from the chief of that diffrict, in confideration of an annual rent equal to f. 16; and about thirty grumettas, or free native labourers, were got together by his affiftance. The firft work to which they were put was that of building a house for the manager; they were next employed in cutting down the wood, which entirely covered the country; and they procedeed then to hoe the ground, and to plant it with fugar cane, cotton, rice, and other vegetables. The terms of engaging them were four or five bars a month, but as the valuing of the bars proved a fource of fome altercation, the price of three dollars a month, or about 3s. 6d. a week, is now fubflituted : the labourers are alfo found with provisions, which confift of about a pint and a half of rice, together with two or three ounces of meat a piece, each day. They are called to work by the blowing of a horn, which is heard through the fmall neighbouring towns in which they refide; and if they are on the fpot, as they ufually are, at the precife time expected which is that of fun rife, they are then accustomed to receive a fmall glafs of rum, which it is intended however to commute into fome triffing pecuniary allowance. They work under the immediate eye of one of the better fort of natives, while the planter directs their general operations, fees them often from his window, and walks occafionally amongst them. They go to their dinner (which is dreffed for them in the manager's house, and is the only meal they take during their day's work) at eleven o'clock, and they return at one. They

They work till fun-fet and then receive another fmall glass of fpirits, but they drink water only at their meal. Their labour is thought equal to about two-thirds of a common day's work in this country, and it is tolerably fleady, although they flew no great exertion in it. Above a year has now elapfed with little variation, either in the number of the labourers or in the regularity of their work, except in the inftance of their abfenting themfelves for a few weeks at the approach of the rainy feafon, in order to work at the plantations about their own towns; and it is thought that means may be taken for preventing even this interruption for the future.

It is material to take fome notice of the manner in which their wages are fpent : when they have received their pay, which they always claim on the day after the appearance of the new moon, they fend over to Freetown to fell the dollars as they term it; the articles taken in return are for the most part clothing or household utenfils; for it does not appear that those gains which the natives acquire by regular industry, are commonly applied to any pernicious ufe. The labourers who work in the Company's plantation may now be diftinguished from most of the other natives, by fome additional articles in their drefs; they wear a hat and a jacket, which the others in general do not; and they have trowfers of a better quality, being evidently difpofed difpofed to copy after the Europeans; though it is only a fmall part of their clothing, and ftill lefs of their houfehold furniture and mode of living, that they have as yet adopted. They are taught to abftain from work on Sundays, when they attend a Nova Scotia preacher now refident among them, who acts alfo during the week as fchool-mafter to feveral native children.

The land which they put in cultivation the first year was not confiderable, having been only about fifteen acres, of which about twelve acres were planted with alternate rows of rice and cotton. A nurfery of fugar canes has been alfo fet on foot, and is, on the whole, advancing; but the ants (or bugabugs) have done much damage among them. It is fuppofed however that this obftacle to the growth of the fugar cane, will be removed, as foon as the roots of the trees which have been cut down shall have rotted away; fince the ants are faid to derive confiderable fupport from them.

The Directors have the fatisfaction of obferving, that although fome little differences may have occafionally arifen between the manager and the natives engaged with him, yet on the whole the Company's profpects have much improved in that part, and many proofs have been given of the great advances that may be made in Civilization, if the prefent object fhould be fteadily purfued, and E efpecially especially if means should be found of confiderably extending the fame fystem.

It has lately been difcovered, that feveral towns adjacent to the Company's plantation are very much increafed, not only by the acceffion of those natives who work for the Company, but also of many others. It appears alfo that the natives are more difpofed in general to migrate towards the fides of the river, which heretofore have been very little peopled : a fenfe of the fecurity of their perfons more and more prevails, and they are lefs averfe to let the bufh around their towns be cut down; which, familiarifed as they have been with the idea of being furprifed and carried into flavery, they were accuftomed always to fpeak of as a convenient shelter. The difficulty indeed of landing on the Bulam fide of the river, by leffening the inter-courfe with Europeans, has caufed a very visible difference in the character of the natives of that diffrict : they are lefs violent and lefs addicted to liquor than their oppofite neighbours, and they alfo live more by their industry. They are in general disposed to enter into the views of the government of Sierra Leone, and feem very little inclined to believe those flave-traders, who tell them that the Company has injurious defigns against them ; and one of their chief men makes it his profeffed principle neither to fell nor to keep a flave. A fecond plantation appears now to be defired by them, and their King has has lately ceded another fquare mile of land for that purpofe.

The Directors have further to mention under the head of Cultivation on the Company's own account, a finall garden of ex-periment in the neighbourhood of Freetown, which is under the care of an able botanift. A variety of native plants and feeds has been collected from time to time, which are cultivated there with great attention; and it is hoped that fome future benefit, either to the Company or colony, as well as fome ufeful acceffion of botanical knowledge, may refult from the labours of this gentleman.* The Court of Directors have fucceeded in obtaining feveral valuable articles of tropical cultivation, through his Majefty's permiffion, from the royal gardens at Kew, and particularly the bread-fruit tree, which will form a very important addition to the Company's collection.

In fpeaking of the cultivation that has taken place fince the inftitution of the colony, through the labour that has been exerted by the Nova Scotians, or the natives on their own account, the Directors are not yet able to report any confiderable progrefs. A great lonifts has been applied to the building of the town, of which it may not be improper in this place to enter into fome defcription.

It is fituated on a dry and rather elevated fpot, on the fouth-fide of Sierra Leone river, and it occupies between feventy and eighty acres of land; its length being about onethird of a mile, and its breadth nearly the fame. It contains near four hundred houfes, each house having one-twelfth of an acre of ground annexed to it, on which a few vegetables are raifed. The ftreets run, in general, from north-weft to fouth-east, there being nine in this direction, and three crofs ftreets; and they are eighty feet wide, one only excepted, which runs within fifty feet of the river fide, and of which the width is one hundred and fixty feet. The public buildings are almost all placed in the broad ftreet, . and they confift of a church, fituated near the middle of the town, which will accommodate about eight hundred people; the governor's houfe and offices; a large ftorehoufe, under which as well as under the governor's houfe a brick ftore-cellar has been built; a large hospital; and fix or eight other wooden houses, offices, and shops, occupied by the Company's fervants : the frames of all the abovementioned buildings were fent out from England. Four canvas houfes, or rather rooms, have been alfo furnished from hence,' and one public building has been erected erected of the common materials of the country, but this is already going to decay as well as the canvas houfes; while all the other buildings, having been erected with care and framed of wood prepared in England, appear likely to laft for fome years.

The dwelling-houfes of the fettlers, which conftitute the chief part of the town, were at first inferior even to the common huts of the natives, but are now far fuperior to them in every refpect; a few of them have been repaired and enlarged, but the greater part have been pulled down (their general fcite having been changed by the government), and are now completely rebuilt. Indeed the first huts were intended by the Nova Scotians to be only temporary dwellings, and were made with very little trouble of the common materials of the country, confifting merely of a few posts let into the ground, the intervals between which were then wattled and plaiftered with clay, and the thatching was of long grafs; the fize of thefe may have been on the average about eighteen feet by twelve, and the value of the labour beftowed on each about forty fhillings.

The prefent houfes of the fettlers are formed, both as to the fides and flooring (for they are all of them floored), of fuitable timber cut and framed in the country, and they are fecured from damp by being raifed one or two feet from the ground by means of ftones or blocks of wood: a number of them are already already covered with either boards or fhingles, and it is intended to finifh them all in this manner; but the greater part are thatched with grafs for the prefent. Only a very few of them have chimneys, but it is common neverthelefs to burn a fire in one of the rooms during the rainy feafon, the fmoke either finding its way through the thatching or paffing out by the door and windows. The prefent houfes are in general from twenty to thirty feet long, and from twelve to fifteen feet wide, and they are in most cafes divided into two rooms. The average value of the whole labour bestowed on each, including the materials, may be estimated at about ten pounds.

Of the land immediately adjoining to the town, care has been taken to referve a portion to the Company on every fide. All this referved land, without including any of the remote parts directly fouth, on which fide the referved land has no other boundary. than that prefcribed in the grant of land originally made by the natives, may be computed at about two hundred acres; part of which is the ground already fpoken of that was intended for a cotton plantation, but is now occupied by the Nova Scotians. Only a fmall proportion of these two hundred acres is in actual cultivation, but the whole of it is cleared. The healthinefs of the fettlement has undoubtedly been much promoted by the early measures that were taken to clear this furrounding furrounding diffrict; and the prudent refervation of it that has been made, may hereafter conduce to many important ends, and in particular it may afford the means of enlarging the town if there fhould be occafion.

The lots of land which have been given to the Nova Scotians lie towards the fouth-east of Freetown, all the weftern diffrict being in the poffession of the natives, and the fouthern fide being thought too mountainous and difficult of accefs to be used at prefent for cultivation. The nearest of the lots is about a third of a mile from the town, and the most diftant about two miles and a quarter; they occupy in all about four fquare miles, or two thousand five hundred and fixty acres, and they are each of them now rendered acceffible by a path of ten feet broad, which has been cut with great labour and expense: only a few lots however, which are fituated near the town, have as yet been in any measure cleared or cultivated.

In order to excite a fpirit of emulation in tilling the foil, premiums were given in the first year by the government to the fettlers who raifed the greatest quantity of the following articles, viz. rice, yams, plantains, eddows, cabbages, Indian corn, and cotton; the whole amount of these premiums was about one hundred pounds. This measure appears to have had fo good an effect, that there is an intention of repeating it in the fecond feafon, making a few variations in the manner manner of executing it, which the experience of the first year has suggested.

Concerning the progrefs of Cultivation among the natives, it is hardly to be expected that there is much as yet to be reported to the Court: indeed the fize of their plantations has commonly varied fo exceedingly from year to year, that any appearance of increafed industry among them, during a fingle feafon, ought not too confidently to be afcribed either to the new demand occafioned by the colonifts of Sierra Leone, or to the Company's influence and example. The price of rice, the chief article of cultivation on the coaft, has been at fome times forty shillings per ton, and at others no lefs than twenty-five or even thirty pounds. This variation is owing partly no doubt to the difference in the feafons, but may reafonably be afcribed, in a very great degree, to the difficulty which the Africans find in forming any proper computation of the demand which is likely to arife for their produce; a plentiful year fometimes betraying them into a general neglect of their plantations, and a fcarce year feldom failing, on the other hand, to produce a fuperfluous cultivation in the year immediately fucceeding,

The eftablishment of a commercial factory on the coast, whose business it may be to form regular contracts with the natives, as well as to observe the general extent of the cultivation, cultivation, and to make purchafes with a view to the exportation of the furplus produce, may tend perhaps to excite a more regular industry, and to bring about, though at first flowly and imperceptibly, very important and extensive confequences.

UNDER this head of the Report, the Directors will introduce a confiderable body of information. They will fpeak first of the mode of government exercifed in the fettlement; and they will then give the character of the fettlers; they will afterwards enter upon the general fubject of Civilization; in doing which they will defcribe the miferable flate to which it appears, from the teftimonies afforded at Sierra Leone, that the natives of Africa have been reduced, through their intercourfe with Europeans; and the Directors will conclude with an account of the fteps which have been taken by the Sierra Leone Company to introduce Chriftianity and Civilization among the Africans, of whofe capacity and difpolition to receive inftruction fome very fatisfactory information will be given.

The Directors have as yet received no exprefs powers from parliament for administering the government of Sierra Leone: they have confidered, as they were bound to do, that the British conflitution, as far as it is applicable to the circumstances of the place, is of course transferred thither, and that the blacks and and whites living in the colony have an equal right to the privileges of British subjects.

Trial by Jury has been established, and the Nova Scotia blacks, though poffeffing very little knowledge of the British laws, have acted as jurymen, one of the Company's chief fervants always prefiding as the judge. The punishments inflicted have been mild, confifting rather in fines than in corporal punifhment : the verdicts have been in general very juft, and, on the whole, the Nova Scotians have ferved on the juries in a manner that fufficiently proves the propriety and prudence of extending to them a privilege which they fo much value. It may be prefumed alfo, that the gradual acquaintance with the principles of English law, which the Nova Scotians gain in the periodical feffions of the peace, may be of use in improving their minds, and may operate as a general help towards Civilization.

The defence of the colony from external enemies is neceffarily entrufted to the body of Nova Scotians alfo. Their arms are always ready; and though their courage has not been put to any actual trial, fince they came to Sierra Leone, yet their alacrity in coming forward in a moment of fuppofed danger, has been experienced on more than one occafion. Most of them indeed bore arms in the American war, and fome have been practifed in firing the guns, which have been mounted for the colony's defence.

In

In order to introduce a fyftem of internal police, every ten houfeholders have been inftructed to chufe annually a tithing-man, and every ten tithing-men a hundredor; the laft mentioned of whom are three in number, there being about three hundred houfeholders in the colony. The hundredors are confulted by the Governor and Council, on fuch occafions as concern the general interefts of the Nova Scotians.

The Directors are convinced, that in proceeding to form any plans of government, it will be neceffary to confider the ftate of mind of thofe who are to be governed, and a variety of local circumftances. They have hitherto advifed the Governor and Council to proceed gradually, taking experience as much as poffible for their guide, and endeavouring to apply a remedy to every evil as it arofe, rather than to form at once any confiderable code of new local inftitutions.

The Directors wifh to obferve, that in thus touching briefly on the point of government, they have thought it fufficient to flate the general principles which have been affumed, and the manner of trying offences and providing for the defence and police of the colony, which has been reforted to up to this period : they do not wifh at prefent to offer any opinion on those measures, which it may be proper to give hereafter to this important fubject.

nIn mounted for the colony's defence.

In proceeding to fpeak of the flate of Religion and Morals within the fettlement, it is only doing justice to the Company's fervants, in the first place, to remark, that their conduct in general has been fober, moral, and exemplary; and that the fuperior fervants efpecially, in whom the chief power is vefted, appear to have promoted the caufe of Chriftianity and the practice of every moral duty, both by the manner in which they have exercifed the public truft committed to them, and by their private influence and example. On the fubject of the labors of the clergymen who went out from England, the Directors think it their duty to obferve, that the colony has derived fervices highly important, in every view, from the gentlemen who filled this part of their establishment.

The Directors in speaking fo favourably as they have done of the general morals of their own fervants, must of course be understood to except all those of whom any thing that implies a contrary character has been mentioned in any part of this report; and they must also make an exception of a few others who have not been individually noticed. The perfons in whom they have been the most difappointed, have been the lower overfeers, of whom it was difficult to get any thorough knowledge at the time of engaging them, on account of their having refided in the Weft Indies: of the feveral individuals of this clafs that originally went out, none are now remaining maining in the colony. The Court will not wonder, if in fpite of all the care taken in the choice of the perfons fent to Sierra Leone, a few inftances thould have occurred even of notorious immorality among fo confiderable a number. The Directors, however, have reafon to think, that the proportion of their regular fervants, who can be juftly charged with any thing directly licentious and immoral, will be found to have been very fmall on the whole: and they have the fatisfaction of faying, that a confiderable decency of manners, and an unwillingnefs to difgrace the caufe in which they are engaged, appears at this time to prevade their eftablifhment.

Of the character of the Nova Scotia blacks, who may be faid to conflitute the colony, the Directors propose to give a very full description. Some degree of judgment may be formed concerning the ftate of morals among them, by adverting to the offences which have been brought to view at the periodical feffions of the peace. The higheft crimes for which any profecutions have yet taken place, have been adultery and petty theft; and more than one conviction for the former of these has occurred. From that class of vices which comes lefs under the cognizance of a public court, the Nova Scotians are in fome refpects remarkably free; marriage is extremely general among them, and all those evils which more particularly refult from from its being in difufe, are therefore in a great measure avoided : drunkenness is by no means common : fwearing is hardly ever heard : their attention to the fabbath is alfo great ; they on that day abstain entirely from work, dress themselves in very good (and fome of them even in very gay) attire, and repair together with their children to church, where their deportment during the fervice, and their whole appearance are represented to be fuch as to form a very firiking spectacle.

It will appear from the above general defcription, that the Nova Scotians are evidently fuperior to the generality of people of the fame order in this country, in respect to that particular clafs of morals which has been treated of; but this is certainly the most favourable way of viewing them. It will be neceffary, in order to give a just idea of their whole character, to enter rather largely into fome other points: and first it may be proper to take notice of their religion, and then to dwell on fome of the peculiar difpolitions and prejudices of their minds, especially as they may respect the Company: after which a retrospective view will be taken of their paft circumstances and condition.

On the first of these heads it may be obferved, that the Nova Scotians are not only punctual, as has been already stated, at their worship, but that many of them profess also in other respects much regard to religion. It is natural however to imagine, that among fuch a body of men, almost all of them claiming to be thought Christians, there will be fome who have imbibed very inadequate or enthusiastic notions of Christianity; a few perhaps who fet up hypocritical pretenfions to it; while there may be many others who, notwithstanding fome defect in their religious knowledge, may be confiftent and fincere Chriftians. There are five or fix black preachers among them, raifed up from their own body, who are not without a confiderable influence; and it fuppofed that the difcipline which they preferve in their little congregations, has contributed materially to the maintenance of the general morals which have been fpoken of.

The due regulation and command of their tempers, is one of those points in which the Directors must state that the Nova Scotians are (many of them at leaft) most eminently found to fail. They have appeared in many inftances remarkably rafh and hafty in their judgments, and vehement in all the difpofitions of their mind. The violence which occafionally broke out at an early period of the fettlement, was fuch as to give ferious anxiety to the government; it fhewed itfelf in vehement declamations made fometimes in the public ftreets, and in marked expreffions of contumely rudely and publicly uttered against the Company's chief fervants. Some fymptoms of ambition appeared about the the fame time in one or two individuals, who had acquired a temporary popularity in the colony. The extreme violence which has been fpoken of was ordinarily confined to a very few, but fome degree of it occafionally extended itfelf to a greater number, and the more forward and affuming individuals then grew eager to dictate in the name of the whole body. This turbulence must certainly be mentioned as one of the chief circumftances of difcredit to the character of the infant fettlement. Although the Directors truft that fo mischievous a spirit has now confiderably fubfided, they have neverthelefs thought it proper to fend out orders, that if there fhould ftill be any individuals who perfift in complaining against the government, they should be defired to avail themfelves of an opportunity which will be afforded them of returning, back to Nova Scotia.

The unreafonablenefs of many of the fettlers in effimating their own merits, and their very inadequate fense of those obligations which have been conferred on them by the Company, must be stated as another material circumstance to the prejudice of feveral of their characters. All this is combined indeed with the falfe and abfurd notions, which the more forward among them have imbibed, concerning their rights as freemen, and the whole nature of their claims on the Company.

When the Governor and Council thought proper to difmifs one of the Nova Scotians from from his work, on account of difrespectful conduct towards his fuperiors, a number of his comrades made a formal application to have it eftablished as a law, that no Nova Scotia labourers working under the Company thould ever be turned off in future, unlefs after a verdict given to that purpose by a jury of his peers. When the difpute ended concerning the quantity of the Company's own land to be referved near the fhore for public uses, fome of the Nova Scotians in allowing at length that a certain portion of it fhould be fo referved, conceded the point by faying, that they would oblige the Company with the piece of land in queftion. The claims which they fet up for an increase of wages, and for a reduction in the price of articles fold at the Company's ftore-houfe, have been already mentioned to the court, and their unreafonableness has in no instance appeared more ftrongly than in these applications; for their wages, at the time of their complaint, were no lefs than two fhillings and fix-pence a day; and the price of the goods fold to them was only fuch as to afford a clear profit, (after paying freight, intereft of money, as well as prime coft and all other charges) of about ten per cent to the Company. It is worthy of remark alfo, that they ufually prefer both the above mentioned and all their other claims, though matters of bargain between the two contracting parties, emphatically in their character of freemen. lf

If an additional fix-pence be not added to their wages, they declare that they fhall then con-ceive themfelves to be treated as flaves. If the governor be not difmiffed for having ordered water to be mixed with the rum, before it was exposed to fale (which it has proved on enquiry that he did with no other pur-pole, than that of bringing it to the fair and proper proof), it is intimated in like manner that the whole colony is about to be reduced to flavery. Undoubtedly these expressions are used often in haste, are sometimes also retracted, and in whatever name they may be urged, fhould never be charged on the whole body. They afford a fpecimen however of the fort of reafonings with which the government abroad has frequently had to combat, and they may tend to fhew the propriety of the line of conduct adopted by the Directors, which has been that of endeavouring to compose the minds of the colonists. by giving a favourable imprefiion of the Company's general disposition towards them, rather than attempting to fatisfy them by reiterated and unreafonable conceffions. The fubstance of their complaints, if they could be made good, would amount in effect to this; that the Company gain too much money by their dealings with the fettlers, and are profiting to an unreafonable degree at their expense; for all the points in difpute have been required by them to be fettled in fome way that would turn out more favourably to the the Nova Scotians, and more unfavourably to the finances of the Company.

The Directors have flated in the foregoing account, that out of about two hundred and forty thousand pounds capital, above eighty thousand pounds have been already spent in establishing the colony; and, if the dead flock be included (as the greater part of it may), above one hundred thoufand pounds. If the Company had proceeded entirely on those interested views which some of the Nova Scotians have been ready to afcribe to them, and had merely established a factory for their trade, the expenditure of a fourth or a fifth part of this fum would probably have been fufficient; and confequently about eighty thousand pounds (not to mention the expense paid by government in transporting the Nova Scotians) might have been faved. The bare flatement of these facts sufficiently proves the unreasonableness of those Nova Scotians, who are always complaining of the illiberality of the Company. It is true that advantages poffibly even outweighing all this expense, have accrued to the Company from their migration to Sierra Leone. These however have been advantages not gained by the Company as traders looking to their own profit, but as founders of the Sierra Leone Company, for the firm establishment of which they may reckon themfelves chiefly indebted to the Nova Scotians. This fum of eighty thousand pounds, (which is a third part of the the Company's whole capital) has therefore been the price paid for the civilization that is now begun in Africa: it has been facrificed to that caufe, which the Sierra Leone Company have confidered as their own, the caufe of Chriftianity and Freedom and Civilization among the race of Africans; to the caufe more particularly of these Nova Scotians themfelves and their posterity.

The jealoufy and fuspicion shewn by many of the Nova Scotians, especially in their intercourfe with whites, is another circumstance that must be mentioned in fome degree to their prejudice. They have all profeffed indeed to entertain the most favourable opinion of the intentions and principles of the Directors, who therefore hope that they will be difposed to a ready acquiescence in the decisions of the Court, whenever they may be made known to them. Few however of the fervants fent out have efcaped their fhare of harsh and unreasonable suspicion: but though this unpleafant difpolition must be mentioned, as forming one material feature in the character of the fettlers, yet great allowance for it will undoubtedly be made, if due confideration be had of the various fufferings which fome of them have undergone, and the very unequal measure of juffice which they have formerly received, and are now habituated to expect, at the hand of whites.

In effimating indeed the whole character that has been given of the Nova Scotians, the peculiar circumftances of their paft lives ought not to be forgotten, and this therefore is a fubject to which it is material to draw for a while the attention of the Court.

It should be remembered that the men whom the Directors have been defcribing, were all of them at one time flaves; that in that period of their lives, when they were abridged of their liberty, they probably, like others in their condition, were but little restrained in respect to many branches of morals, that marriage was not then inflituted among them, that the want of parental care and inftruction was not at all fupplied by any inftitution of fchools, and that no one, in fhort, then confidered it as his duty to inculcate any kind of religious or moral principles among them. It fhould be confidered alfo, how much they must, at the fame time, have been degraded in refpect to the faculties of their minds, how fmall their opportunities of knowledge were, how little inducement they had to cultivate their talents, or to exert their understandings. They felt undoubtedly a ftrong fense of the peculiar hardships under which they laboured, but it is probable they were little acquainted with the true nature of civil rights, or accuftomed to think accurately about them: on the contrary, they may very naturally be fuppofed to have often confounded the unavoidable hardships of life, and the punifhments punishments needful in fociety, with all those other ills which a principle of arbitrary power impofes, and which it can fignify little to those who are involved in a state of hopeles captivity particularly to diferiminate. It is to fome want of diferimination and remaining ignorance in this respect, that much of that unreafonablenefs of the Nova Scotians which has been defcribed, and that fome of the abfurdeft of those particular claims which have been fpecified, may obvioufly be traced, and not to any original fault in their moral character more than in that of other men, nor to any natural inferiority in their understanding. And when it is confidered how often the advocates for a fystem of servitude have, on their part, confounded both flavery itfelf and all the enormities attending it, with the neceffary evils of human life, and the infti-tutions that are requisite in civil society, it furely need not excite furprise if emancipated flaves fhould be fubject to a like confusion of ideas, and fhould feem, in the fame manner, to labour under fome dulnefs and inaccuracy of understanding, when acting under the bias of felf-intereft.

It feems proper to obferve, in addition to what has been already faid on the original condition of the Nova Scotians, that the Directors are not without reafon for fuppoling the ftate of their fervitude to have been more harsh than the American fervitude is in general; for it should be noticed, that they form a portion a portion of those flaves who, during the American war, ran away from their mafters and took refuge in the king's army; which it feems natural to imagine that those would in general be the most disposed to do, whose fituation was the most hard and uncomfortable. Indeed if this prefumption of their ill treatment, arifing from the manner of their emancipation (which is increafed by the account that a few of them recite of their extraordinary fufferings), fhould be thought unfair, and fhould appear to derogate too much from the fuppofed mildness and humanity of American mafters, it feems then to follow, on the other hand, that they were those flaves who were the leaft fenfible of the mild treatment they received, who were the leaft attached to the perfons of their mafters, and the most prone to be difcontented with their condition. On either of these suppositions, the Nova Scotians may be faid to furnish a less favourable specimen of the character to be expected in emancipated flaves, than may be commonly hoped for in other cafes. It can hardly be neceffary to obferve, how extremely unfavourable the circumftances through which they have paffed into a ftate of freedom will appear, if their cafe fhould be compared with that of flaves, who might be emancipated on a prudent principle of difcrimination ; to whom liberty having been first held out in prospect, in order to prepare them for it, might be granted after a certain period period of fervice, as the profeffed reward of industry and merit; or might perhaps be communicated by degrees, as local or other circumstances might make adviseable, privilege after privilege being added, in proportion as their diligence should advance, as their property should accumulate, and their personal interest in the maintenance and wellbeing of society should increase.

But to refume the fubject which occasioned this fhort digreffion-the Nova Scotia blacks having been born in North America of African parents or progenitors (a few only excepted who were imported Africans, and were chiefly kidnapped as they fay in their infancy), hav-ing paffed the principal part of their lives in a ftate of flavery that was probably worfe than ordinary, and having then emancipated themfelves in the manner that has been mentioned. they fulfilled on their part the conditions required of them in the proclamations iffued by the British commanders, having been of the number of loyalifts who joined the ftandard of Great Britain. Whatever education or infruction any of them have received, appears to have been chiefly got fince the æra of their emancipation. A few of them with a part of their earnings put themfelves to fchool, with the view either of increasing their religious knowledge, or of laying the ground for fome future improvement in their condition; and thefe are now the preachers and fchoolmafters of the Sierra Leone colony. After paffing paffing through various fcenes, for the moft part living among the British folders, and following the common fortune of the army; not unfrequently exposing themfelves in battle, as the wounds of feveral will teftify, and getting credit always for their courage, but not fo uniformly for all the other parts of their character; their numbers being now confiderably reduced by the death of fome and the difperfion of others (a portion of them being fuppofed to have again fallen into the hands of the Americans); the remainder were brought to Nova Scotia at the end of the war, in order to receive, in common with the white loyalifts, certain allowances of provisions and portions of land, in purfuance of the promifes made to them in those proclamations, which have been already alluded to. They ftate that they obtained the rations of provisions, though not to the full extent of their expectations; that inftead of the promifed lots of land, they got in general only a fmall townlot of little value, the white loyalifts having engroffed all the ground that was valuable; and that they were further difappointed in not finding themfelves admitted to the ufual privileges of British subjects, and in particular to the right of trial by jury. It has been already noticed, that their fenfe of these injuries, together with their experience of the unfavourablenefs of the climate of Nova Scotia, induced them to feek redrefs from the British government, by means of a delegate from from their own body, whom they fent to England for that purpofe.

When Mr. Clarkfon appeared as the Company's agent in Nova Scotia, and flated at feveral public meetings of the free blacks, the propofals held out to them by the Company, together with the liberal offer of a free paffage to Sierra Leone made by the British government, they expressed at once the most lively joy and exultation; they congratulated themfelves on being now about to be emancipated from a fituation which they had almost confidered as a fecond fervitude, both on account of the fpecific hardfhips already fated, and the general difrepute and inequality of treatment which had followed them into the British colony, in which they had attempted to incorporate themfelves. The eagerness of their defire to migrate, is faid by Mr. Clarkfon, to have rendered him fo much the more careful in guarding them against the indulgence of all unreasonble expectations. No allowance even of provisions after their arrival was held out to them, and the neceffity of working on their lots of land, in order to get their livelihood, was urged upon them univerfally. But their ardour was not at all repreffed by thefe or any fimilar fuggestions; they fold hastily and without regret, at the most inadequate prices, fuch of their little effects as could not eafily be carried away with them : a few of those who were poffeffed of property affifted others who were prevented their migration; and feveral who were the heads of families, are faid to have undertaken, for the fupport of the younger and more unprotected females, to whom no paffage was granted except on this condition. The whole body waited feveral weeks in tents at Halifax, for the collection of the thipping. during which time they were exposed to much inclemency of weather, and contracted a confiderable degree of ficknefs: they fet fail in the beginning of January, 1792, having readily adopted every measure that was fuggefted to them for the maintenance of exact order during the voyage, and having thus far uniformly teflified both their gratitude and obedience to Mr. Clarkfon and to the Company.

Their conduct fince this period has been already fufficiently defcribed, and the Directors think that when it is confidered in connection with all those circumstances of their past lives which have now been also mentioned, although fome of the pleafing expectations which were excited by a few first appearances may have been difappointed, their character may fairly be faid to turn out as favourably on the whole as could reafonably be expected. It fhould be noticed in-deed, that among these emancipated flaves, there have not been wanting inftances of a few, at leaft, who have afforded a most favourable specimen of the African character, on whole general dispositions Christianity appears to have had a most benign and happy influence, and who have shewn themselves on all occasions humble and contented, the friends of order, and the zealous promoters of peace.

Let it therefore be carefully remembered on the one hand, that every thing which has been faid in difparagement of the Nova Scotians, is to be underftood with fome exceptions, and with various degrees of limitation : let it alfo be confidered, on the other, how great and various have been the difadvantages under which all of them have laboured : and it will then no doubt appear, that the turbulence of fome, the unreafonablenefs as well as jealoufy of many more, and all the other unfavourable circumstances in their character, are more or lefs to be looked for in any body of men who have been in their condition. They are faults incident to them most unquestionably, not as blacks, but they may be traced to our common nature. And who is there who will venture to fay, that if he had entered into life alfo under fimilar difadvantages, and had ftruggled under a like fucceffion of vexations, hardships, and difappointments, his mind would not have contracted any of the fame prejudices, nor his character have been marked by any of those untoward difpolitions, which belong to fome of the prefent colonifts of Sierra Leone?

It has been already noticed that the Governor nor and Council are endeavouring, in compliance with the wifhes of the Directors, to expedite as much as poffible the fettling of them on their own lands; by the cultivation of which there is reason to think that they, like the former fettlers now living at Granville Town, may be able to get a comfortable fubfistence : and if, by the bleffing of Providence on their industry, they should find their fubstance accumulate and their general profperity advance, their families at the fame time continuing to increase, it can hardly be doubted that they will thus gradually be brought to effimate more justly their obligations to the Company. It is important however to observe that, both with a view to their own happiness and to the Company's great object of extending civilization in Africa, it is of the highest confequence that they fhould neither be left without instructors from hence, nor without a government confifting of Europeans.

Their children, who were about three hundred in number, are univerfally fent to fchool, and are reported to advance quite as faft in their learning as children commonly do in this country; although they were not fupplied till lately with very fuitable and fufficient Englifh mafters. The Directors propofe to fpare no pains or expense that may be neceffary in order to maintain this part of their eftablifhment on the best footing, and they will continue to direct the peculiar attention tention of the Governor and Council to fo very important an object; for it is to this rifing generation of well-educated blacks, that the Directors chiefly look, for the gradual improvement of the internal flate of the colony; and to them alfo it feems by no means prefumptuous to hope, that fome of the more diftant and even of the interior parts of Africa, may one day poffibly be indebted for the introduction of Chriftianity, for the propogation of European knowledge, and fome important attainments in civilization.

The progrefs made in the extension of civilization among the natives, together with the difficulties which have occurred, and the opening prospects in this respect which have been afforded, are the only part of the present general head that remains to be treated of. This however is a matter of fuch great importance, and of fo very interesting a nature also, that the Directors are perfuaded they need offer no apology for entering into it at fome length, and for laying before the Court fuch actual information as they have received upon it, with freedom as well as particularity.

It must be obvious to the Proprietors that, in treating of the Civilization of Africa, the nature and tendency of the prefent African Slave Trade, come directly and neceffarily under confideration. The Directors however in fpeaking of the Slave Trade, do not propofe to deal in obfervations and arguments raifed raifed by themfelves at home on this beaten topic; conceiving that they fhall do more exact as well as ample juffice to the fubject, by reforting to a fimple narrative of what has been paffing under the view of their fervants abroad, and by enumerating a few firong but authentic facts, which it will not be neceffary to preface with much introduction.

They will defcribe firft, the deplorable flate to which the diffrict around Sierra Leone, previous to the formation of the colony, had been reduced, through its intercourfe with Europeans; an intercourfe carried on up to that time, chiefly, if not exclusively, for the purpose of procuring flaves.—In the fecond place, they will flate a number of more recent facts, fome of them exhibiting the nature of the prefent Slave Trade, and the obstruction which it has actually given to the Company's attempts to promote Civilization.

In fpeaking of the first of these points, namely, the fituation to which the long prevalence of the Slave Trade had reduced the country round Sierra Leone, the Directors cannot forbear briefly recapitulating a few facts which were recited in a former report made to the General Court, which was held nearly at the time of instituting the colony.

As a proof of the infecurity of the porfons of the natives, it was then flated, that even the king of the country himfelf, though peaceable and more than ordinarily refpected, had in in no lefs than three feparate inftances been bereft of fome relations of his own, through the various enormities of the Slave Trade. In a letter fent by him to England, wherein he refers to one only of these three calamities, he fays: " There are three diftant relations " of mine now in the Weft Indies, carried " away by one Captain Cox, captain of a " Danish ship, Corpro, Banna, and Morbour : " thefe were taken out of my river Sierra " Leone. I know not how to get them " back." And he states his reason for encouraging the intended Sierra Leone fettlement fo warmly as he did in fpite of all infinuations to its prejudice, to be " In order " that there might be a ftop put to the horrid " depredations that are often committed in " this country by all countries that come " here to trade." The fubstance of this letter, which appears to have been written by the hand of a fecretary to the king, who had received fome education in England, was afterwards confirmed by the king's fon.

A few other fpecific proofs of the prevalence of kidnapping were cited in that report, and one inftance of the capture of a ftraggling native by a party of kidnappers was given, of which the agent of the Sierra Leone Company, as well as another perfon then in England, had ocular demonftration.

But the circumftance to which the Directors with more particularly to draw the attention of the Proprietors, is the mention that was then made of feveral depopulated towns along the fea coaft (two of which the Company's agent had vifited), all of them faid to have been broken up by a mulatto flave-trader refiding to the fouth of Sierra Leone; who having had the advantage of other chiefs through the education he received in his youth at Liverpool, acquired a very fuperior degree of power and influence, which it appears from abundant teftimonies that he very freely exercifed.

In purfuing the defcription of the effects produced by the Slave Trade in the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone, the Directors will quote, first, fome authentic evidences confirming and enlarging the account of ravages committed towards the fouth, by the mulatto flave-trader abovementioned : they will then produce fome evidence of its nature, brought from no great diftance northwards of the fettlement; to which will be added the information of feveral very competent witneffes from the eaft or interior country : a few additional facts of different kinds, fome of them furnished at Sierra Leone itself, will form the remaining evidence of that deplorable fituation to which Sierra Leone and its adjoining diffrict had been reduced, previous to the formation of the prefent colony.

The Directors wifh to obferve, once for all, that the truth and accuracy of the information they are about to lay before the Court Court have been in general eftablished by the united testimony of some of the principal fervants of the Company; and that all that part of it which will be given as quotation, was committed to writing by one of them always about the time and generally on the very day, often at the very hour, of its being received. *

On the fubject of the mulatto trader who is faid to have depopulated the towns which are feen ftanding to the fouth of Sierra Leone, and who is now no more, his death having been brought about, as it is fuppofed, by fome of the natives, the following information has been received :

After fome intelligence nearly to the fame purport, obtained from another quarter, it is obferved :

" — March 1793. A flave-trader of " the name of — , has alfo been men-" tioning the devaftations of the late mulatto " trader, as a thing which confifted with " his knowledge; he fays, that his plan " was to lend goods to every inferior chief,

* The Directors, for obvious reafons, do not think proper to infert in this printed report the names of all the perfons or places that may be fpoken of in the journal, and other documents, from which they fhall make their quotations; and they fhall therefore defcribe them in general by fome circumlocution: they fhall use a few other triffing liberties with the language, chiefly for the fake of elucidation, taking care, however, in no inflance to alter any word that is material.

" or head-man, who thought proper to re-66 queft them, and if the head-man was flow " in fulfilling his engagements, that he " would then arm two or three hundred of 46 his grumettas (or working people) who 66 being officered by white men, deferters " from the ships, were fent to furprife the 66 towns of his debtor. In this way had he 66 depopulated the whole country from Gape Sierra Leone to the river Sherbro. In 66 66 order to fave himfelf from the effects of $6 the general indignation raifed against him, 66 he formed a purrah (or confederacy), by 66 which he united the kings and principal 46 chiefs (all of whom were deeply engaged " in the Slave Trade), in an agreement to defend each other." 66

A native chief informed me, 66 that a confiderable town in which he used " to live, was attacked by this mulatto trader, 66 who was on that occafion aided by fome $6 of the other chiefs, and also by an Ameri-" can veffel then waiting for flaves; that " after a ftout refistance his town was taken 66 and deftroyed; that himfelf however and 22 the greater part of his people effected their " efcape to a fmall neighbouring ifland, .. whence they used to make occasional in-66 curfions on their enemy upon the main 66 land : he mentioned his having taken forty 66 prifoners in one of thefe expeditions, all 66 of whom were fold as flaves."

A principal fervant of the Company, when on.

on a vifit to these parts, adds the following information : " A flave of this mulatto chief " was fet up by him as administrator of " justice in his own district, who is now " reckoned a perfon of great importance, " and is become too powerful to be thwart-" ed; much court is paid to him by the " flave-traders. It is faid that terrible cruel-" ties are practifed by him, and that accu-" fations are multiplied. A native chief of " a neighbouring village who was with us " on board the cutter, being afked to go " with us on thore, declined it with a ftrong " expression of indignation and hatred against " this perfon, apprehending, as it appeared, " that if he came within his reach he fhould " fcarcely efcape him. ---- In proceeding " along the river, we obferved a number of " creeks, the entrance of which is too nar-" row for more than one canoe to pafs at a " time : at the head of most of these creeks " there are towns. These retired places of " refidence were chofen in the time of the " mulatto flave-trader, on the ground of " their affording opportunity to effect an " escape, in cafe of alarm, before the at-" tack could be made. One of the fub-" ordinate chiefs, at whole town we landed, " confelled that this had been his motive for " chufing fo difficult a fpot as that on which " he had pitched himfelf." Some further mention of this eminent flave-trader will occur in the fequel, and the Proprietors will then G 3 then be again reminded of the various traces of his ravages which have here been fpoken of.

In proceeding to notice the effects of the Slave Trade towards the north, the Directors have to obferve, that the two countries neareft to the Sierra Leone (or Timmany) diftrict, on that fide, are the Mandingo and the Sufee countries. They will introduce fome information from each of these. The Foulah country, which will be mentioned alfo, is ftill farther off.

- November. Two chiefs from the nearest towns to Freetown dined with me: they both allowed the frequency of " kidnapping among the Sufees and Man-65 dingoes; one of them had been an eye " 66 witnefs to it. As to the Foulahs, he fays 66 it is univerfally acknowledged that they " make war for the fole purpofe of pro-" curing flaves. He fays it often happens that a company of Foulahs, having brought " 46 flaves to market, is attacked by a party of $6 Freebooters, who infeft the country be-66 tween the coaft and the Foulah country, 46 and who both rob people of their goods and make flaves of them to boot, fo that " 46 it is not unufual for the fame man who 56 fold others as flaves, to be fold in a few 66 weeks afterwards to the fame flave-factory himfelf." 66

The following intelligence is from the Mandingo,

Mandingo, which is immediately north of the Sierra Leone country.

" ____ November. A trader from the Sufee country related the following anec-24 dote, of which he himfelf had been a wit-66 Two or three years ago, the chief " nefs. of Quiaport river, in the Sufee country, " 66 attacked the chief of Bowrah, and made 66 prifoners of fome of his people, whom he 46 fold to the British flave-factory to the north of Sierra Leone. The chief who " had been attacked collected all his force, " .. defeated the other chief, and made a great many of his people prifoners; with thefe " " he went and redeemed his own people from the flave-factory, who obliged him " however to pay two for one." 66

" February 1794. A mulatto lady, miftrefs of a large town in the Mandingo 66 " country, who poffeffes confiderable in-" telligence, called on us in the evening, and " ftaid in the fettlement two or three nights. " She has been to England in her youth, " and her English name is Mils B. Heard. " We talked much about the Slave Trade; " fhe faid fhe difliked it, for it kept her in 46 conftant terror, fince fhe never knew when 66 fhe lay down at night, whether fhe might " not be affaffinated before the morning. She faid that for fome time paft there had " been no wars in the interior country to 66 " hers, and acknowledged that the wars do 🤨 not

" not happen when there is no demand for "flaves."

The Directors will add one more quotation on the lubject of the northern diffrict :

In the Mandingo and Sufee countries, " which lie between the river Sierra Leone " and the Rio-Pongas, kidnapping is very " frequent ; nor is this done by the ftrangers " alone. It often happens that children are " kidnapped by people of a neighbouring or " even of the fame village."----" A perfon " who has refided feveral years in the Man-" dingo country, told me that mothers, in " that part, never fail to collect their " children together with great care as night " comes on, and either fhut them up or " endeavour to keep them within their " eye till morning. ---- It is ftipulated in " thefe parts between the flave-trader and " the kidnappers, that none of the natives " around shall be admitted to a fight of the " flaves, who are ufually conveyed away by " the craft in the night, the barter of them " having been made in the night time alfo. " I have converfed with many natives as " well as traders on this fubject, and they " have every one of them confirmed the " above account. A principal factor, from " whom I inquired the reafon of the great " frequency of kidnapping among the Man-" dingoes, observed that it arose from their " head-men getting into debt to the Eu-" ropeans, and being then put into confinement " ment by them; in confequence of which " the people belonging to thefe head-men " were laid under an obligation to kidnap " fome perfon, in order to effect their re-" demption."

The following information respects that part of the interior or eastern country which is not far distant from Freetown, and is subject to the King of Sierra Leone.

" A chief reliding in one of the upper " branches of the Sierra Leone river, whole " character is confidered as refpectable, has " been with us: the following is the fub-" ftance of his information with respect to " the Sierra Leone trade. The people in-" land, he fays, are used to go to war on " purpofe to make flaves : at prefent, there " being no great demand, they do not make " war. White people often encourage pa-46 lavers (or quarrels), promifing dafhes (or 66 prefents of liquor) in cafe the convicts are fold to them. They were in the prac-$6 tice also of fomenting war, by giving am-66 munition to both parties; this used for-66 66 merly to happen very frequently, of which he specified two instances. He told me ... that he was himfelf engaged in a war 66 " which lafted five years, when a British " flave-trader furnished both him and his " enemies with powder; that he used then " often to waylay and fell ftrangers, in order " to buy arms and ammunition ; but he fays " this was ' a bad thing,' and juftified only " by " by the neceffity he was under of finding " means to defend himfelf : had there been " no flave-factories he would not have done " fo. The flave-traders have acted differently " of late years; for the inhabitants of his " country being much diminished in their " numbers, and the wars among them very " much interrupting the intercourfe with the " remoter parts, the flave-factors have used " their influence to fettle all differences, and " to fecure to the people further inland a " free paffage to the river's mouth. For " fome years paft there have been no wars " in his part, but almost all the flaves fold " there have been brought down from the " country further up."

"The fame chief mentioned that it was not uncommon for head-men, when they wanted goods from the flave-factories, to give a hint to their wives to encourage fome of the natives to commit adultery, who if they fell into the fnare, were then fold to the flave-factory on the accufation of thefe women."

"Two native flave-traders who poffefs a confiderable fhare of intelligence, have been with us. They informed us that kidnapping was a general practice ' among the bufh-men;' by which they mean thofe who live in the interior: that it was no unufual thing for the inhabitants of the coaft to travel back into the country, and lie in wait in the woods for any ftraggling " people. " people. They faid, that almost all the " flaves brought from a distance, were taken " either by force or fraud,"

After fo many various and independent proofs of the nature of the Slave Trade, and of that horrible defolation which it has fpread on every fide, it cannot be very neceffary to bring forward any additional and individual facts in order to furnifh further teftimony of the fame kind. The following flory happens, however, to afford an inftance of the practice of kidnapping at Sierra Leone, of too interefting a nature to be omitted.

The Proprietors may recollect that of the Nova Scotians who have migrated to Sierra Leone, it has been obferved that fome were originally inhabitants of Africa, and that a great proportion of thefe were, according to their own account, kidnapped in their infancy. It has been found that three of their number were furnished from parts not very far diftant from Sierra Leone; one of these three was taken from Sierra Leone itfelf, as he used to mention when failing thither on his return. When he landed, he found himfelf nearly on the fpot from whence he had been carried off, and pointed to a particular part of the beach, where, as he relates, a woman laid hold on him, he being then a boy, and fold him to an American flave-fhip in the river. The interval of his absence had been about fifteen years. He recollected the way to his native town, which was was only two or three miles diffant, but he felt, for a time at leaft, fo great a dread of parting from the body of his companions, that he delayed making an expedition thither. A number of Nova Scotians, of whom this man was one, were flanding together among their tents, not long after their arrival, when a body of natives, led by curiofity, came down to fee the fettlement. An elderly woman of the party was observed by fome of the fettlers to have her attention arrefted, and very peculiar emotions excited whenever fhe could obtain a view of the face of this Nova Scotian : fhe was heard to utter fome words in her native tongue to her companions with much agitation, and at length fully recognizing his countenance, the ran up to him and embraced him : fhe proved to be his own mother. It was learnt on inquiry that his father was now dead : the parents had never been able to difcover the finalleft trace of their child, whom they had given up for loft; nor does it appear indeed that any means of difcovery were afforded them. The woman who ftole him remains altogether unknown, and the impunity of the captain of the flave-fhip, even if he were known, is but too obvious : nor is it not to be fuppofed, that even if the kidnapper had been known by the child that was kidnapped, the redemption of the child from flavery, and the confequent punishment of the kidnapper, would have been at all forwarded. Having once once fecured her prey and committed it to the hold of a flave-fhip, no difcovery feems after that time to have been poffible : the had nothing further to fear, unlefs indeed fuch a number of extraordinary events fhould concur, as that of the child's emancipating himfelf, in the first place, by running away at the peril of his life from his mafter, that of his returning then to the very fpot in Africa from whence he had been taken, and laftly that of his finding out and feizing and giving evidence against and convicting, the perion who had fold him into flavery. In the prefent inftance, though fo very remarkable a one, only a part of these circumftances are found. The Directors cannot forbear obferving that this incident affords an illustration of the nature of the Slave Trade, which applies equally to the cafe of flaves kidnapped on the coaft and of those taken further inland.

Having shewn how Sierra Leone has had her towns laid wafte, and her inhabitants occasionally carried off through the various enormities of the Slave Trade, on the other hand it may be noticed, that her mountains have gained an occasional accession of inhabitants through the fame unnatural traffic; an accession indeed, as the subsequent account will shew, of a few forlorn and miserable beings, whom the Slave Trade has taught to take refuge in her heights, and to dread the very sight of their fellow-creatures.

' About

" About five or fix years ago, a Danish " veffel lying at anchor in the mouth of " Sierra Leone river, was cut off by the " flaves : the head-man of the neighbouring " fhore on which they landed, happening to " favour their escape, they made their way " to the mountains, and there they built " themfelves a town, at the fuppofed diftance " of four or five miles from Freetown, in " which they ftill refide. Their jealoufy of " ftrangers is however faid to be fuch, that " they do not permit them to approach, and " that they even watch the avenues of their " retreat." Such is the fubftance of the intelligence on this fubject obtained from the fon of a confiderable chief, to whom the Company are indebted for feveral other pieces of information which have been quoted.

The Directors learn from fome very recent accounts, that in confequence of the above intimation, two fervants of the Company have made an expedition to the place of relidence of thefe people, which is termed the Deferter's 'Town. They fucceeded in getting into the town without any particular moleftation, and they have authenticated the chief facts which have been ftated. They learnt alfo, that when this body of runaway flaves first eftablisted themfelves on the mountains, they were about one hundred in number, but that they are now reduced to about eighty, partly by deaths and partly alfo by kidnapping.

Another diffressful story refulting out of this this event remains to be added. It appears that a complaint was preferred against the head man who favoured the escape of these flaves, and the great mulatto trader already fpoken of is faid to have been the perfon before whom the question was tried. It is commonly fuppofed that the complainant took the precaution of felling his chance of forfeiture for a moderate fum to the judge, before the trial came on : certain it is that the judgment given was, that the head-man with all his generation (that is, all the people living in his town) should be fold for flaves; and as many of thefe as could be caught were fold accordingly. The head-man indeed was spared, after having been some time a prisoner, and lives at prefent not far from Freetown.

The Directors have now concluded that part of their information which applies to the period antecedent to the formation of the colony. They will next proceed to the relation of a number of events of a more recent date; and they will fhew firft, by a variety of facts, what those fources have been from which the Slave Trade has been supplied during the last two years, so far as respects the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone. The various evils interwoven in the trade, the private misery which it has caused, the drunkenness it has introduced, and the scenes of blood to which it has occasionally given rise, will all all appear in the further progress of this detail.

The first quotation that will be given, affords an instance of one of the lefs atrocious modes of reducing people to flavery in Africa, and recites a conversation with a flave-captain of the better fort.

" February 1793. A native of fome con-" fequence applied to the governor for his " affiftance in getting his daughter redeemed, " who had just been feized by a perfon to " whom the native owed fome money, and " fold to a flave-fhip lying off Freetown. " The governor in confequence went to the " flave-captain, and made him an offer either " of goods or money, as the price of her re-" demption ; but the flave-captain refufed " to take either the one or the other, ob-" ferving that flaves were now difficult to be " got, and must not easily be parted with. " He faid, that fince the girl feemed to be " a favourite, he ought, if he gave her up, " to have by rights two flaves in return ; " but that he would confent, however, as a " compliment to the governor, to let her " be taken back, in confideration of her being " replaced by one prime flave. He added, " that the father of the girl had been on " board of his fhip the fame morning, in " order to fee his child, that he was prefent " at the interview, and that he had been " much affected at the concern fhewn on " both fides; but he remarked again that 66 flaves

" flaves were fcarce. The governor, under " all the circumstances of the cafe, could not interfere any farther. The father went off 66 " however in quest of a flave, which he " feems not to have been able eafily to pro-. " cure ; for he did not return till a very long " time after, when the fhip was gone."

The two following ftories furnish two nearly fimilar inftances of the mode in which the chiefs decide in fuppofed cafes of adultery between their wives and the inferior natives : the former cafe, in which the proceeding is more mild, describes the conduct of an African chief; the latter, in which the juffice was more fummary, that of an European chief who has put on African manners.

- " A native was brought to me by one of our fchool-mafters, who implored .. 66 our protection, having just escaped from 66 the hands of the chief of the nearest town 66 to us, who, as he faid, had put him into •• confinement and threatened to fell him, 66 on a charge of adultery with one of his " wives, unlefs he would pay down a certain " fum, which it was out of his power to " command : the man curfed the flave-factory as the caufe of all his mifery, and declared " " himfelf innocent of the charge." The principal point here to be noticed is, that the chief, or head-man, who threatened to fell the native, acted in this cafe by his own fingle authority, and, like feveral other chiefs who will be mentioned, feems not to have been been amenable to any fuperior on account of the judgment he might give in this or any fimilar caufe, between himfelf and the people of the town belonging to him.

The cafe between the native and the European is as follows :--- "A native of Sierra " Leone who has lived a great many years " as a grumetta, or free labourer, at a neigh-" bouring European flave-factory, has been " fold on the ground of his having com-" mitted adultery with one of the European " flave-factor's wives. The European flave-" factor fold him to a flave-fhip, avowing this " to be his reafon, without even the form of " a trial." Five white men, and a variety of natives alfo, are mentioned as competent witneffes of this circumflance, to which fome further reference will be made hereafter.

A ftriking fpecimen of African juffice is afforded by the following fhort and apparently well authenticated ftory.

" On one of the rivers neareft to us, there is a town, where a king or chief refides, and where an European alfo lives who keeps a flave-factory. The king having got drunk one day, talked of flogging the flave-factor: the people of the king were accordingly proceeding to do it, and would have actually fulfilled their intention, if the flave-factor had not elcaped to his own houfe and barricaded it. When the king grew fober the flave-factor demanded fatisfaction; upon which the king, " in " in order to conciliate him after what had " paffed, fold him two of his people."

The fubfequent quotation furnishes fome ftrong evidence of the very general drunkennefs which has been introduced among the chiefs and men of influence on the coaft: the natural alliance fubfifting between drunkennefs and the Slave-Trade, and their mutual influence on each other, will here alfo be again exhibited.

---- " Six or feven of the native chiefs. " from all the nearest towns, came to renew " their applications for rum : their perfeve- rance is aftonishing. By way of forcing " us into a compliance with their requeft, one of them observed, that if we would 66 not give him liquor he should apply to 66 the flave-factory, and fhould take his bro-65 " ther thither for a pawn. However, even this had no effect ; the Governor continued 66 firm, and at the fame time endeavoured to 66 " explain to them the motives of his refufal. " They then faid that there was no palaver 66 (that is, no caufe of quarrel) but they were 66 evidently chagrined. Having however partaken of our dinner, they were brought 46 $6 into tolerable humour, and I am in hopes 46 that these applications for rum will at length ceafe.' **

The following accounts are given, as to the fubftance of them, precifely as they are related to the Directors, in whofe opinion they are too important to be withheld.

ss I

" I must mention fome proceedings " of a British commander in this part, that " feem to me of a most nefarious nature. " A number of black mariners had been " hired to affift in navigating fome French " fhips trading on this coaft : fix of the fhips " have been captured, and the black failors " found on board, amounting to nineteen in " number, though they were free men, and " receiving wages, have been all fold for flaves, " one mulatto child only excepted. It is " painful to witnefs fuch horrid acts of in-" juffice. Why are not the French feamen " put up to auction in the fame ignominious " manner? Or why is this difference be-" tween black men and white? The cap-" tured French failors were at war with us, " and they are not fold; but the blacks are. " all fent to the flave-factory and fold at " public auction, together with the goods " that formed the cargo: one or two of " them were free men of this neighbourhood, " and fome of them were not only free, but " they are the fons of chiefs; one of them " fon of the king of Sallum. It is true the " British flave-factor who bought them, was " fo good as to fay that he would forbear to " fend them off the country, fo that their .. friends might redeem them whenfoever " they thought fit to fend other flaves in " their room. I am disposed to believe his " profeffions, but at the fame time it is " dreadful to think of the contempt that is " here

" here fhewn to juffice. I would not allow " myfelf at first to believe what I heard on " this fubject; but I faw them knocked down " myfelf, at the price of about twenty pounds " a piece."

- "Another French ship has been made a prize (by a different captor), and three " .. or four free natives found on board have " been fold to the neighbouring flave-factory. "We remonstrated with the captain who took her, on the impropriety of felling free people. He admitted it, but faid he must " receive fome money for their ranfom, or he could not think of parting with them. " " We upon this offered him money, but he then faid No, he must have flaves in their 66 place, as he was in want of flaves, and " that they must be four feet four inches " high." 46

Another inftance is mentioned of the fale of feveral free women, who were found on board a French fhip that was captured, having having been left there as pledges. The captain of the British privateer who took the fhip was formerly a flave-trader.

The free Africans fold by the feveral captors of the above mentioned French veffels, were most of them eventually redeemed, being natives of the neighbouring coast. The captors however feem to have profited by their fale, and to have taken no part in promoting their redemption.

The Directors by no means think that the H 3 difguft difguft which will be raifed by the next flory which they shall recite, is a fufficient reason for withholding it; especially as another of the fources by which the Slave Trade is supplied with its victims, is exhibited at the end of it.

" A grumetta, or free labourer, be-" longing to an European trader a little way " to the north, was accused of theft by his " mafter. The labourer, according to the " fuperstitious custom of the country, de-" manded to be tried by the red water; that " is, by drinking a fpecies of water fufpected " to be poifonous, the effect of which is fup-" posed to determine his innocence or guilt. " The British flave-trader after some time " confented; the king of the country was " fummoned, and made his appearance to-66 gether with all his family and attendants. " The common preliminaries being adjusted, " the poor man drank one draught of the " water, and then began to fwell; prefently " afterwards he fell down dead, his belly " burfting. On this the king very folemnly " pronounced fentence against him, and then " proceeded to condemn all his family to " flavery. They were feized, and afterwards " fold. During the trial two men with clubs " ftood on each fide of the accufed, in order " to be ready to knock out his brains as foon " as those fymptoms produced by the red " water, to which the natives attach guilt, " fhould appear. The white flave-trader who er was " was the mafter of this man, and agreed to " this mode of trial, is confidered very much " in the light of an African chief among the " natives of this part." Four different evidences of this are mentioned.

Although the proprietors are not yet prepared, by any thing that has been faid in this Report, to credit the degree of fuperstitious ignorance in which the natives of Africa are held (a fubject which will be treated hereafter); yet the following anecdote, bearing in fome measure on the Slave Trade, is here introduced.

" A man in a neighbouring town has been fold a little time ago, on the charge of having changed himfelf, by the help of witchcraft, into a leopard, and of having carried off, in that fhape, fome fowls and goats from the town of the nearest chief to us."

The fucceeding flory may ferve to fhew the extreme horror which fome of the natives feel at the thought of being fent into flavery. —————" A native employed by us as a free " mariner, went down on board our fhip " Providence, to the river Sherbro: happen--" ing to fee fome rice come on board from " the factory on fhore, while he could not " difcover that any goods were given in ex-" change, he was feized with a dreadful fit " of terror, having taken up an idea that " there was an intention to fell him for a " flave, in barter for the goods which were H 4. " taken " taken into the ship. At the moment when " the factor from the fhore was ftepping on " board, being full of this perfuafion, he drew " a knife and endeavoured to ftab him, but " having miffed his aim he leaped overboard. " After fome difficulty he was recovered " out of the water, and was afked the reafon " of his conduct, which he explained in the 66 way that has been just mentioned. He 66 continued still to shew the greatest fear, " and declared he would rather die than be " fold as a flave. As it was fufpected that " he might have a fecret defign against his " own life, his hands were bound, but in " confequence of his earnest intreaty, and " his promife to remain quiet, they were a " little while after loofed. When midnight " came on he contrived to get into a canoe " alongfide the fhip, which he cut away, and 66 then drifted down the ftream, till he got " to a town at the river's mouth; here he " was feized and put in irons by the natives, " but on the captain's application to a chief " that is very friendly to us, he got his " liberty again. The idea of flavery having " got entire poffeffion of his brain, he foon afterwards threw himfelf into the water, 66 " and was given up for drowned. It proved " that he once more got on fhore, and being " again recovered by the Company, he was " carried back in the fhip to Freetown, " where he is now employed within the fettlement. It is thought by the phyficians that

" that the terror of being made a flave muft " have overpowered him fo much, as to have " occafioned in him fome derangement of " intellect, which may occafionally return in " fome fmall degree. He feels now very " much attached to the Company, and happy " in their fervice : his friends fay that he " never experienced the fmalleft diforder in " his mind before this fright happened."

The following quotations throw fome additional light on the nature of the Slave Trade, and coming from an immediate witnefs of the fcenes which are defcribed, cannot fail to intereft the Proprietors. The dates of thefe feveral occurrences were various.

-" I have been to day for fome time " on board a large flave-fhip in the river, " which had taken in two hundred and fifty " flaves; the men were chained together in " pairs by the hand and foot, the women " were kept apart. The young flaves ap-" peared cheerful and lively, but the old " ones shewed themselves to be much caft " down. At the approach of meal-time they " are obliged to fet up a fhout, and they " are made to clap their hands for exercife. " immediately before they begin to eat. I " was prefent when this was done, and could " fee thame and indignation in the coun-" tenances of those who were more ad-" vanced in years. One woman, who fpoke " a little English, begged of me to carry her · back ⁴⁶ back to Sierra Leone: fhe faid that fhe ⁴⁶ was a native of the opposite fhore of the ⁴⁷ river to Freetown, that her hufband had ⁴⁶ fold her in order to pay his debts, and ⁴⁶ that fhe had left a child behind her: at ⁴⁶ the mention of the child fhe wept."

" I was this morning again on board a flave-veffel; there was a woman on deck who had been newly fold, and fhe feemed to have been fhedding tears. I afked her the reafon of her forrow; fhe pointed to her breafts, from which the milk was flowing, and intimated that fhe had been torn from her infant, while it was yet unweaned. The captain alfo informed me that this was the cafe. She was from one of the neareft towns to us: fhe faid that fhe had been fold on account of her being faucy to the queen or headwoman in it."

"In walking through the neighbouring flave-yard, I faw a man about thirty-five years old in irons: he was a Mahometan, and could read and write Arabic. He was occafionally noify; fometimes he would fing a melancholy fong, then he would utter an earneft prayer, and then perhaps for a time he would obferve a dead filence. I afked the reafon of this ftrange conduct, and learned that it was in confequence of his ftrong feelings on his having been juft put, for the first time, in irons: I believe he had be-"gun "gun to wear them only the day before, "As we paffed he cried aloud to us, and endeavoured to hold up his irons to our view, which he ftruck with his hand in a very expressive manner, the tear ftarting in his eye. He feemed by his manner to be demanding the caufe of his confinement."

" The captain of an American flave-fhip " has been telling us that he loft a very fine " flave a few days ago by the fulks. The " following were his words, as nearly as I " can recollect. — The man (he faid) was " a Mahometan, and uncommonly well " made, and he looked to me as if he had " been fome perfon of confequence. When " he first came on board he was very much " caft down, but on finding that I allowed " him to walk at large, he got a little more " reconciled to the fhip. When the number " of my flaves grew to be fuch that I could " not let them have their liberty any longer, " I put this man in irons like the reft, and " upon this his fpirits funk down again to " fuch a degree that he never recovered it. " He complained of a pain at his heart, and " would not eat. The ufual means were tried " with him, but it feemed all in vain, for " he continued to reject food altogether, ex-" cept when I myfelf flood by and made " him eat. I offered him fome of the beft " things in the fhip, and left no method un-" tried with him, for I had fet my heart on " faving " faving him. I am perfuaded he would " have brought me three hundred dollars in " the Weft Indies; but nothing would fuc-" ceed. He faid from the firft that he was " determined to die, and accordingly fo he " did after lingering for the fpace of nine " days. I affure you, gentlemen, I felt very " forry on the occafion, for I dare fay I loft " three hundred dollars by his death, and " to fuch a man as me that is a very heavy " lofs."

The two following dialogues will exhibit, in a ftill ftranger point of view, the manner in which the enormities that have just been charged on the Slave Trade are plainly acknowledged on the coaft, and fometimes even by the perpetrators themfelves. They will alfo tend to fhew in what manner those Europeans who are become familiar with the iniquitous fcenes commonly going on in Africa, have been brought to tolerate them in their minds, and to accommodate their feelings to them; how completely they have lost fight of every real principle of justice, and have learnt to fubftitute a morality of their own, to which they attach a certain degree of credit, which however evidently amounts to nothing higher than a difavowal of fome horrible enormities, and is in fact only a more deliberate and effectual fystem of injustice, cruelty, and oppression.

" The following is the fubftance of a conthe verfation which I have been holding with " an " an English flave-factor, who has been living " for fome years a little way to the fouth. " and has had full opportunity of acquainting " himfelf with all the practices of the Slave " Trade. The flave-factor having fpoken " of the late mulatto trader (the fame perfon " of whofe ravages the Proprietors have " heard fo much) in rather ftrong and fa-" vourable terms, having mentioned him as " a very gentleman-like, well-educated, fen-" fible, and respectable kind of man, I was " induced to afk, in the progrefs of the con-" verfation, whether he had not been guilty " of many exceffes all around his own neigh-" bourhood." ---- " Exceffes ! No. He " would make war fometimes on the head-" men that owed him money, and would " fell fome of their people in order to pay " himfelf, if he could catch them; but this " was only when he had fome just debts that " were unfatisfied : or he might perhaps " carry off the inhabitants of a town, when " the king or father of it gave him per-" miffion, he having first bought from the " king an express authority to take them. " He was a good man on the whole, and a " man of bumanity : for he by no means fhed " all the blood he might, nor did he always " fell every one of those he had a right to " fell. For inftance, there is the chief now " living near Freetown, who was adjudged " to be his property as well as all his gene-" ration; but the chief himfelf has never vet e yet been fold, which is to be looked upon " as a mere act of forbearance in the mulatto 66 trader ; I confider the fentence however to be still in force against him."----" Did 66 66 not the mulatto trader order an attack on èc. the neighbouring island, on which occasion ć6 the proprietor of it was killed in defending 66 himfelf; and is it not confidered by the ċ. furviving friends of the proprietor that this 66 attack was an act of great injuffice ?"-----66 The proprietor well deferved to be at-66 tacked, for there is reafon to think he was 66 at that very time intending to attack the 66 mulatto trader."----" I understand that $6 this affair is by no means over, and that 46 the fucceffors of this proprietor intend to .. retaliate on the fucceffors of the mulatto .. chief, when they have an opportunity."---I believe they do, but it ill becomes them 46 66 to call in queftion the conduct of the 66 mulatto chief, for they fhould confider how " much worfe things their own father ufed " to do. I will give you a fpecimen of his 66 proceedings. The old man has been known 46 to fail up a river with fome large craft fol-" lowing him, and to land at a confiderable 46 town under a great flew of friendship. 66 Having called the head-men and all the 66 people together, he has made them a 66 fpeech, remarking how very fhamefully 66 they had been used by all former traders, 66 and affuring them that he was come to do 66 them good, and to trade fairly with them as es with " with friends and brothers. He has next " told them, that, as a proof of his friend-" fhip, he has brought a puncheon or two " of rum with him, which he has then " opened and invited them to fit round and " drink. On the approach of night, when " he has got them thoroughly intoxicated, " he has given the fignal to his people in the " craft, who have come up and fecured all " the party in fetters and carried them down " to the river's mouth, where he has fold " every one of them that was worth pur-" chafing, to fome flave-fhip that was all the " while in waiting. Many other things of " this kind used to be done by this old pro-" prietor. But as to the mulatto trader, he " never did fuch things as thefe; he would " never use treachery, neither would he " attack a town without having reafon for " it; but the other man used to plunder " without diffinction." ---- " Does the fuc-" ceffor of the mulatto trader take the fame " means of recovering debts as his prede-" ceffor did ?"____ " No, be is too eafy."____ " Is it not an unpleafant thing to carry on a " trade fo full of enormities as you defcribe " the Slave Trade to be?"----" It is no " doubt a bad trade, but it is very profitable. " I hate it, and would get out of it to-mor-" row if I knew of another line in which I " could get the fame money."

The conversation that follows, though not altogether unlike the former in its ftile, refers to fome different points, and is one of a much more fhamelefs kind. It occurred with a flave-captain on the coaft, of whom however it fhould be obferved that he certainly furpaffes most of his brethren in effrontery and cruelty of disposition. The effects produced by the Slave Trade on the minds of Europeans, which nothing can shew more clearly than the recital of these dialogues, constitute a consideration of such great importance in the opinion of the Directors, as to outweigh every objection to the quotation of them.

---- " A flave-veffel, which has been " waiting fome time in the neighbouring " river for her loading of flaves, arrived " here. The captain has been complaining " bitterly of his tedious detention, and in " the courfe of the conversation he went the " length of obferving, that if he had been " well manned he would not have allowed " the trader with whom he had been deal-" ing, to detain him as he had done. For " (faid he) there was a large town directly " oppofite the place where my veffel lay, " and if my hands on board had been fuf-" ficient I would have carried off fome of " the people. I asked him, whether taking " away the people, in that manner, was a " common thing: O not at all uncommon " (replied he) we do thefe things every day " on the Gold Coaft, we call it panyaring. " If a native in that part is not fo fpeedy as " he

" he fhould be in his payments, you man " your boats towards the dufk of the even-" ing, and bid your failors go up to any " town that is rather near, where they catch " as many people as they can, no matter " whether it be your debtor's town or not. "Towards the end of our conversation,

"Towards the end of our conversation, he very gravely affured me that he had never known any acts of cruelty committed in the Slave Trade."——" But are not thefe things cruelties ?"——" O no, thefe are not cruelties, they are matters of courfe; there is no carrying on the trade without fuch things as thefe."

That the Slave Trade has not unfrequently iffued in the fudden deftruction of those immediately engaged in it, and that no feverities can operate to the certain prevention of these dreadful evils, the following accounts of the cutting off of flave-fhips, which have all been furnished from the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone, and are most of them very recent cafes, will fufficiently teftify.

" I have juft heard that an American brig, commanded by Captain —, who I underftand was outlawed in England, has been cut off by the flaves, feven or eight leagues to the northward of Cape Sierra Leone. A fingle flave having armed himfelf with an axe began the attack, rufhed into the cabin, and laid open the captain's face and breaft; he alfo wounded a paffenger who was on board very feverely; as the feamen made no refiftance "they " they were permitted to go off in the boat, " carrying the wounded people away with " them. The captain died. The flave-fhip " was retaken by a Liverpool veffel, after " an encounter in which fome of the flaves " were killed."

The following account of a very defperate ftruggle on board a flave-fhip, forms part of a confiderable detail of occurrences which do not altogether bear on the prefent fubject. It is but candid to obferve that the war which will here be fpoken of, a war indeed of a moft extraordinary and perhaps unprecedented kind, appears in no refpect to have arifen out of the Slave Trade. The dangers attending this traffic are however ftrongly evinced by the ftory which will be given.

" I have got confiderable light into the hiftory of Mahady, the famous Mahometan prophet, who appeared in < 6 thefe parts with an immenfe concourfe of  " followers, about three years ago. When " he was killed, fome of his generals con-" tended together for the maftery, and one " of them was made a prifoner of war by his antagonift, who immediately fold him 6 5 .. to a French flave-flip that was lying off a .. factory not far from Sierra Leone. There he carried himfelf with a fullen dignity, $6 and, even in chains, he would addrefs his .. " fellow flaves in his accustomed tone of .. authority and command, as if he were " ftill a man whom no one would dare to difobev 1 2

" difobey. I heard this from a flave-trader who both beheld him a prifoner on board " the flave-fhip, and had alfo formerly feen " him in the quality of a great chief or " general in Mahady's train. The flave-" trader recollected the chief, and the captive " chief alfo recognized the flave-trader. On " the fame day, when the author of my in-" telligence was on board, it happened that " the chief was permitted to take a walk on " deck without his ufual fetters. No fooner " had the captain of the fhip fet down to " dinner with his friends in the cabin, than " an appointed fignal was given. The flaves " role to a man, knocked off each other's " fetters, and, headed by this chief, made an " attack on the barricade, with the view of " forcing their way into the cabin ; they were " unable however to effect their purpofe; the "guns were pointed at them, fome were " killed, many leaped into the fea, and the " infurrection was quelled. The captain was " now proceeding to inquire who was the " ringleader, when this chief came boldly " forward and avowed that he had fet on " foot and headed the infurrection, adding " that his wifh undoubtedly had been to " give liberty to all the flaves on board, and " that he regretted his defeat on their ac-" count ; but that as to himfelf he was well " fatisfied with the iffue of the conteft, being " now happy in the profpect of immediately " obtaining what he termed his own liberty : " the " the captain did not delay to grant him the " object of his wifh, and hung him up in-" ftantly to the yard arm, as an example to " the other infurgents."

The Directors think it may not be improper to obferve, that they do not wifh to be confidered as approving in the fmalleft degree the leading principles of this chief, who appears to have been actuated by a fpirit of pride and a difdain of life evidently unchriftian. The dangers of the Slave Trade, and the impoffibility of effectually guarding against infurrection, not the motives of the infurgents, of which the purity is not to be expected, are the points under confideration.

The Directors will proceed to add another circumftantial account of a no lefs fierce and very recent conflict on board a flave-fhip.

A veffel from the northward brought the account of the cutting off of a Bofton flave-fhip, by about forty flaves who were 66 on board. Being kept only in fingle chains 66 " they took an opportunity, while the captain and chief part of the crew were below, to ... overpower the fecond mate and a feaman 66 on the deck, whom they cut in pieces 66 .. and threw overboard; they then began to attack the cabin, but being unable to force .. " the door they brought the guns from the deck to bear upon it. The captain and .. 66 the reft of his crew were now induced to furrender themfelves on condition of hav-" ing their lives fpared, and the fhip given 64 to 3

" to them as foon as they fhould have navigated her into fome place, from whence " the flaves might efcape. No fooner how-" ever had the captain and chief mate come " on the deck than they were both put to death; but the feamen were preferved for " the fake of having their help in navigating " the veffel, which they accordingly con-" ducted towards the mouth of a neighbour-" ing river. Happening fuddenly to run " aground, three of the feamen were fent " off in a boat to drop an anchor aftern, " which they had no fooner done than they " pulled away from the fhip with all their " might, fucceeded in gaining the fhore, and " prefently brought down with them a flave " trader, a refident in that part, who having put himfelf and as many hands as he could get on board an armed fchooner, attempted " the recovery of the veffel: an obftinate " engagement enfued, in which the flave-" trader had three men killed and four " wounded. The flaves having expended all " their ammunition formed a raft, by the " help of which they efcaped to the fhore; " and it appeared on taking poffeffion of the " fhip that feveral on their fide had alfo fallen in the battle. Of the flaves who .. " gained the land fome were immediately " killed; the reft, being eighteen in num-" ber, were at length intirely overpowered " by the natives, who were brought down " in crowds to the river fide by the noife of " the

" the firing: thefe eighteen being taken " prifoners were again fold for flaves."

One or two other recent inflances of the cutting off of flave-fhips in the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone, are mentioned to the Court, but the particulars are not transmitted.

The Directors will clofe this long enumeration of those general enormities of the Slave Trade, which have been brought to light through the eftablishment of the present colony, by giving a brief hiftory of the origin, progrefs, and end of an European flave-trader, who lately died at one of the neighbouring iflands to Sierra Leone, after a long refidence on the coaft, and who appears to have attained to a degree of ferocity and hardness of heart proportionate in some meafure to his fucceffes in this bloody traffic. As this man appears to have neither friend nor connection left, the Directors will think themfelves under no obligation to use any concealment on the fubject. His name was Ormond; he went out from England about thirty-five years ago, in the capacity of cabinboy to a flave-fhip, and was retained as an affiftant in a flave-factory on the Sierra Leone river: in procefs of time he fet up a factory for himfelf, in a neighbouring part towards the north, and though unable to write or read, he grew neverthelefs to be fo expert and accomplished a flave-trader that he realized, as it is fuppofed, about thirty thousand pounds. 14 pounds sterling. His cruelties were almost beyond belief. Two perfons, who feem to have had good means of information, have given the following account of them. " One " of these perfons, who had lived for fome " time near to him, faid, he knew it to be " a fact that it was his common practice to " kill all his unfaleable flaves, by tying a " ftone to their necks, and drowning them " in the river during the night," Nor was his cruelty confined to blacks; " being of-" fended by a white agent, or clerk, on one " Chriftmas-day, while drinking freely with " fome company, he ordered his flaves to " tie up the European, and then gave him " with his own hands four hundred lafhes. " The white factor died a few days after." The other perfon who fpoke of this flavetrader agreed as to his general character for barbarity, and mentioned his having heard the following inftance of it from an eye witnefs, namely, " that Ormond having caught " a black wife of his in a criminal connection " with one of his flaves, he tied them to-" gether to a tar-barrel, fet it on fire, and in " this manner burnt them both to death." It is observable also, that this favage by no means fell fhort of the natives of Africa in the degree of heathenish fuperstition to which he had attained; he had the fame firm truft with them in grigris, or charms, was fubject to filly fuperflitious fears, and had the ufual faith in witchcraft. Providence having thus per-permitted this man to become a fignal instance of a no lefs abandoned than fuccefsful flave-trader, was pleafed to allow that he fhould experience before he terminated his days the following viciffitude. A few years ago, having loft his health, he went to the Ifles de Los (which lie to the northward of Sierra Leone) for the fake of fea air and medical help, having confided all his affairs to a mulatto youth, who was his fon. Happening to have recently quarrelled with the Bagos, who are the natives that furround his place of refidence, and to have destroyed one of their towns, they took this opportunity to retaliate, and came down in a body to attack and plunder his factory. The flaves of Ormond being not much attached to their mafter, favoured the Bagos, and the place being taken they fhared in the general pillage; the buildings were all burnt; the goods in them, which are faid to have amounted to the value of twelve or fifteen hundred flaves (or near thirty thousand pounds) were either deftroyed or carried away; young Ormond and all who adhered to him were put to death; old Ormond lived to hear the news, but he died in about a month after.

The Directors have thought it proper to give the character of this man, principally with a view of exhibiting an inflance of the great influence of the Slave Trade, in deftroying the feelings, and depraving the human heart. The fame flory may ferve alfo to fhew, what crimes have been perpetrated with impunity by British subjects in Africa; and of what inftruments Great Britain has made use, in carrying on this detestable commerce.

The Directors however would by no means be underftood to impute to the general body of flave-traders on the coaft, atrocities equal to those which have been mentioned; at the fame time they think it right to obferve, that other inftances might if neceffary have been added, which would have exhibited very nearly the fame degree of guilt and cruelty.

In proceeding next to fpeak of the direct hindrances by which the Slave Trade will be fhewn to have obftructed the Company's views of Civilization, the Directors will dwell firft and chiefly, on two or three particular facts, adding indeed in the fequel, fome obfervations on the general contrariety which muft neceffarily exift between the principles of the Sierra Leone Company and those of the Slave Trade, even though no fuch specific hindrances as those which will be stated, should occur again.

The first instance that shall be named of a direct hindrance given by the Slave Trade to the Civilization, or rather indeed to the first colonization of Africa, will be one of a very interesting, and perhaps the Proprietors may think, of a rather ominous and discouraging kind, kind. The Directors allude to the overthrow or difperfion of the first colony of free blacks from hence, which as the following account will shew, may obviously be traced to the Slave Trade.

The Proprietors may recollect, that this fettlement, on which the first fubscribers to the prefent Sierra Leone Company founded a confiderable part of their hopes, was mentioned, in the opening of this Report, to have been broken up not very long after its eftablishment, in confequence of a difpute with the natives, in which the fettlers (apparently however not through their own fault) unhappily became involved. The circumftances were as follows. A native chief living within half a mile of Freetown, which is the fame fpot on which the free blacks from London originally placed themfelves, had loft, as he affirms, two individuals of his town, by the depredations of an American flave-captain, and had been fome time waiting for an opportunity of retaliating on any veffel from the fame country, that might come within his reach : the opportunity after a-while occurred ; a boat which was found to belong to an American ship, happening to pass up the river, was attacked and plundered by him and his people; the crew that were in her confifting of three or four men, were put to death, one only excepted, who efcaped, and conveyed the news to the neighbouring flave-factory, the place to which the boat had been been going. The principal agent of the factory, after fome confultation with the officers of a man of war then lying in the river, determined on becoming the avenger of the outrage. Some ineffectual attempts were first made to induce the Chief to come on board the frigate, but after an interval of two or three days, the flave-factor himfelf, together with a lieutenant from the King's fhip, and a body of British failors and marines, fet out on an expedition to the town of the chief, having alfo added to their party two of the free blacks from the new fettlement as their guides, who by living in the immediate neighbourhood, were of courfe acquainted with the road, and who were preffed, as they fay, most unwillingly into this fervice. On the approach of this armed body of men, the Chief and his people fled; the town was plundered and fet on fire; the flave-factor however, and the party with him from the King's ship, returning in the dusk of the evening, were fuddenly attacked by a difcharge of mulquetry from among the bufhes, and an engagement enfued, in which fome natives are faid to have fallen on the one fide, and the first lieutenant of the man of war and a ferjeant of marines were killed on the other, a few alfo being flightly wounded. One confequence of the flaughter that happened among the natives on this occafion, was, that the Chief used afterwards frequently to vow, that he must now retaliate again for the

This fcene of outrage produced, as it happened, no great mifchief or inconvenience to the flave-factory, which is fituated at fome diftance on an ifland in the river, and is alfo well fortified; but its confequences were fatal to the neighbouring and unprotected fettlement of free blacks. A palaver or council was called of all the furrounding Chiefs, who following the African cuftom of directing their vengeance for every mifchief done to them, against any perfons guilty or not guilty, whom they have within their power, and whom they imagine in the fmalleft degree connected with the authors of the injury; and having heard that in this cafe two individuals from the neighbouring colony were among the hoffile party, determined that the whole town of the free fettlers fhould be burned. The fentence was executed within three days, and the fettlers were difperfed. It is but doing juffice to the flave-factory to observe, that it afforded a temporary protection and fupport to feveral of the fettlers, during the first preffure of their distres.

The ftory that has now been recited deferves notice, not only as affording an explanation of the immediate caufe of the difperfion of the first colony which went from hence to Sierra Leone, but as a specimen also of of one of the kinds of danger to which every body of new fettlers in Africa muft neceffarily be more or lefs exposed, fo long as the Slave Trade is carrying on all around them. The events which happened in this cafe were none of them strange or extraordinary. An outrage is committed or fuppofed to be committed by a flave-captain, in the procuring of flaves; a blind and bloody act of vergeance on the part of the natives follows; the neighbouring flave-factory interferes, and the little adjoining fettlement is involved in the confequences of the guarrel. All thefe are accidents which belong to the very nature of the Slave Trade; they grow out of its or-dinary enormities, they fuit with its ferocious fpirit, and accord with its principles of injuffice : for the indifcriminate feizure of each others perfons, is the very lefton which is daily taught the Africans by the European factors, who blame no violence, revenge no injury, and difcourage no atrocity that tends to the extension of their own traffic; and who, fo far as the Directors are informed, are not accuftomed to decline buying any man for a flave, on the ground of his having been unjufily brought into captivity. Indeed more than one inflance might eafily be pointed out, as the Directors conceive, in which the fame flave-factory which became the adminiftrator of juffice upon this occasion, has purchafed Africans, knowing them at the time of purchafe to be free men, knowing alfo that the the individual who offered them for fale, had himfelf feized them unjuftly, and had no fhadow of right to fell them. Nor do the Directors mention this by way of caffing particular reflections on any individual flavefactory; for they believe that the other flavefactories in Africa follow the fame cuftom, each thinking it perhaps a fufficient juftification to plead, that if it fhould be fo fingular as to decline making thefe purchases, other flave-factories would feel no fuch fcruples; or even if they did, that the captains of the fhips themfelves, without the intervention of a factory, would purchase and carry off the people who might have been rejected. And indeed it is reafonable to fuppofe, that the flave-factors on the coaft cannot be altogether infenfible of the very important diminution which might eventually be made in their trade, if the principle of inquiring into the mode of procuring the flaves fold to them. and of refufing those who might appear to have a just title to their freedom, should be once in any degree admitted. But whatever be the ground, on which the encouragement evidently given to the commission of outrages on the perfons of the natives, may be juffified in the imagination of the flave-dealers, it is furely not to be wondered at, if either they themfelves, or white men vifiting the coaft, or any neighbouring fettlement fuppofed to be connected with Europe, fhould occafionally feel feel the effects of the diffusion of these principles of injustice.

The Court having heard the circumftances which caufed the difperfion of the first colony, will not be furprifed if the Directors, anxious to provide against a return of the fame danger, should have felt that eager defire which has been stated in an early part of this Report, to enlarge the number of colonists, and should have urged on the Proprietors, as they did, the importance of forming at once a strong and respectable establishment.

Another evidence of the danger arifing from the Slave Trade to the perfonal fecurity of any neighbouring colonifts, is afforded by the following flory :

Some time before the establishment of the prefent Company, a British flave-trader who lived then in Sierra Leone river, but is lately removed, feized five free blacks (part of the colony from England which has been lately fpoken of) juftifying this violence on the ground of his having been wronged by one individual of their body, fomewhere at a diftance on the coaft, where he was employed in navigating a veffel belonging to this flavefactor. The country law warranted, as the factor faid, this mode of redreffing the grievance, and he feems therefore to have taken the first five fettlers he could meet with. He was induced, however, after fome time, to releafe releafe three of them gratuitoully, the two remaining prifoners being thought on confideration to afford that recompence for his lofs, which was fit and proper on the common principles of African justice. These two men, who were admitted to have no connection with the defaulter, nor any means of catching him, he having run away from the fhip when at the diftance of fome hundred miles from the fettlement, and whofe only crime was that they had formerly lived in the fame town with him, were kept by this British flave-trader fome time in chains, and then fold and put by him on board a flave-fhip that was on the point of failing; when a Mahometan chief, who happened to come from the interior country, took compaffion on their cafe, and, having advanced out of his own pocket about fifty pounds fterling for their redemption, releafed them and fent them home. The fame chief lately fell into fome diffreffes himfelf, and being in debt to one of the factories, was deprived of a favourite free boy, whom he had fent with a meffage to the factor, the boy being feized for the fatisfaction of the debt. The chief, half diffracted at the lofs, came down to Sierra Leone, and endeavoured in vain to trace the child from factory to factory: at length he called at Freetown, mentioned his prefent poverty, and the affliction which had brought him down to the coaft, and modefly afked to have the fifty pounds reftored to him. which K which he had formerly paid for the redemption of fome of the freemen of Granville Town, and had never claimed before. The Directors have mentioned all these circumftances together and in this place, though part of them might have been classed with the incidents enumerated fome time fince, because they wish to remark that the Governor and Council were led very carefully to investigate the whole of this interesting case; and they found from different concurring circumstances, that the main facts were precisely as has been stated. The fifty pounds were paid back to the chief by the Company, in confequence of this investigation.

The Directors have reason to think that feveral others of this first unprotected body of fettlers have been fold from time to time, and actually carried off the coaft. One is believed to have been kidnapped by a neighbouring black flave-trader; and an inftance has occurred of another having turned kidnapper himfelf; the natives whom he had feized and fold were however recovered, through the intervention of the Company, and the kidnapper was corporally punished. Some are also faid to have been fold for crimes charged against them. All these incidents however, the detection and punifhment of the individual who turned kidnapper alone excepted, happened antecedently to the formation of the prefent colony.

The Proprietors, after all the evidence that has

has been given, will not be furprifed if the infecurity of travellers, and the prevention of a free communication with the interior country, fhould be fpoken of as another hindrance to the views of the Company. The mention of this point, indeed, opens a wide field for reflection. It has appeared from many recent inveftigations, that the natives of Africa who live towards the coaft, are far more barbarous than those of the interior country; and that while the population towards the fea is extremely thin, and the little intercourfe that fubfifts in this part dangerous, there are to be found, on advancing further inland, many towns of confiderable magnitude; fome of which, lying in the very heart of Africa, are fuppofed to carry on much internal trade, and even to have made no fmall progrefs in Civilization. Whether, therefore, the immediate interefts of the Company, or the general benefit both of Africa and Europe, be contemplated, the opening of fome con-nection with the interior of this vaft continent, naturally prefents itfelf to the mind as a most defirable object. But here again the Slave Trade exerts its baneful influence. That general infecurity of perfons which refults from it; that diffolution of all government which it has caufed on many parts of the coaft; that drunkennefs which it has introduced among the native kings and chiefs; but, above all, perhaps, the dread of fecret machinations from the flave-traders themfelves felves, who by means of a chain of factories have a confiderable influence in the interior, and may be confidered alfo as holding the key of Africa in their hands, by poffeffing almost the entire empire of the coast—all these circumstances form, unquestionably, a very formidable hindrance in the way of every liberal and benevolent attempt to extend discoveries in Africa, with the view of ultimately setting on foot some peaceful and mutually advantageous intercourse with the natives of the interior parts.

The Proprietors are already informed that an attempt to penetrate into the country furrounding Sierra Leone, was made by the Company's mineralogist, in the very infancy of the colony. He was a perfon who to fome impatience of fpirit, joined a very ardent mind, a love of general knowledge, and great perfonal refpectability, as well as experience in his profession. He went from England for the purpose of extending his discoveries, having voluntarily offered his fervices to the Company, taking no falary, but fimply ftipulating, that if any profits fhould arife from his profeffional refearches, he fhould have the thare which mineralogists are commonly allowed, and that the expenses of his paffage and living at Sierra Leone fhould be borne by the Company. This first of the adventurers from Sierra Leone on a journey of difcovery, was attacked and plundered of all his goods, as was before flated, by a native chief, chief, and was obliged to return in fo deplorable a condition, that he appears to have died of the vexations and hardships he encountered. It would not have been unreafonable to fufpect that the Slave Trade might have imparted fome of its ferocity to this chief, even if no evidence of a politive connection between him and the flave-traders had been furnished. It has however happened, that a fubfequent attack on another fervant of the Company has been made by the fame chief, at the infligation, as the Directors are informed, of a French flavetrader; who reprefented to him and his people, that a fhip of the Sierra Leone Company trading in this river, had been equipped for the purpose of making war on all the French flave-factors living in his territories. On the arrival of the Company's veffel, the natives were alarmed; but the peaceable demeanor of the captain, who merely went up to buy fome rice in the principal town, foon allayed their fears. The chief however meeting with the captain while he was thus employed, and being very drunk at the time, was induced to make an affault upon him. The people aggravated the infult, tore the clothes from the captain's back, dragged him to another town about two miles off, and there kept him prifoner. When the chief grew fober, he began to reflect on what he had done, ordered the prifoner to be fet free, and made him fome K 3 prefents prefents by way of compensation for the infult.

The Directors will not add, in this place, any more obfervations on the hindrances which the Slave Trade has given to the Company, as the fame general fubject will neceffarily recur again, in fpeaking of the fleps that have been taken to promote Civilization. Yet before they difmifs the topic of the Slave Trade, they propose in confequence of its very great importance, briefly to recapitulate fome of the leading circumftances which have been flated.

It appears then, that the chief fources of the Slave Trade are debts, wars, crimes, and kidnapping. When debts are flated to be one of the fources of flavery, there may feem nothing on the first view very dreadful in the idea; but let the facts which have been mentioned on this fubject be put together, and they will be found to exhibit fuch a fystem of wickedness, and fuch a fcene of accumulated mifery, as would by no means have prefented itfelf to the mind, on a flight investigation.

In the first place it may be observed, from the concurrent testimonies which have been given, that if an African contracts a debt, it is not the debtor himself that is commonly fold for the discharge of it; an innocent perfon almost always pays the penalty: a wise, or a child, or some other near connection of the debtor, or perhaps some native resident in his his town, or fome stranger who had fought protection there, is the perfon that is carried off by the flave-trader. (a) On one occasion, as it has been shewn, a child is torn away from its father by a debtor, and the flavecaptain fails away with it before the parent can bring the prime flave demanded as a fubftitute. (b) In another inftance, a wife is fold by her hufband on account of a debt, and is feen weeping in the flave-fhip, having alfo left a young child behind her. (c) In a third cafe, a favourite free-boy having come down to the coaft with a mellage, is feized for the debt of his principal; and he alfo is fent from Africa, before any opportunity is afforded for his redemption. (d) In a fourth, two of the fettlers from England are fold, (three more having been alfo captured) on account of the debt of a townfinan who runs away from his captain, on another part of the coaft. When the cuftom of felling men in fatisfaction for debt is contemplated in other views, it becomes still more dreadful. The native chiefs appear to be encouraged to contract debts by the flave-traders themfelves, for the fake of that right of feizure which is known to follow. The very large credits given in Africa, which cannot be supposed to stand on the ordinary principles of com-merce, but feem peculiar to a trade in flaves, form perhaps one of the grand fupports of this traffic ; for fome facts which have appeared at Sierra Leone, unequivocally fhew that liberality of credit is made the means of legalizing all manner of enormities; it ferves the purpose either of subjecting a country to a flave-factor, or of fecuring quick difpatch to a flave-fhip. By these credits the Mulatto trader acquired his power over all the neighbouring chiefs, and enabled himfelf to depopulate the whole country around him, without violating the cuftoms of Africa, or forfeiting his character as a (e) 'good man and a man of humanity.' It is obvious alfo, that flave-captains coming to trade on the coaft, may make a no lefs extensive use of the fame fystem of credit. By unloading a part of their goods, and diftributing them among the African headmen. they eftablish a claim to feize both them and the inferior people : and (f) ' if therefore the crew of the flave-flip be flrong enough,' they need never wait long for their cargo, for they have only to refort, as one flave-captain did not fcruple to fay that he used to do. ' to the country law of (g) panyaring,' (b) In the Mandingo country it has been fhewn, that debts are the fource of kidnapping: for " the headmen getting into debt to Euro-" peans, are then put into confinement, in " confequence of which their people are " obliged to kidnap, in order to effect their

(e) page 125. (f) p. 128, (g) Ibid, (b) p. 105. redemption.³³ redemption." It may not be improper to remark, that there is no proceeding by which the Sierra Leone Company appear to have given fo much offence to the native chiefs, as by refufing to indulge them with the ufual African credit.

Wars are another fource of the Slave Trade. and might alfo feem, on a fuperficial confideration of the fubject, to rank amongst its least objectionable fources. But when a view of facts is taken, they are feen evidently and neceffarily to involve the most horrible enormities. The natives of Africa, fearing to live detached from each other, congregate in towns under the protection of fome headman, whom they commonly term their father: (i) he, being corrupted by liquor, is indulged with a very liberal loan of goods, and thus becomes involved in debt to the flave-factor : on the ground of this debt, war is made by the factor on the people; fome are killed, and many more taken, and fold into flavery, and thus the debt of the chief is difcharged. This is precifely the defcription of that multitude of little wars which were carried on by the great Mulatto flavetrader against all the inferior chiefs around him. From these wars others spring, and a long fucceffion of hoftilities is thus entailed on the chiefs and on the people. (k) A chief escapes from the Mulatto trader, with the refidue of the people of his town, to a neighbouring ifland: thence, for a confiderable period, he carries on a vindictive and at the fame a predatory war, with his adverfaries on the main land, taking occafionally forty prifoners at once from the mulatto trader, who would not be flow to retaliate in his turn ; and further victims are thus furnished on each fide to the Slave Trade. Some of thefe petty wars feem eminently productive to the traders; "(1) the chief of Quiaport " attacks the chief of Bourah, and fends to " the flave-factory many prifoners. The " chief of Bourah gathers all his ftrength, " and is put under the neceffity of feizing " double the number from his antagonift; " for he is not allowed to redeem his own " people, except by paying two for one." Nor are these smaller wars among the inferior chiefs the only wars productive of flavery. There is not one great nation in the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone which has not been reprefented, by credible witneffes, as being induced to go to war by the Slave Trade. (m) The female mulatto acknowledges, that when there is no demand for flaves, then there are no wars in the Mandingo country. " (n) The Foulahs, fays another evidence, " are perfectly well known to go to war for the fole purpofe of procuring flaves."

The people directly inland, adds another chief, go to war for flaves; our country being however now very much depopulated, and the paffage of the flaves from

" the remote parts being hindered by the " wars, the flave-factories have lately en-" deavoured to make up our quarrels, and " the adjacent country to Sierra Leone, " begins now to be at peace."

Crimes real or imputed form another principal ground on which perfons are condemned to flavery : adultery is one of the higheft : a native (o) chief in one cafe, and an European (p) chief in another, fells an inferior African on a charge of this fort ; but in each instance the chief acts on no other authority than his own will, and evidently gets the emolument arifing from the condemnation to himfelf. And here alfo let the drunkennefs and depravity of the African (q) chiefs, who are thus judges in their own caufe, be confidered; let the polygamy prevailing in Africa be taken into the account; nor let the obfervation of a native trader be forgotten, " (r) that it is common for chiefs when they " want goods, to give a hint to one of their " wives, to encourage adultery in the lower " natives." The other charges of criminality, which have been mentioned as fources of flavery, have been many of them fo flight, and accompanied with fuch indications of partiality and injuffice on the part of the judges, that the decifions aggravate the general horror excited by the comtemplation of this traffick. A whole town is doomed to flavery, the chief alone (s) excepted, for the crime of letting fome runaway flaves pafs through their district to the mountains. A woman from the next town is torn from her child (t) and fold, the milk ftill flowing from her breaft, merely as it feems for using impertinent language. (u) Two men are fold by a chief after a fit of intoxication, in order to make compensation to a flave-trader whom he had infulted in his drunkennefs. (x) One man is fold on a charge of having changed himfelf into a leopard. (y) The whole family of another poor wretch who had been put to death by red water, on a fuspicion of theft, is fold on account of his fuppofed offence. (z) The remarkable circumftance of the mulatto flave-trader's fetting up a flave to be a judge over his diffrict, the growing power of this judge, the court paid to him by the flave-traders, and the dread of coming near him, inftanced in the conduct of one of the natives, are also to be remembered.

The remaining fource of flavery is kidnapping, of which numerous inflances were given. (a) One of the Nova Scotians declares himfelf to have been formerly kidnapped from Sierra

(c) The Company's agent falls in with a party of natives, who are feen in the very act of kidnapping. (d) A free fettler from England is kidnapped by a neighbouring flave-trader. (e) Another free fettler turns kidnapper himfelf, but is detected by the Governor and Council, and receives the punifhment which he deferves. No lefs than three cafes occur in which British commanders are infected with the common contagion, and come under the denomination of kidnappers, fince they fell without fcruple the free mariners found on board the French ships which they had captured. (f) In one of these instances nineteen freemen are fold, many of them the fons of chiefs. coaft and the Foulah country; fo that the man who brings down flaves to the fea fide is often kidnapped himfelf on his return home. and fold to the fame factory, to whom he had been felling others. In the (1) Sufee country, fays another, kidnapping is frequent. In the Mandingo country mothers dare not truft their children out of their fight after fun fet, for fear of the kidnappers. The reafon of its general prevalence is obvious : (m) debts, as was before obferved, produce kidnapping : the impunity of the crime, through the facility of difpoling of the victims, produces kidnapping. Wars also produce kidnapping: "(n) I " myfelf, fays one chief, ufed during a five " years war to waylay and kidnap paffengers: " but this I own was a bad thing, juffified " only by the neceffity I was under of having " fome thing to give to the flave factories, for " the purchase of more ammunition." To all these instances are to be added the more than ordinary ravages afcribed to the Proprietor of a neighbouring ifland, (o) who made it his practice to fweep away the inhabitants of whole towns by treachery, when he had made them intoxicated, and of whom even the flave-factor complained that he used to ravage without diffinction.

These are the four sources from which the flaves furnished from the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone appear to have been supplied;

(1) See page 104. (m) p. 112. (n) p. 106. (o) p. 127. nor nor do the Directors conceive that any confiderable number can have been obtained from thefe parts by any lefs exceptionable means. Indeed it is reafonable to prefume that a multitude of atrocious acts have happened at Sierra Leone, in confequence of the flave-trade, which have been perpetrated in fecret, or kept back at leaft from the view of the Sierra Leone Company's agents.

The preceding account refpects indeed those flaves only who have been furnished from the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone, and not the general body of flaves fold in Sierra Leone river, of whom much the greater part are brought down from the interior country. The Directors conceive, however, that no one can have any right to assume that the case of inland flaves differs effentially from that of flaves taken on the Coast: the injustice and treachery practifed in taking them, and the fcenes of private wretchedness refulting from their captivity, can hardly fail to be fomewhat fimilar, in whatever part of Africa the fcene be laid in which the cases happen.

Let then the whole aggregate of mifery caufed by the Slave Trade be contemplated; let it be remembered that what has been defcribed is but a fample of the manner in which EIGHTY THOUSAND men are annually carried off from Africa, by the civilized nations of the world, and more effectially by Great Britain; let all the variety of incidental enormities mities which have been flated be brought to recollection; let the blood fpilt in (p) wars, let the cutting off of (q) flave fhips, let the acts of fuicide reforted to by the captives on fhipboard, and of wild and bloody (r) vengeance, by the incenfed natives on the fhore, of which a few specimens only have been given, be borne in mind. Let all the moral evil chargeable on this trade be duly confidered ; let the drunkennels, the treachery, the violation of all the natural feelings, through the felling of wives and children in difcharge of debts or in exchange for liquor, let the depraved habits communicated as by contagion to (s) British captains, failors, and (t) factors on the Coaft, and the enormous cruelties to which fome of them have been transported, be recollected ; above all, let the flop put to the Civilization of one fourth part of the habitable globe, and the guilt of hindering that light of revelation which has fo long fhone on Britain, from fhining on the innumerable tribes who inhabit the interior of that vaft continent, be added to the account; and on the other hand, let the prefent miferies of Africa be contrafted with the bleffings which might have refulted from a contrary conduct on the part of Great Britain; from the introduction of Chriftianity, from the communication of European knowledge, and from that promotion of industry, which is the fure refult of an honest. innocent, and peaceful commerce.-Let all thefe confiderations be put together, and the evil of the Slave Trade will appear indeed enormous; its hindrance to Civilization, and its hostility to every principle that is profelled by the Sierra Leone Company, become abundantly evident; and the opening profpects of Civilization which are about to be flated will be feen to be important, not only in refpect to their immediate confequences, but on account of their furnishing also the most fatisfactory evidence of the practicability of reverfing that cruel fystem which as yet prevails in Africa, and a favourable omen of an approaching change in the general condition of that hitherto unhappy Continent.

The fubverfion of the iniquitous trade in flaves was one of the motives which led to the inftitution of the Sierra Leone Company; and it is one of the objects to which those who have the management of its affairs, profefs that their beft endeavours shall be directed : they truft, however, that they shall not allow their deteftation of the trade to excite in them any perfonal ill-will towards the individuals engaged in it; and they feel a peculiar fatisfaction in obferving, that their government abroad, however their zeal in the caufe of its abolition may have been excited by the fcenes which they have witneffed, have at no time reforted either to any violent or underhand means of forwarding this object ; having neither neither interrupted the flave-traders forcibly themfelves, nor endeavoured to irritate either the natives or the Nova Scotians against them. It may be proper to add, that they have been far from encouraging any failors who thought themfelves cruelly used by their captains, or any flaves belonging to the fhips, or to the factories, to run away to their fettlement. Indeed, it is due to the Governor and Council to mention that they have acted with a peculiar degree of temper and moderation, on fome trying occafions; labouring to compose differences, to promote harmony and peace, and to prevent all private acts of vengeance. They have also made a point of exercifing equal juffice towards the flave-traders, and have given proofs of humanity and kindnefs towards them. In particular, they have re-ceived and entertained the fick Europeans from the flave-fhips, many of whom having been attracted to Freetown by the known falubrity of the air, or the expectation of getting good medical advice, have either been lodged in the houfes of fome of the fettlers at the Company's expense, or gratuitoully received into the public hospital.

As an inftance of the impartiality of the Governor and Council, it may be observed, that a complaint of ill usage having been made against fome of the natives, by the fame flave-captain whose enormous cruelties on ship-board, as well as custom of feizing the natives on shore, have appeared from a conversation verfation held with this perfon himfelf, which has been recited, the Governor and Council exerted their influence with the neighbouring head-man, to obtain a hearing of the cafe; in confequence of which the natives charged with having committed the infult, were brought before him; they however exculpated themfelves, the blame appearing to lie wholly on the fide of the flave-captain.

The following is an inftance of the protection afforded to a flave-trader by the Governor and Council, as well as of the care and prudence which have been exerted to prevent those acts of violence which arife out of the Slave Trade, from taking place on the Company's diftrict.

It has been flated that an European flavefactor (u) fold a free native in his fervice, without the form of a trial, on a charge of adultery with one of his wives; the fale of this perfon gave rife to the outrage now to be defcribed. "A French flave-factor who lives in " a neighbouring part, having come on fhore " on our fettlement, was met by a native, " who accufed him of having wrongfully fold " to a flave-fhip a free man (his brother) who " had ferved the factor faithfully, as a free " grumetta, during many years. The native " proceeded to collar the Frenchman, and " threatened to drag him to a neighbouring " town, that the difpute might be fettled; I

" refcued the European with fome difficulty, " being determined to forbid all fuch acts of " violence on our ground; but while I was " getting a boat in order to convey him out " of the fettlement, he fell again into the " hands of the fame native : by the help of " the Governor and another principal fervant " of the Company, I refcued him again, and " he got off in fafety to his veffel. The " Frenchman was to overwhelmed with ter-" ror, that he fancied every one of us his " enemies, and began begging that we would " put an end to his life ourfelves, and not " give him up to be murdered by the favages, " I was afraid of fome interference of the " Nova Scotians, many of whom were look-" ing on during this fcene, but they behaved " very well; in their feelings, however, they " feemed to lean ftrongly to the fide of the " natives. I told them that before any ftranger " fhould be forcibly carried off from our dif-" trict, we were determined that we ourfelves " would be carried off, and they were very " much reftrained by my holding this lan-" guage. On the following Sunday our clergy-" man noticed from the pulpit, how unbe-" coming it would be if any ftranger, how-" ever culpable he might have been, who " had come into the fettlement imagining he " was under our protection, fhould have his " perfon feized while he was in it: the Nova " Scotians approved of what was faid. I after-" wards made a complaint to the chief of the " diffrict

" diffrict in which the native who had col-" lared the Frenchman lives, and received a " formal apology for what had paffed, being " affured that no fuch outrage fhould be com-" mitted in future. Soon after this, I found " that the Frenchman had foread about a ftory, " that the affault of the native had been inf-" tigated by us, and had been altogether an " affair of our contrivance. The poor man was " certainly fo terrified that he might not have " been a judge of what paffed at the time of " the affault; belides, he would feel as a flave-" dealer a ftrong prejudice against us : but I " think I would fubmit to be again traduced " by him rather than let any violence be com-" mitted on our ground." This flave-trader is the fame man who inftigated the drunken chief to commit an outrage on the perfon of one of the Company's Captains, which he did very foon after his own refcue happened.

Although the Governor and Council, in conformity with the principles recommended to them by the Directors, have adopted this pacific line of conduct, fome inftances have certainly arifen of the Company's interference with the interefts of the flave-traders, which the Directors fear may have been interpreted in fome measure into acts of hoftility, and become occasions of offence.

It is neceffary to introduce the incident which the Directors are now going to mention, by premifing that the legiflatures of feveral of the States of America have prohibited

the trade in flaves in certain cafes under heavy penalties.

An American fhip having arrived at the mouth of the Sierra Leone river, the fupercargo, who appears to have been very little informed of the principles of the Sierra Leone Company, went haftily to the Governor and Council, and made an offer of felling them the whole of her loading for a cargo of flaves; obferving that he would take no other articles in barter, and that he hoped they would favour him with all the flaves he wanted, in the courfe of a few days. One of the Council afked him how the American laws flood in respect to this trade. He faid the laws of that part of America from which he came, prohibited it in his cafe, inflicting forfeiture of the ship, and one thousand pounds fine upon the captain : But, added he, nobody will inform.' It was answered to him, 'Indeed, fir, you are mistaken; I myfelf shall inform if none elfe undertakes to do it.' ' I hope, fir, faid the fupercargo, you will not do fo unfriendly a thing.' ' I would rather, replied the member of Council, prevent evil than punish it; and I therefore give you warning, that if you carry off a fingle flave from this coaft, you shall find an information lodged against you in America.' The fupercargo then declared that what had dropped from him had not been fpoken in earnest, and that he had a great abhor.

abhorrence of the Slave Trade. The American ship appears to have quitted Sierra Leone River immediately after this conversation, to the obvious prejudice of the slave-factories in that quarter.

The Directors have received from Sierra Leone, a lift of all the American veffels which have been known to tranfgrefs the laws of their country, and they are taking meafures for conveying to the feveral legiflatures, whofe authority has been infulted, fufficient evidence of all the circumftances which may tend to the conviction and punifhment of the offenders.

One other flep taken by the Directors with the view of limiting, if poffible, fome of the exceffes of the Slave Trade, may be worthy of mention. When the information arrived of the fale of all the free-mariners found on board the captured French fhips, it was accompanied with an intimation of fome doubt having arifen in the minds of the Company's fervants abroad, whether they ought not to have taken on themfelves the redemption of these injured men: it was imagined that the price paid for their liberty might be recovered in England, by an action of debt against the British subjects who fold them. On the other hand, it was obvious that much expense would accrue from fending over all the neceffary witneffes from Africa; that there was also danger of failing in tome point of legal evidence, and that there must be a variety of uncertainties attending fuch a bufinefs: the Governor and Council were therefore, on the whole, afraid of adopting this ftep. The Court of Directors, however, on taking into confideration the various advantages that might arife from an avowal of their determination to interfere in future cafes of this fort, thought it right to fend out instructions, that if, in certain cafes which they fpecified, any neighbouring native fhould be unjuftly fold hereafter as a flave, either to or by any British fubject, the Governor and Council were to confider themfelves authorized to pay the price of fuch perfon's redemption, if no other means of reftoring the captive to liberty fhould be afforded. The communication of this intelligence to feveral of the neighbouring chiefs, is faid to have given confiderable fatiffaction.

The Directors having thus fpoken of the fteps which they have taken tending to prefcribe fome limits to the Slave Trade, and either to prevent or remedy a few of its greater enormities, fo far as concerns the immediate neighbourhood of Sierra Leone, will proceed next to defcribe fome of the direct efforts which they have made to fet on foot plans of Cultivation and industry, and to prepare the way for the introduction of Christianity and Civilization into those parts of Africa where they have any influence. The obftacles which the Slave Trade has prefented to the defigns of the Company, will again neceffarily appear in treating of this topic.

It is obvious that one of the most effectual means of promoting the Civilization of Africa, must be that of attempting to gain over fome of the principal kings or chiefs, to this great caufe. If any chief fituated in the neighbourhood of fertile land, over which he has an undifputed right, and having already grumettas under him, could be perfuaded to turn the labour of his people to the regular cultivation of the foil; if he could be induced for inftance, to take an European planter into his fervice, and to commit to him the direction of fuch industry as the chief could command; if he could be perfuaded alfo to protect and entertain a school-master, or misfionary, who might converse freely with the chief, and become an inftructor of all the furrounding people, a friendly connection and intercourfe being at the fame time eftablished between the native in queffion and the Sierra Leone government; it can hardly be doubted that, under the aufpices of any well-difpofed African uniting these advantages, the work of Civilization might advance with a rapid ftep.

The Directors will here flate the feveral obftacles to the adoption of any plan of cultivation by the native chiefs, which, under the the prefent circumftances of Africa, must naturally be expected to arife.

It has been already noticed, that the kings and head-men in the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone univerfally deal in flaves. Many private flave-traders have raifed themfelves into chiefs by means of this traffic, and all the more regular chiefs have become more or lefs dealers in flaves alfo; the difference between a chief, or king, who is alfo a flavetrader, and a flave-trader who has raifed himfelf into a chief, being principally this, that the king is the lefs powerful of the two, and is commonly alfo in debt to an European factory, to which he is therefore fubfervient; whereas the flave-trader is often rich and independent, having many head-men in his debt, who are confequently reduced into fubjection to him. The difficulty of interefting the African chiefs in schemes of cultivation, is a point on which it cannot be neceffary therefore to dwell; for it is obvious that, generally speaking, neither a king who is in league with a flave-factor, nor a chief who has acquired all that he has by the Slave Trade, can be expected to become the patron of a plan which has for its object the introduction of industry and the reformation of the manners of Africa. And indeed it may be added, that the Slave Trade prefents, both to the chiefs and the inferior dealers, profits often fo tempting, and attended alfo with fo little trouble, that habits of regular application application and labour feem not likely to be general in Africa, till this trade fhall ceafe. On the other hand it may be important to remark, that the Slave Trade has ferved to initiate the natives into the ufe of European articles, fome of which are confidered among them even as neceffaries of life. The tafte which has been thus created, may therefore be reafonably expected to operate as an effectual fpur to industry, as foon as ever that æra fhall arrive, when Africa fhall be required to give the produce of her land and labour, instead of her inhabitants themfelves, in payment for thefe neceffaries from Europe.

The large credits given in the Slave Trade may be mentioned alfo as an obftacle to any fudden dereliction of it, fince they render it very difficult for those chiefs who might be disposed to turn their thoughts to cultivation to call in their capital.

The prejudices which many native chiefs at first imbibed against the Company, may be named as another hindrance to the adoption of any plans of cultivation fuggested to them. The chiefs appear to have been taught to believe, that the Sierra Leone Company were about to become the general disturbers of the peace, by changing the customs of Africa; that they intended to usure the power of the chiefs, and, in the end, to drive them from their own territory; and, in particular, it feems to have been reported every where, to be one immediate object object of the Company, to encourage flaves of all defcriptions to run away from their mafters, by offering them an afylum in the fettlement. It is obvious that this impediment to a good understanding with the chiefs, is to be confidered as merely temporary.

Such are the obftacles which might have been naturally expected to oppofe, and which have in fact more or lefs oppofed, every attempt made by the Company to intereft the African chiefs in plans of civilization and industry. They are obstacles however, which, though many of them still operate with the natives in general, have been overcome in feveral individual instances, as the Directors will have the fatisfaction of shewing.

The circumftances which have enabled the Company occafionally to prevail over fo many formidable hindrances are not difficult to be explained. It may be remarked in the first place, that there are a few natives of fome confequence in Africa, who, though they owe their rife to the Slave Trade, never carried it on to any great extent themfelves, but are the fucceffors of deceafed flave-traders, and are growing now lefs and lefs difpofed to push that dangerous and bloody traffic, by which their property has been acquired. This is one defcription of chiefs from among whom the Company may be expected to make profelytes. To thefe may be added as many other flave-traders, or chiefs, (and they are likely to amount, in course of time, to no no fmall number in the whole) who may happen to be thrown into fome diffrefs through the Slave Trade; who may lofe a near relation or a friend through this traffic; or poffibly having been redeemed from a flave-fhip themfelves, may become affected by the confideration of having narrowly escaped that fate to which they are in the habit of configning others. Circumstances have already occurred at Sierra Leone, which have led the Directors to expect that fome converts to the caufe of the Company may, from time to time, be gained from perfons coming under this defcription. Again, there may be other Africans who may be induced, partly at leaft by higher principles, to favour the Company; who may be led, in fome measure, feriously to contemplate the mileries which the Slave Trade has brought upon their unhappy country, and may be prevailed upon, if a fair opening be afforded them, and the facrifice required of them be not too great, to become the inftruments of rendering the place of their own refidence a fcene of order and peaceful industry. Lastly, there may be fome African kings, or chiefs, who, ftruck with the improvements which they may have beheld at Freetown, or having been induced perhaps to vifit England, may return animated with the defire of imparting the bleffings they have witneffed, to their native country; who may be induced, poffibly by embracing Chriftian principles, to devote their their lives to the caufe, and may fland forward as the chief promoters of the Civilization of Africa, and the zealous friends of the Company.

That one or other of the principles alluded to has actually operated on the minds of feveral very confiderable chiefs, will be feen by the recitals which will now be given to the Court.

The Directors will introduce firft, a quotation from the journal of one of their fervants already frequently reforted to, which will defcribe an interview held with a neighbouring chief, about a year after the inftitution of the colony.

" Having received fome intimation of the " prejudices against us fubfisting in the mind " of this chief, I began my conversation " with obferving, that I feared our engage-" ments at home in the care of our infant " colony, might have afforded time for in-" terefted men to fpread abroad many re-" ports to our difadvantage: that it was true " we were not friends to the Slave Trade, but " that our plan was peaceably to draw the " natives from it, by fetting before them " other fources of wealth, and opening their " eyes to their own true interefts. He was, " to a certain degree, civil and polite in his " replies, but at first evidently far from " cordial; he allowed that we had many " enemies, and that he had been a good deal " alarmed for his property. I then explained " feveral

" feveral parts of our conduct, which I " found had been grofsly mifreprefented;  and affured him, in particular, that it was " not in the leaft our purpofe to decoy flaves " from their mafters (as he underftood it was " our principle to do), and that if we did " not feize and deliver them up when they " run away to our fettlement, yet we would " neither willingly shelter them, nor give " them employment. I offered education at " Sierra Leone to any of his young people, " and hinted that a feminary might be fet " up at his own place of refidence, if he " wished it. I then urged him to turn the " labour of his grumettas to the object of " cultivation, entering into long calculations " upon it, and proceeded to fet before him " the many advantages he would derive from " having his lands covered with cotton and " coffee, inftead of their being depopulated " as heretofore by the Slave Trade. He " was very inquifitive on this fubject, and " appeared rather to approve the plan, ex-" preffing however a doubt whether he " fhould find a market for his produce: I " anfwered, that we would make an agree-66 ment to take it off his hands at a certain " price. The conversation ended by his " obferving that my explanation was fatis-" factory, and that he wished fuccels to " the Company. I walked afterwards over " fome of the land of this chief, the foil of " which is excellent : cotton grows in great " abundance

" abundance, and the true indigo is feen in " feveral places."

The Directors have the fatisfaction of adding, that the disposition of this perfon to quit the Slave Trade and betake himfelf to cultivation, appears, by recent advices, tohave been confiderably ftrengthened; and fome meafures are flated to have been actually taken by him for this purpofe. The obftacles which have retarded the adoption of the fuggestions made to him by the Company, have been precifely fuch as might be expected; namely, his outftanding debts, which it has been found very difficult to get in, unlefs by accepting flaves in difcharge of them; his experience of the profits of the Slave Trade, by which all his property has been gained, and his mind of course to a certain degree influenced; and his temporary prejudices against the Company. On the other hand, the humanity for which this African is diffinguished, the growing liberality of his views, and above all perhaps the reduction which there has lately been in the demand for flaves through the war, as well as the late failure of mercantile credit in this country, feem at length to have operated on his mind fo effectually, as to turn the balance in favour of a fystem of cultivation.

Another observation, to the praise of this respectable African, feems proper to be added. It might naturally be prefumed from the circumstances cumftances which have been flated, that at the time when he followed the Slave Trade, he would be likely to exercife as much humanity as could eafily be made compatible with the profecution of fuch a commerce; and that he would probably therefore confine his purchases to flaves fetched from a diftance, giving protection to the people round him, even while he was inconfiderately encouraging the atrocities of the interior country. The truth of this prefumption is established by cenfures caft on him by the flave-traders. He is the very man (the fucceffor of the mulatto chief) who was charged by the British flave-captain with having made him wait fo long for flaves, being afraid to " make a haul" of his people, as " the fine fellow," his predeceffor, ufed to do; and whofe town therefore, the British captain faid he would have feized, "if his fhip had been well manned," in order to teach this African trader " a proper degree of fpirit." His want of the due qualifications for the Slave Trade has been likewife intimated by a British factor refident in that part; for when the latter was afked, " Does the fucceffor of the mulatto flave-trader take the fame means of recovering debts (namely, by laying wafte the towns of his debtor) which his predeceffor did ?" The anfwer was, " No, be is too eafy." The Directors find in the journal fent home, a testimony from the mouth of a third British fubject, no less to the praise of this this African, the degree of peace and fecurity which his mildnefs has introduced into the country round him, being intimated in words to the following purport : " I remember the " time (faid this flave-factor who dwelt on " a neighbouring ifland,) when, if I dif-" patched a grumetta up the country with " goods equal in value to one flave, I was " fure to have him back with a couple of " flaves in return for them within fix days : " but it will now take as many weeks to get " the fame number of flaves ; and yet I am " obliged to give more money for my flaves " than ever."

The Sierra Leone Company owe the fuccefs they have met with, throughout the diffrict they have now been fpeaking of, partly to the war, and partly to the remembrance of the miferies inflicted in the time of the mulatto flave-trader. They have derived a fimilar benefit from fome recent experience of the bitter confequences of the Slave Trade in the following cafe:

A Mahometan chief has been mentioned, who redeemed from a flave-fhip three of the free fettlers from London, and who came down to the fettlement with the view of obtaining the Company's affiftance, in the recovery of a free-boy detained for a debt by a flave-factor. The following observations made by this Mahometan may properly be added in this place.

He British fubject, no lets to

" He faid, that he had been taught to " look on this fettlement with a jealous eye, " and had therefore hitherto avoided all " intercourse with us, but that fome recent " misfortunes brought on him by the ma-" chinations of flave-traders, fome of which " he particularized, added to what he had " lately learnt respecting our conduct, had " made him fuspect the truth of what he had " been used to hear concerning us, and that " he was come to have his doubts cleared " up. After some general conversation, he " applied to me in the most earnest manner " for my affiftance in the recovery of " Famarah, (a very confiderable and diftin-" guished chief, carried off the coaft fome " time fince as a flave,) who had been his " intimate friend, and for whom he felt " deeply concerned. He afterwards fpoke " to me of the favourite free-boy, whom he " had just lost, and by way of inducing me " to exert myfelf in the recovery of thefe " captives, he named his own interference in " the redemption of our free fettlers, for " which he observed that he had been much " blamed as well as laughed at by the flave-" traders. Though I could give him little " hope of being able to recover either of " thefe two perfons, through the difficulty " of tracing them, he went away pleafed on " the whole with his vifit. He was par-" ticularly gratified by going with me to fee " the fchools; ' If I were a younger man, " faid M 2

" faid he, I should ftay here always; but, " as it is, I shall fend my children.' He 66 alfo fpoke of his having been driven, " through the arts of a British flave-trader, to the necessity of quitting his native place .. " of refidence; but observed, that he lived " now in a country affording fome produce, " which he fhould be happy to collect for us. I was much interefted both by the .. 66 conversation and manners of this visitor, " who is about fixty years old, of a good " appearance, with much benevolence in his .. countenance. His mind, which is na-" turally fagacious, being now bowed down " by his misfortunes, is more open to re-" ceive impreffions unfavourable to the Slave " Trade than that of most of his country-" men, and I truft we fhall attach him to " us."

The Directors will next add a very encouraging account of an interview with another chief.

" I waited on the chief of this river, who " is a perfon of confiderable confequence; " for though there are three kings in the 46 neighbourhood, he is faid to poffefs a  powerful influence over them, and to have had the nomination of them all. I was "  furprifed by the appearance of a man about ninety years old, ftill fenfible and active.  " I acquainted him with the motives of my " vifit, and the general principles of the " Sierra Leone Company. He entered very readily readily into our views, affured me that he .. would take our traders under his protec-66 tion, and alfo favour us in refpect to the  e6 cuftoms of his river : he promifed to fend 66 one of his boys to the fettlement for education, and expressed an intention of visit-66 ing it himfelf in the enfuing dry feafon. 66 66 He alfo offered protection to a miffionary, or schoolmaster, if we would fend him one, and faid he would take care to make " his fituation comfortable. I have met with no one of the natives more liberal in his .. views, or more clear in his ideas and manner 66 of conversation. He has divefted himfelf " wonderfully of all the African prejudices, " ridicules without fcruple the fuperfitition of 66 his countrymen, and particularly inveighs 66 " against the custom of facrificing to the " devil, who, faid he, ' must be himself a " creature of God.' Although occasionally " engaged in the Slave Trade, he feems to rejoice in the prospect of its abolition. " " Some years ago his town was deftroyed by " the mulatto flave-trader, and many of his " people were carried into captivity; he ftill waits an opportunity of revenging himfelf. " .. ----We have fuggefted to him the following proposition; that he should build on " " an ifland of his a house for a factory, and a rice-house, vefting in us the right of " .. poffeffion, and that he should furnish to a planter, whom we might fend thither, .. labourers enough to clear and plant the 66 " whole M 3

" whole of the island. I think it is likely that our propofal will be complied with, 46 46 and that a magazine may confequently be " established for the produce of the neighbouring country, which is very rich, a-.. $6 bounding with rice, ftock, and camwood. 66 If a schoolmaster, or missionary, should 46 fettle on the fpot propofed for the planta-.. tion, he would of courfe find a confider-.. able population around it, provided the .. cultivation fhould be carried on with fpirit; and he would alfo be within one or two 66 " hours diftance of feveral of the moft popu-" lous villages in thefe parts, to which he might occafionally migrate."

A very favourable fpecimen of the African character, and a most pleafing proof of the practicability of introducing various European improvements into that continent, are afforded by the following incident :

" A fhip of ours arrived lately from the river Gambia, with five natives in her; " one of them, of the name of Cuddy, is a chief, and principal trader refiding there; " 66 his figure and appearance are very prepoffeffing and fingular; he is well made, 66 66 and about fix feet three inches high : his 66 manners are civil and unconstrained, and his face is the picture of benevolence. He 46 is at the fame time modeft and diffident. $6 46 and afraid of faying a word by which he may offend against the truth. He was 66 dreffed after the fashion of his country, 66 " and

" and was uncommonly neat and clean, but " defpifed finery. He has rifen much in " my efteem during the fourteen days which " he has just been passing in my house, and " all the officers of the Company, as well as " the fettlers, have been uncommonly pleafed " with him. The circumstance in his cha-" racter which gratified me the moft, was, " that whatever he faw, he feemed to con-" template chiefly with the view of turning " it to the advantage of his country. He " has been using the greatest affiduity to " prevail on fome of the Nova Scotia fettlers to accompany him back to the Gambia, " " in order that they may inftruct his countrymen in their arts; and has fucceeded in 66 " procuring a good carpenter to go with him, who is to build him a houfe, and .. make him fome ploughs and utenfils for " hufbandry. The carpenter understands 66 making looms alfo, and Cuddy has it much " " at heart to introduce a broad loom among his people. He has perfuaded another 66 man to embark with him, who under-66 ftands ploughing, and can make fhingles, and other useful articles. Cuddy having " " long entertained a predilection for the " Company, has always fhewn great kind-" 66 nefs to their fervants, when they have " been in the Gambia, and he has built a " little town on the floop fide of that river, " to which he has given the name of Sierra Leone. Being curious in natural pro-66 " ductions. M4

" ductions, he fhewed to our botanist feve-" ral plants growing here which are useful " in dying, and in particular a tree which " is used in the Gambia for making the " indigo more durable."

The Directors will in the next place treat more particularly of the interior country. The chief information which they fhall offer on this fubject, will be comprized in a narrative of a journey lately undertaken into a large neighbouring kingdom by two of the Company's fervants.* The Directors have not introduced into the preceding parts of this Report any article of intelligence gained in this expedition, fince they conceived it to be defirable that all the chief circumftances relating to it fhould be prefented at one view to the Court.

Information having been brought to the Governor and Council by fome natives of

* It may be proper to remark, that the account of this expedition, as well as a variety of other matter introduced into this and the preceding chapter, was not inferted in the Report read to the Proprietors. Advices from Sierra Leone, dated the 6th of September, 1794, had been received at the time of fending the prefent Report to the prefs, which have furnifhed much additional intelligence. Thefe recent accounts are in almost every refpect more favourable than any which had preceded : they convey, neverthelefs, information of a diffurbance having arifen in the colony, through the violence of fome of the most difaffected and mifchievous of the Nova Scotians ; but the ringleaders having been taken up, or having left the fettlement, and the utmoil tranquillity prevailing at the time when the laft diffactes came away, which were dated feven or eight weeks fubfequent to the tumult, the government appear to be fully perfuaded that there is no reafon to apprehend any permanent or material ill confequences.

Foulahs, a large and powerful nation, § to the north-east of Sierra Leone, had expressed a defire to form an intercourfe with the colony, two gentlemen in the Company's fervice t offered to make an attempt to penetrate through a large, and as yet unknown tract of country, to his capital. They accordingly failed to the river Rionunes, which is to the north of Sierra Leone, obtained the neceffary interpreters and guides at the town of Kocundy, which lies a confiderable way up the river, and then fet out on foot in a party of about twenty perfons. They mention, with much thankfulnefs, their obligations to fome flave-traders in the neighbourhood of Kocundy, and in particular to a mulatto trader, who was of confiderable use to them in their fetting out.

It appeared in a fhort time after their leaving the Rionunes, that a confiderable intercourfe fublifted between the interior country and the upper parts of the river; for no lefs than five or fix hundred Foulahs were often feen in one day, carrying great loads of rice and ivory on their backs, which they were about to exchange for falt. The travellers t The Perfons who made this expedition were Mr. James Watt, already spoken of, and Mr. Winterbottom, brother to Dr. Winterbottom, the phyfician to the colony.

6 There appear to be feveral independent tribes or nations of Foulahs in Africa, of which this is probably one of the most confiderable.

found

found as they went forward, a number of fucceffive towns, diftant in general fix, eight, or ten miles from each other, in which they were always most hospitably received; the utmost fatisfaction as well as furprize being expressed at the appearance of white men, of whom none had ever been feen even at the diftance of a few days journey from the coaft. After travelling for fixteen days, through a country barren in many parts but fruitful in others, and remarkably full of cattle, and after paffing two or three fmall rivers, one of which was faid to empty itfelf into the river Gambia, they arrived at the town of Laby, which is diftant about two hundred miles, almost directly eastward or inland, from that part of the river Rionunes from which they fet out. on foot. Here they fpent three or four days, being most cordially received by the chief or king of the place, who is fubordinate to the king of the Foulahs. Laby is about two miles and a half in circumference, and is fuppofed to contain not lefs than five thoufand inhabitants: the ftate of civilization is much the fame here as in the farther part, which will be defcribed fhortly. From Laby they proceeded towards the capital of the Foulah kingdom, called Teembo, which is feventy-two miles further inland, and having experienced every where the fame hofpitality, they arrived there in the course of another week.

During fourteen days which they paffed

in the capital, they had many converfations, through the medium of interpreters, both with the king and with a perfon who acts as deputy to the king in his abfence, and with many other principal perfons. It appears that the country fubject to the king of the Foulahs, is about three hundred and fifty miles in length, from east to weft, and about two hundred miles in breadth, from north to fouth; and that the king exercifes a very arbitrary power, both in respect to the punishment of offences, and many other points, and, in particular, that he opens and fhuts up the markets and channels of trade just as he pleases. The town of Teembo is fuppofed to contain about feven thoufand inhabitants, and the fuperiority of the people of all these interior parts, to those on the coaft, is great, in most branches of civilization. The houfes here and at Laby, as well as at fome other places, are occafionally fpoken of in the journals from which this narrative is taken, as very good. The filver ornaments worn by fome of the chief women, are faid to be equal in value to 201. There are people at Laby and at Teembo, who work in iron, in filver, in wood, and in leather, and there is a manufacture of narrow cloths. The chief men are furnished with books, of which the fubject is generally either divinity or law; and the art of reading is common over the country, there being fchools for the instruction of children establishmonly used by the chief people, who are faid to ride out often for their amufement, and a fpecies of horfe-race or courfing occurred, at which the king invited the two ftrangers to attend. The foil is generally ftony; much of it is pasture; rice is cultivated in some parts, chiefly by the labour of the women, the men, a great proportion of whom are flaves, carrying away the produce on their backs. About one-third of the country is faid to be extremely fertile; the foil is dry, and the climate is thought very good. The nights and mornings were fometimes cold, and the thermometer was once as low as ;1 at half paft five in the morning, but it rofe to near 90 at noon. The profeffed religion of the country is Mahometanism, and there are many molques; but neither the priefts nor people appear to have much bigotry in their minds, though they do not fail to obferve the Mahometan ceremonies, praying five times a day. The punifhments which the king inflicts are fevere, efpecially in the cafe of difrespect shewn to his own authority; but it appears that no Foulahs are ever fold as flaves either for debts or crimes, and kidnapping feldom occurs, being probably not very practicable in the heart of the country. The Foulahs however have been ufed, till lately, to carry on a very confiderable Slave Trade by means of their wars; for they go to war avowedly for the purpole of of getting flaves, one of the tenets of their religion, which permits them to deftroy all whom they term infidels (a term which feems to include all their neighbours), affording them a convenient apology for every exercise of this horrible injustice. The fervants of the Company appear to have lost no opportunity of inveighing against the wickedness of these wars, and of inculcating the principles which govern the Sierra Leone Company on the minds both of the king, the chief priefts, and other principal perfons, as the following passages from one of the journals will fufficiently prove.

" In the morning I had a vifit from the " deputy king, who told me with a degree " of opennels which shocked me, that the fole object of their wars was to procure " " flaves, as they could not obtain the European goods they wanted without flaves, " and they could not get flaves without fight-46 " ing for them. I mentioned rice, ivory, and cattle, but he answered that they could " " not obtain a fufficient fupply of the articles " they most needed, in return for produce, " fince the factories would not furnish them " with guns, powder, and cloth, which they " confidered as the chief neceffaries, for any thing except flaves. I told him, that by 66 " following a trade in produce, they might " become rich without going to war for " flaves, a thing which must certainly be " very offenfive to that God to whom they " praved " prayed five times a day. " But these peo-" ple on whom we make war, returned he, " never pray to God : we do not go to war " with people who give God Almighty fer-" vice."

In an interview with the king himfelf the following conversation occurred :

" After having flated the views of the " Sierra Leone Company, I took the liberty " of remarking how wicked it was for one 66 nation to deftroy another. If these people, 66 faid I, have not fo much knowledge as 46 you have, you fhould endeavour to in-" ftruct them. There were prefent befides " the king, the head prieft and the chief " minifter, and they all fuffered me to pro-" ceed without interruption ; I was furprized " at their attention ; they all acknowledged " the truth of what I faid, and the king ob-" ferved, that if he could get guns and pow-" der and every thing elfe he wanted, for " ivory, rice, and cattle, he would foon have " done with the Slave Trade. I told him, " that if once the people of Africa knew the " Sierra Leone Company perfectly, I was " fure the wars would ceafe, and the nations " of Africa would be at peace with their neighbours. They all faid, they believed 66 " fo too."

The following is the fubftance of a converfation which occurred the day after:

" I waited on a head-man who had defired to fee me: I found him writing, but he " quickly " quickly laid afide his work. I had much " conversation with him fimilar to that which " I held with the king the night before. He " defended for fome time their religious wars, " but at last rather yielded, admitting that " they must be difpleafing to God : he still " faid, however, that their book defired them 66 to make war on every nation who would not do God fervice. I replied, that there " might be many good things in their book, 66 but that I was fure that paffage had been  26 put in by the devil. God was fo good and merciful himfelf, that he must hate 66 " every one that was fo cruel as to deftroy " his fellow creatures. The head-man did " not hefitate to fay, that if the Foulahs ", could get the articles they wanted without going to war, he would then believe that " going to war was offenfive to God ; but, " faid he, if we cannot get thefe things " without going to war for them, God then " cannot be angry with us for going to war, " efpecially as it is fo in our book."

One other circumstance respecting the Slave Trade, more lamentable than any which the Directors have yet mentioned, must be added in this place. The deputy of the king, after stating that the wars of the Foulahs were undertaken solely for the purpose of getting flaves, faid also, "that the old men and old "women who were captured in these wars, " and who were known to be unfaleable, were " put to death." These are the words used in in the journal of * one of the Company's fervants; the journal of the other reprefents the deputy of the king as faying, that the Foulahs "cut the throats" of the older captives, and it proceeds to mention, that when the cruelty of the practice was inveighed againft, he replied, that it was not fo cruel as letting the old people ftarve to death, adding alfo, that the nations on which they made war, would not feruple to do the fame.

That this enormous effusion of blood is another evil, in addition to those before enumerated, which is directly chargeable on the Slave Trade, the feveral quotations now given feem completely and diffinctly to prove; and on the other hand, that no fimilar effusion of blood can be supposed to happen, even among the fame people, in the case of able-bodied flaves returned or withheld for want of a market, the recital of the following circumflances will shew no less indisputably.

It has been already noticed, that by the breaking out of the war with France, a very great and fudden check was given to the Slave Trade on the coaft. It appears from the journals of this expedition, that the influence of the European war was no lefs ftrongly felt in thefe interior regions. The wars of Teembo ceafed about this period: the price of flaves at the fea-fide, fell from 160 to 120 bars. The king of the Foulahs in order to bring

bring the flave-traders to terms, forbade all his fubjects to carry flaves to the coaft, until 160 bars fhould again be offered, and the confequence of the flaves having been thus withheld (a few fmuggled ones excepted) is flated in the journal to be, that the Foulah country had become full of them.*

It has been mentioned in one part of the preceding body of information concerning the Slave Trade, that the Foulahs (who were at the fame time alfo flated to be known to go to war for flaves) were often kidnapped before they could return from carrying their captives down to the factories, by the freebooters who infeft the coaft. This intelligence is confirmed by the following incident, which, however, is not the only one occurring in this journey that might ferve to eftablift the fame point.

An old man called on the travellers when they were at Teembo, and begged them to make inquiry after his fon, who with fix others, fome of them relations of the king, had been feized in returning from the river Riopongas, about four years ago. They had been fold to the British flave-factor at the Isles de Los, and immediately shipped off, one only excepted, to the West Indies: by the Foulah king's interference this one was recovered: the old man faid, there was no ranfom that he should not be willing to pay for

* The journal indicates, though not very diffinctly, that they were put to work.

for his fon.* The writer of the journal adds, "I affured him, that the Governor of Sierra Leone would feel almost as much pleasure in reftoring his fon, as the father himfelf could feel in feeing him return, and that we should spare no pains in inquiring after him. At hearing me fay this, the old man's eyes glistened, and he left me, bleffing both the governor and myself, and affuring me that he should pray for me."

The Directors have the fatisfaction of obferving, that the two travellers appear both by the propriety and confiftency of their own conduct, and by the public declarations which they made of the principles which governed the conduct of the Sierra Leone Company, to have ingratiated themfelves much with the natives, and to have peculiarly poffeffed themfelves of the confidence of the chief people. The king being afked whether he fhould be willing to' encourage any European to fettle near him with a view to cultivation, readily answered, that he would furnish him with land, and cattle, and men for the purpofe. Much conversation passed at different times concerning the introduction of the plough, of which no one had ever heard in the Foulah country. The king of Laby offered to

• Two of the perfons fold are faid to have borne the name of Omar, another is called Hamadoo, and another Bubarcarrie; two others are mentioned under the name of Hamodoo, one of whom was the fon of this old man. The Directors have introduced their names with a view of promoting their redemption.

fend a fon to England for education, and a principal prieft expressed fome willingness to do the fame. Diligent inquiry was made both at Laby and Teembo, concerning the route to Tombuctoo, a town in the heart of Africa, supposed to be of the first magnitude, to which fome adventurers from the Affociation inftituted for promoting Difcoveries in the interior of Africa, have attempted to It was faid at Laby that a free penetrate. communication fubfifted with Tombuctoo, of which the diftance however was defcribed to be no lefs than a four months journey; fix kingdoms intervening between the country of the Foulah king and that of the king of Tombuctoo.* The kingdom of Genah, the neareft of the fix to Tombuctoo, and that of Tombuctoo itself, were spoken of as richer than any of the others that were named. The city of Cashna seems also to have been known at Laby, but the route thither was defcribed as hazardous.

On leaving Teembo, the Company's fervants thought proper to return by a different and rather more dangerous path; they were efcorted however by a large body of Foulahs, fent at the command of the king; the number of these amounting, during part of the journey, to no less than five or fix hundred. When this body of people arrived on the borders of the Sufee country, which it was necessary for the travellers to crofs in order to reach the fea by this path, a fufpicion arofe on the part of the Sufees, that the Foulahs were come to make war against them, under the pretext of conducting white men to the coaft ; on which occafion the Foulahs exhibited to the Sufees fome goods and flaves which they had with them, as a proof that they could have no defign of making war, and fucceeded in removing the fufpicion ; infomuch that it was determined at a meeting of Sufee chiefs, held in a neighbouring town of the Sufees, not only that the travellers, and the party with them who wished to proceed to Sierra Leone. fhould be permitted to pass, but also that the path through the Sufee country, which former wars had fhut, fhould become permanently open.

Four or five confiderable perfons from the Foulah king, and from other kings and chiefs, together with their fuite, came down to Freetown with the white travellers and paffed a few days there, arranged fome plans with a view to a commercial intercourfe, and returned full of admiration of what they had feen, and gratified in the higheft degree by their vifit. It has fince been learnt that the Foulahs who came on this embaffy, have got back to the borders of the Foulah kingdom, where their countrymen who came to meet them were fo much interefted at the firft recital of what had been heard and feen at Sierra Leone, Leone, that the party were kept together in converfation till day-break.

The fuccefs attending the journey which has been just described, has encouraged the idea of another and more important enterprize, upon which one of the travellers into the Foulah country, and another perion in the fervice of the Company, were, according to the last accounts, likely foon to enter. Their main object will be to penetrate to Tombuctoo, and the route taken will probably be that of the Foulah country. If the travellers should reach Tombuctoo, it will depend on the information which they will there receive, whether they shall trace back their fteps fouthward to Teembo and Sierra Leone, or fhall return directly weftward towards the Gambia, or attempt to pafs on through the middle of the continent of Africa, to the Mediterranean.

The Directors have had the fatisfaction of learning, not only that wars have ceafed in the parts near to Sierra Leone, fince the ftagnation of the demand for flaves; but that diftant places on the coaft, having felt the fame declenfion of the Slave Trade, have alfo enjoyed an unufual degree of peace. The very refpectable and intelligent native of the name of Cuddy, from the diftant river Gambia, mentioned, when he was at Freetown, that there were no longer any wars in any part of his neighbourbood, and that the few flaves flaves fold there, the number of whom was diminifhing daily, came from the remote country of Gallam. He is faid to have added the following words: "What fhould a man " go to war for now? There is nothing to " make people go to war: no price for flaves " —no fhip to take them—no goods to give " for them! Suppofe fhips come plenty, " aye, then people go to war again!"

The declention of the Slave Trade in the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone, appears from many proofs to have been very great. The Governor and Council fuppofe, that not more than one-fifth of the ufual number of flaves are now carried off the adjacent Coaft. The French flave-factory near Freetown has been already mentioned to be relinquished, and an individual British flave-factor has been alfo ftated to have removed himfelf from Sierra Leone river. One of the chief neighbouring factories, fituated in the Isles de Los, is on the point of being given up alfo. The flavefactory of Bance Island, the only one remaining either in the river Sierra Leone or in its immediate neighbourhood, is thought to apply itfelf more than formerly to the collection of produce, having alfo fet on foot a cotton plantation, worked by native labourers, a measure which the inflitution of the Sierra Leone Company appears to have fuggested. A flave-factor, of the name of Wilkinfon, has declared that he will guit the trade, and has afked leave to transfer his property property (amounting to about two thousand pounds) to Freetown, offering to conform himself to all the laws of the colony, if he should be permitted to settle there. *

The Governor and Council appear to have taken fome pains in inquiring what has been done with the flaves who have either been withheld or returned through the want of purchafers, and what would be likely to be their fate on a total abolition of the Slave Trade. A refpectable chief from Port Logo, an upper branch of the Sierra Leone river, being afked whether refufed prifoners were killed, he answered, " No, that is never done in Port Logo; we carry them home and make them work."---- "But will they not run away ?"-----" If they do, we can't help that, we can't kill them. If a man is too old to fell, he is too old to do you harm; what should you kill him for ?"---- " Did vou ever fee any refufed flaves killed ?"-----"No; I am an old man, but I never faw that: if they do that in another country I don't know that."

"Two other intelligent native traders, from the interior country, mentioned the great number of flaves now on the coaft waiting for purchafers, and faid they were at that time kept confined: they named one trader who had no lefs than two hundred in his pofferfion. On being afked

" why they were not employed in cutting " wood, planting rice, or fome other em-" ployment, he replied, that there might be " danger of infurrection from fo many being " employed all together, and that they muft " therefore first be dispersed; befides, there " had been no encouragement to cut cam-" wood : they could not tell what our com-" mercial agent, who was gone down the " coaft, might be able to effect in this re-" fpect. If the Slave Trade were to continue " at a ftand, they observed, that no more " flaves would come from the bufh (or in-" terior country) and, indeed, that few came " now. They faid that the flaves would " certainly not be put to death, for that no-" body was ever put to death except in war " or for crimes."

" A white factor alfo is named, who gave information, that fcarce any flaves have been bought for the fpace of a year in that part of Africa which lies between Cape Vergo and Cape Mount, on account of the traders on the Coaft having infifted that the price fhould be reduced about ten or twelve pounds. He flated alfo, that the natives, exafperated by the fudden lowering of the terms, had lately withheld their flaves entirely, and had employed them, particularly in the Sufee and Mandingo countries, in the culture of rice."

The Directors will now add fome obfervations on the general character of the natives; and they will introduce in the fequel fome facts which will fhew their friendly difpofitions towards the Company, and alfo their capacity for inftruction.

The account which has been given of feveral natives who have been peculiarly inftrumental in forwarding the views of the Company, ought by no means to be confidered as affording a fample of the common character of their countrymen. The natives of Africa, fo far as the Directors have had an opportunity of judging, are, in general, fuperflitious in the higheft degree; they believe in witchcraft, incantations, and charms, and they are hereby fubjected to grofs impofitions, and are also led to the practice of many acts of cruelty, as well as of injustice : fome of them add a number of Mahometan, or other fuperflitions, to their own, which they learn chiefly from travelling priefts of the Mahometan perfuafion, who abound in Africa, and make a trade of felling charms. The natives of Sierra Leone, and all the adjacent parts, offer occasional facrifices to the devil. They believe in a God, but they appear to render him no flated worfhip; and though they entertain fome vague notions of a future flate, their faith feems to have very little influence on their practice. Polygamy is every where common, and the fpirit of retaliation and revenge may be confidered as univerfal univerfal. One of the most respectable and enlightened of the chiefs already mentioned, was faid to be waiting for an opportunity of revenging an injury which he had received many years before, not from the man himfelf on whom he meant to wreak his vengeance, but from the predeceffor of this perfon. It may be remarked of another individual, the most amiable perhaps of all the characters met with in the Foulah country, that after much conversation on the Christian religion, in the course of which he allowed it to be good in many refpects, he expressly objected to the doctrine of the forgivenels of injuries, on the ground of its being a virtue not to be attained by man, and therefore not to be required of him. There are many varieties of national character among the Africans, fome nations appearing to be more crafty, and fome more uncivilized and favage, than others : nor can the diffinctions among them be traced in all cafes, either to the Slave Trade or to any local circumftances. The fuperiority of the natives of the Foulah country, and their great hospitality to ftrangers, have already fufficiently appeared; and on the other hand, it may be remarked, that the natives of the coaft in general, but particularly those who live near the flave-factories, are much given to liquor, are fuspicious of white men, crafty, and deceitful, as well as favage and ferocious : they are faid likewife to be felfish, unreafonable, and encroaching.

In

In favour of the Africans it may be obferved, that they are in general fenfible of benefits received, and grateful for them; that they have much natural affection and feeling; that though occafionally violent they are not unmanageable; and that the energies of their mind (which fome accounts given of the cutting off of flave-flips have already fhewn to be very ftrong), though turned as yet to wrong objects, are capable no doubt of receiving a better direction. It may be added, that the Africans appear to be eager for knowledge, as well as religious improvement, and readily invite the teachers of Christianity ; but this readiness, though it affords ample encouragement to the millionary. is obvioufly to be referred rather to a general principle of emulation and ambition, than to any approbation of the Christian doctrines, of which the natives are as yet ignorant. They appear to admit the wickedness of the Slave Trade, as much as they do that of any other criminal practice, purfuing the traffic for the fake of its profits, contrary to fome glimmering light of their confcience, if not in direct defiance of their convictions.

A few quotations fhall here be given, illuftrating certain points in their character which have been fpoken of.

It has been mentioned in an early part of this Report, that a charge of having caufed the death of the late king Naimbanna's fon was brought against the captain of the Company's pany's fhip who carried him over, in confequence of the groundless fuggestion of a black. The following is a brief account of the circumftances attending this injurious charge. The black from whole fuggeftion it originated, had croffed the fea in the fame thip with king Naimbanna's fon, and had been offended during the paffage, by the captain's urging him to do duty as a failor; he had alfo feen the captain give fome medicine to the patient, which was followed by a trifling ficknefs of ftomach. It is fuppofed that his ill will may have therefore prompted him to form fome fuspicions to the prejudice of the captain, which were rashly communicated after his arrival at Sierra Leone to the relations of the deceafed. Incantations were immediately reforted to, as the means of afcertaining whether the charge fuppofed to lie against the captain was founded or not. The dead body was given into the hands of a skilful necromancer, and being placed in an erect pofture, it was fucceffively afked, Whether the Sierra Leone Company -whether the governor-whether the phyfician-whether a fervant of the Company who attended the patient, had caufed his death. The corpfe continuing motionlefs, it was then asked, whether the captain of the thip was the guilty perfon, on which the body is faid to have given a nod of affent. A threatening letter was now written in the name of the relations, to the Governor and Council.

Council, in which compensation was asked for the murder, but it was handfomely intimated, that it was not the Company themfelves, but fome of the flave-captains who were fuppofed to have inftigated the Company's fervant to put the fon of the king of Sierra Leone to death. The Governor and Council did not fail to refift the claim made upon them, but they were obliged to permit the calling of a palaver, at which a great concourfe of armed natives attended. The debate was opened with great folemnity in the name of the mother of the deceafed, by a neighbouring chief, who delivered himfelf in the Timmany language, ftopping to let each fentence be interpreted as he went on. His fpeech was nearly as follows :- That the queen (the mother of the deceafed) had no palaver against the Company, had no palaver against the governor, had no palaver against feveral others who one by one were named; but that the queen had a palaver against the captain of the fhip, becaufe he had poifoned her fon with a cup of tea while he was at fea; that the queen demanded therefore the payment of 600 bars (near 100l.) which must be fent her immediately, and on this condition fhe would drop her intention of making war against the Company, and that the palaver would then be ended. It was added, that if the captain fhould prefume to deny the crime now fo clearly proved against him, he must be fent up to the town of the queen, queen, in order to ftand his trial by drinking red water,* according to the known laws of the Timmany country. The captain who was ftanding by, evidently felt fome emotion at hearing the last article of the demand ; but a burft of laughter arifing at this moment among the natives who flood round, made it fufficiently plain that they did not at all expect the captain's compliance. 'The Governor and Council infifted on calling evidence on the fpot to remove the fufpicion. The black who had first excited it was brought forward, and explained away all his former infinuations; the innocence of the captain was eftablished by many other witnesses, and the natives became evidently ashamed of their conduct; and on the following day the queen herfelf came down to Freetown, profeffed the utmost confidence in the Governor and Council, and defired them to take another fon under their protection. +

It

* It has been already noticed, that this trial of red water confifts in making the fufpected perfon drink a quantity of water with an infufion in it, which is fuppofed to be of a polfonous kind. If the unhappy object of fufpicion is affected, as he often is, in a manner which the natives confider to be an implication of guilt, his brains are knocked out on the fpot; it often happens however that he dies, as in the inflance before mentioned, of the immediate effects of the polfon; in either of thefe cafes all his family are fold as flaves. Natives of the higher clafs are faid frequently to furvive thefe trials, and it is fuppofed that they find means to prevent the polfonous ingredient from being put into the water.

+ The Directors with not to fail in acknowledging any infance of friendly conduct in the flave-factories towards the Company; It is not eafy to conceive how their imagination has been filled with extravagancies of the moft weak and ridiculous kind. A notion is entertained that one of the iflands in the river would fink under water, if the king of the neighbouring fhore were to fet his foot upon it. Another little ifland higher up the ftream, is fuppofed to be the habitation of a legion of devils, and if any man fhould attempt to carry off from it the leaf of a tree, it is held, that his boat would infallibly fink in coming away, and that he would be drowned.

The following quotation prefents a lamentable picture of extraordinary fuperflition and ignorance in the head-man of a neighbouring town.

" I waited on this perfon and found him " at dinner, a king (or chief) of the upper " country being at the table with him, and " alfo a Mahometan prieft, whom he and " the other chiefs of the parts adjacent are " now employing in making grigris (or " charms), and in affifting at their facrifices " to the devil. After dinner the head-man " produced his mafs book, and prayed for " fome time with feeming devotion; he ex-

Company; they are therefore defirous of remarking, that on the occafion of this injurious charge against their Captain, they were befriended by the Agent of the neighbouring British flave-factory; and they take this occafion of adding, that they have in general experienced every civility from the proprietors of flave-factories refident in England.

" preffed great concern that he had not been able to meet with a Popifh confessor for 46 fome years, but he told me of his having 66 left orders, that as foon as ever he fhould die, two of his flaves should be fent to St. Jago, in order to urge the Romish priest there, to do every thing that might be neceffary to fmooth his way to heaven. 46 46 He makes no more doubt of the power of 66 a regular abfolution, than he does of his 46 existence, and he appears well acquainted .. with all the Romish superstitions; but his tenets are ftrangely difguifed by the union .. of these with the abfurdities and idolatry " of his own country. He at the fame time 16 faid, that he was very anxious to promote 46 the introduction of the gofpel into Africa, .. and offered to engage in any plan that 44 would promote it; he proposed to give a 66 houfe and land to any teacher or fchool-" mafter that we might fend, whom he told " 46 me that he would take under his own protection. Amidst all this ignorance, he 46 fhewed a confcioufnefs of the criminality " of the Slave Trade, having fpoken to the 66 following effect on that fubject : What 66 " more have I to do with the Slave Trade : it is time that I should leave it off and fet-66  tle my account with God: I am old and ought to think only of heaven." **

The feveral fucceeding quotations will confirm fome points already touched upon, and will very fully fhew the defire of inftruction which which prevails among the natives, as well as the good understanding which fubfists between them and the Company.

A female mulatto has been mentioned, the mistress of a large town in the Mandingo country, who was once in England, and who paffed a few days in the fettlement. " She inquired much, when the was there, " of the ftate of flaves in the West Indies, " and was much affected at hearing that " flavery was not confined to the captives " fent off from Africa, but descended also to " their children; fhe added, What must you " judge of me; you must think me very " bad, for I have just been taking two flaves " to the neighbouring factory, and I have " left them there; but I with I could give " up the trade altogether."

It appears from fome of the lateft accounts, that the travellers who went to the Foulah country, profited much on their return to Freetown by her civility, their route having lain through the town of which fhe is miftrefs. She has lately been learning the Arabic language, in order to extend her influence.

" During the palaver occafioned by the death of the king's fon, which was recently " fpoken of, fome of the chiefs who had " " come to Freetown on the occasion, were 66 carried to fee the fchools, and were much " pleafed with an appearance fo novel to $6 them, as that of three or four hundred children "

" children engaged at their books. A head-"man of fuperior information, began im-"mediately to enter into treaty with one of "the teachers, wanting him to go up the country to inftruct the youth of the town "over which this head-man prefided." Some other applications almost exactly fimilar are mentioned.

Three or four Nova Scotians are faid to be fettled up the river, who have large plantations of rice, land having been given them gratuitoully by the natives. One of this party of fettlers is able to read, and a native who came down to Freetown, is noticed as having already, through his affiftance, made fome fmall proficiency in learning to read alfo.

The following extract from the official letter of the Governor and Council, will fhew the measures taken on their part, with the view of giving instruction to the natives, and also the fucces which has followed.

"You will fee by the directions given to all the mafters of our veffels, that we have miffed no opportunity of inviting all the chiefs on the neighbouring coaft, to fend their fons hither for education, and the invitation has been uniformly received with expressions of fatisfaction. A chief in the Rio Nunez has already fent his fon hither, and feveral others from different parts only wait the approaching dry feafon, to accept of our offers. In the towns belonging to the chiefs in this river, with "whom

" whom we are connected, there are very " few children fit to be fent to fchool; the " few that are fit, we have now with us, " and fome of them make a confiderable " proficiency in reading. We have promifes 46 of many more from the chiefs in the Bunch " and Kokelle, (the upper branches of the " Sierra Leone river), who are to come to " us in the course of the enfuing dry feafon. "We had anticipated your advice with re-" fpect to a fchool at the plantation on the " Bulam fhore : one of the teachers has " agreed to refide there with his family, " both as miffionary and fchoolmafter; and the " cuftom has become already univerfal among " the labourers on that fide, to abftain from " work on Sunday." The Directors under-fland that there are now in the fchools at Freetown, about twenty native children in all, a great proportion of whom are the fons of chiefs. It has been already noticed, that more than the fame number of native children are under instruction on the Bulam fide of the river.

" they might be dried. The Nova Scotian 66 having done as he was defired, proceeded 66 in the absence of the furveyor (or engineer) .. to load them, and a fpark having got into " one of them unperceived, the fhell burft as 66 he was filling it, killed him on the fpot, " and alfo killed the fon of a neighbouring chief, left but a few days before for educa-66 " tion. The father of the boy was fent for, " who, though affected, was perfectly re-66 figned. Some of his words are faid to be 66 nearly as follows : "Gentlemen, he was my .. only fon; I thought to have had him with  you for his good, but God hath thought 66 otherwife : I fee it was an accident ; I do not blame you. Be not concerned about .. 46 its happening here, had God wifhed him " to live, he would have lived. In order to " fhew you that I feel no ill will on account " of this misfortune, I fhall fend my daughter 66 to be brought up in your fettlement."

A proof thall now be added of the good understanding that fubfishs between the natives and the Company, which cannot fail to afford peculiar fatisfaction to the proprietors.

"Two ftrange veffels having appeared in fight, which were fulpected to be French, the neighbouring king, or chief, (the fame perfon who caufed the difperfion of the firft colony, and alfo fet on foot the palaver which impeded the former eftablifhment of the prefent) fent a party of men to the affiftance of the Governor and Council, with " a meffage that he was himfelf about to fol-"low with a further force, and that if it "fhould be neceffary, he would raife the "whole country in the colony's defence. "When it was found that the veffels were "friendly, being prizes recently taken from "the French, the natives who had come to "Freetown went away faying, Well, your "friends are our friends, and your enemies "fhall be our enemies." The Directors have the fatisfaction of adding, that the Company have hitherto been on very friendly terms with the furrounding natives in general.

To the preceding information received from Sierra Leone, refpecting the general difpolition of the natives, the Directors will add fome obfervations on the character of an individual African, who was placed for eighteen months under their own care in England.

The late J. H. Naimbanna, fon of the former king of Sierra Leone, when at the fuppofed age of twenty-four, was induced, by the fuggestions of a free black belonging to the first body of fettlers from London, to determine on going over to England, with the view of acquiring an education; intending to commit himfelf to the liberality of an English gentleman, to whom he had heard that the free black had been indebted for fome degree of fchooling. He was on the point of coming to an agreement with the mafter of a flave-veffel, who was to receive three flaves as the price of his paffage through the Weft Indies 03

Indies hither, when a fhip fent out by the Sierra Leone Company to explore the country, arrived in Sierra Leone river. Having been brought by this veffel to England, he was placed under the care of two clergymen fucceffively, who have furnished the chief part of the information concerning him, which will now be communicated to the Court.

A defire of knowledge was the predominant feature in his character. His instructors have mentioned that he would continually urge them to prolong the time employed in reading together. He was also forward in declaring his obligations to every one who would affift him in the acquifition of ufeful learning; he would express regret if he had been led into any company where the time had paffed away without improvement; and when it happened that he was left intirely to himfelf, he would employ not lefs than eight or ten hours of the day in reading. Though the difadvantages arifing from the long neglect of his mental faculties were apparent, he shewed figns of very good natural fenfe; he had alfo a faculty at diffingulfhing characters ; and his mind, as might naturally be expected, was ready to receive impreffions from those perfons of whom he had conceived a good opinion. He had few advantages of perfon, but he was uncom-monly pleafing in his behaviour, fhewing much natural courtefy and even delicacy of manners; he was alfo of a kind and affectionate difpolition. He was quick in all his feelings, feelings, and his temper was occasionally warm, fome degree of jealoufy alfo entering into his character : in particular he was indifposed to answer questions put to him by ftrangers concerning the state of his own country; for he was apt to fufpect that they meant to draw comparifons between England and Sierra Leone, unfavourable to the character of the latter, and he would therefore, on fuch occasions, often turn the converfation, by remarking, that a country fo unfavourably circumftanced as Sierra Leone had hitherto been, was not to be fuppofed capable of having made any attainments worthy of being the fubject of conversation in Great Britain.

The following anecdote will fhew ftill more ftrongly the extreme fenfibility which he felt, when any circumftance arofe which touched the honour of his country; and it will alfo explain the grounds of his peculiar jealoufy on this fubject.

The name of a perfon having been mentioned in his prefence, who was underftood by him to have publicly afferted fomething very degrading to the general character of the Africans, he broke out into fome violent and vindictive language against this person. He was immediately reminded of the Chriftian duty of forgiving his enemies, upon which he answered nearly in the following words: " If a man, faid he, fhould rob me of my " money, I can forgive him; if a man should · fhoot

" fhoot at me, or try to ftab me, I can for-" give him; if a man fhould fell me and all " my family to a flave-fhip, fo that we fhould " pais all the reft of our days in flavery in " the Weft Indies, I can forgive him; but " (added he, rifing from his feat with much " emotion) if a man takes away the charac-" ter of the people of my country, I never " can forgive him." Being afked why he would not extend his forgiveness to those who took away the character of his country, he anfwered, " If a man fhould try to kill me, " or fhould fell me and my family for flaves, " he would do an injury to as many as he " might kill or fell; but if any one takes " away the character of black people, that " man injures black people all over the world; " and when he has once taken away their " character, there is nothing which he may " not do to black people ever after. That " man, for inftance, will beat black men, and " fay, O, it is only a black man, why fhould " not I beat him? That man will make flaves " of black people; for when he has taken " away their character, he will fay, O, they " are only black people, why should not I " make them flaves? That man will take away " all the people of Africa, if he can catch " them; and if you ask him, But why do " you take away all these people, he will fay, " O, they are only black people, they are not " like white people, why fhould not I take " them? That is the reafon why I cannot " forgive " forgive the man who takes away the cha-" racter of the people of my country."

The improvement which he made during his refidence in England, was in every refpect confiderable; though at the time when he arrived he laboured under the difadvantage of knowing but little of the English language, he learnt, in the fpace of the year and half which he paffed in England, to read very fluently, and to write a letter without much difficulty. The alteration which, during the fame time, took place gradually in his mind, was in the whole alfo very great. When he first landed he had most of the fame peculiarities of character which have been afcribed to the Africans in general; he believed in witchcraft, and he had no idea of forgiving injuries; he had even endeavoured when he was in Africa to make himfelf, as he expressed it, as proud as he could. Before his departure from England, his pride, as well as his revengeful fpirit, had evidently fubfided, and were become wrong and odious in his eyes: his belief in witchcraft had entirely left him, and he appeared to feel a confiderable degree of fear and diffidence, in respect to his own future conduct. His morals were pure, he had carefully abstained from drunkennefs, even while he lived at Sierra Leone, and he fhewed, when he was in England, a very ftrong abhorrence both of profane conversation and every kind of vice; as appeared more particularly about the time of his departure, from the evidence of

of fome firiking and undeniable facts. That his mind was impreffed with religious principles, might be prefumed, in fome meafure, from feveral of the preceding remarks: he paid great respect to the teachers of Chriftianity, whom he wished much to invite over to his country; he had alfo the utmost reverence for the Scriptures, with which he had become very conversant, and he would difcourfe on religious fubjects with much opennefs and fimplicity; he was at the fame time free from enthufiafm. According to the account of the inftructor with whom he paffed the latter part of his time, he appeared to be improving in every refpect, when the news of his father king Naimbanna's death arrived, and called him away fuddenly to Sierra Leone. If the deplorable fituation of his country, at the time when he left it, together with the change which had now arifen in his own difpolitions and views be contemplated, it must be evident that many new duties and obligations would be likely to fuggeft themfelves to his mind, and to excite a peculiar degree of anxiety when he was on the eve of his return. A few days before his embarkation, he converfed much with fome of his friends in England, concerning the line of conduct which it would be his duty to adopt after his arrival at Sierra Leone; and it appeared that there was no perfonal facrifice which, if the principles of Chriftianity

The Directors will here introduce an extract from the difpatches of their Governor and Council, defcribing fome circumftances which arofe during his paffage, and giving the account of his death.

" According to the information of a fer-" vant of the Company, who failed in the " fame fhip with him, he had left Plymouth " in perfect health, but as foon as he reached " a warm climate he began to feel a flight " complaint in his throat, and occafional  pains in his head; his mind was at the fame time anxious and uneafy, for he was " evidently difmayed at the profpect of those 66 difficulties with which he expected that he 66 " should have to combat after his return. " Numberlefs were the plans which he amufed himfelf with deviling, for the purpofe 66 66 of fpreading Christianity, and opening the eves of his rude countrymen; but he " .. feemed conftantly to be tortured by the idea that fomething would obstruct his 66 " defigns, and the dread of difappointment 66 feemed to prefs upon him more ftrongly in 66 proportion as he drew nigh to his native 66 fhores; the heat alfo began to affect him " very violently, and a fever enfued, which " was attended with a delirium. In one of ⁴⁶ his lucid intervals, he defired the perfon who 66 who gave this account, to affift him in making his will, by which he entrufted 66 " his property to his brother, for the use of 66 a young child his fon, and he introduced 66 into the will an earnest request that his " brother would exert every endeavour to 46 put an end to the Slave Trade. When he 66 reached Sierra Leone he was infenfible of 50 every thing that paffed, and his life was 66 defpaired of. His mother, together with 55 fome younger branches of the family, came 65 down to the Governor's houfe, where he 66 was laid, and, after a few hours attendance on his dying bed, they faw him breathe 66 " his laft." The Governor and Council mention that nothing could exceed the agitation and diffrefs fhewn by his mother on the event of his death.

Thus terminated the days of this amiable and enlightened African, from whofe exertions, if he had lived, the Company might have expected the most important and extenfive fervices. It may be remarked however, that, notwithstanding his untimely and much to be lamented death, he has rendered at least one important fervice to his country, by furnishing a memorable instance of the effect of education on the mind of Africans, and a most encouraging and happy omen in favour of his benighted countrymen.

Two Africans, of whom the eldeft is about eighteen years old, are now in England, where where they are receiving their education, under the directions of the Company; the one is the fon of the prefent king of Sierra Leone; the other of a chief who lives very near to Freetown. The Directors will only remark concerning thefe young perfons, that they advance regularly in their learning, and that although they are faid to be different from each other in their tempers, they both appear to be fully equal to Europeans of their own age, in point of talents and natural underftanding.

The Directors have now laid before the Court the whole of the information which they have to offer: they have ftated briefly the hiftory of the fettlement, together with the expenses of establishing it, and the general fituation of the funds of the Company. They have also spoken under diffinct heads of the climate of Sierra Leone, of the meafures taken with a view to trade, and of the progrefs made in cultivation, and, finally, of the opening profpects of civilization: they have had the fatisfaction of fhewing, in the concluding part of the laft and principal head, that many chiefs on the African coaft are difpofed to co-operate in the general defigns of the Company; that a connection is alfo courted by the Foulah as well as other nations; that fome of the paths into the interior terior of Africa, which had been clofed through the wars, have been lately opened; that projects of further difcovery have been fet on foot; and that while all these promissing circumftances have been taking place, the Slave Trade has been materially declining, feveral factories having been broken up, and many flaves, who have been returned, or withheld for want of a market, having been added to the productive labourers of the country.

From the advantages which have been reaped during this temporary declenfion of the Slave Trade, the Directors are naturally led to the contemplation of the bleffings which are to be looked for on the event of its total abolition. Whenever that happy period shall come, when the peace of Africa, inftead of being fuspended as it is now on the event of the war in Europe, shall be more permanently fecured and provided for through the final termination of this traffic, confequences very fimilar indeed to those which have arifen during the fufpenfion of the Slave Trade, but far more important and extensive, are obviously to be expected: a ftill greater fpring will then no doubt be given to African industry; the native chiefs, having no other means of fupplying their want of European goods, will refort to regular trade and industry, not partially and as a matter of preference as they do now, but generally generally and of neceffity; and the European flave-factories, which have been hitherto the greateft impediments to civilization, and the principal fupport of all the more diffolute kings and chiefs, will at the fame time altogether ceafe.

When this æra shall arrive, an æra which the Directors can by no means allow themfelves to confider as diftant, it feems probable that the inftitution of the Sierra Leone Company may acquire much additional importance, and that the advantages of having already planted a British colony on the African coaft, may prove to be extremely great. It will undoubtedly be then the duty of the Directors in all respects to avail themselves of the opportunities which will arife, both by extending their own commerce, by fuggefting plans of cultivation to the chiefs, and by endeavouring alfo to establish schools, to supply inftructors, and to promote the introduction of Christianity into Africa, fo far as the influence of the Sierra Leone Company may reach.

The Directors will now clofe this Report, and they truft that all the circumftances flated in the courfe of it being duly weighed, they fhall not be thought to have either failed effentially in the requifite exertions, or to have made an improper use of the confidence reposed in them by the Proprietors. The anxiety anxiety of the Directors, and indeed their labour alfo, have been occafionally confiderable; but thefe have been amply compenfated by reflections on the magnitude of that caufe in which they have found themfelves engaged, and by the continually improving profpect of being able, by the bleffing of Providence, to lay fome foundation for the future happinefs of a Continent, which has hitherto derived nothing but mifery from its intercourfe with Great Britain.

s, Wild Hone Squirrels, and Anallo be claffed among the antat Dierra Leone 11 for food,

THE Directors think proper to introduce the following account of the Natural Productions of Sierra Leone, by way of Appendix, being the fubftance of two Reports made to them by Mr. Afzelius, their Botanift.

ANIMALS.

QUADRUPEDS.—Thofe which are tame and are used for food, are Cattle, Sheep, Goats, Hogs, Ducks, Turkies, and Fowls.

Cattle thrive well, and even grow fat, but not fo commonly as in Europe. There are a number of Bulls, Oxen, and Cows grazing in the Savannahs.

Sheep affume a very ftrange appearance, changing their fine woollen coat into rough ni P hairs, hairs, refembling that of goats: they feem to fuffer from the heat, are commonly lean, and do not increase much. Goats and Hogs, on the contrary, are very prolific, and grow as fine and as large as in any other countries. The fettlement is fuppofed to be fufficiently flocked with these animals.

Fowls multiply to an amazing number; and Ducks, particularly Mufcovy Ducks, thrive; but common Geefe and Turkies have not anfwered the Company's expectations, probably for want of proper management.

Porcupines, Wild Hogs, Squirrels, and Antelopes, may alfo be claffed among the animals found at Sierra Leone fit for food. The fkin of the latter appears to be proper for gloves.

Some few Affes, which have been fent to the colony, are made ufeful for the purpofes of labour, and do not fuffer by the climate; though they are not equal to Mules.

The Beafts of prey are Lions, Leopards, Hyænas, Mußk Cats, and many kinds of Weazels, which last are very destructive of poultry. The skins of some of these might be of use in a commercial view. There are two species of Musk Cats at Sierra Leone, the Civet and the Zibeth Cat, from which an inferior fort of Musk may be obtained; the latter produces the better musk of the two.

To the article of Quadrupeds should be added the Japanzee, or Chimpanzee, common in the mountains, an animal more nearly related to the human race than even the Ourang Outang. Of two that were brought alive into the colony, one died foon, the other being older lived fome months. He was nearly two feet high, but those which are full grown are nearly five feet in height : he was covered with black hair, long and thick on the back, but fhort and thin on the breaft and belly: his face was bare; his hands and his head refembled those of an old black man, except that the hairs on his head were ftraight: he ate, drank, and flept, and fate at table, after the fame manner as a human being: at first he crawled on all fours, always walking on the outfide of his hands; but when grown larger, he endeavoured to go erect, fupporting himfelf by a flick, which he carried in his He feemed to be of a melancholy hand. disposition, but was always goodnatured, doing no perfon any injury. This fpecies of Ape, although not entirely unknown in Europe, has ufually been confounded with that of other Apes.

BIRDS .- Of these the Directors have as vet received no perfect account. It is mentioned that there is a Crane of an extraordinary appearance, which becomes very tame, and is reckoned very good food.

AMPHIBIOUS ANIMALS.—Of this kind there are Green Turtles, and those called Hawk's Bill, or Loggerheads, which are both very common, and fometimes of an immenfe fize.

fize, weighing feveral hundred pounds. Frefhwater Turtles, and Land Turtles, are to be found at Sierra Leone; the latter in great abundance; and it is thought that they might be imported into England to good profit. Crocodiles, or Alligators, of a non-defcript fpecies, ten or twelve feet in length, have been found; and Lizards of fix fpecies, among which are the Guava and the Cameleon. Snakes are almost innumerable; they haunt the houfes during the night in fearch of poultry, of which they are very fond; the largeft yet discovered measured eighteen feet, which did not prove venemous, but was of that kind which fwallow their prey entire.

INSECTS are very numerous; the greater part of them are exceedingly beautiful, and are non-defcripts. The moft remarkable are the Termites, which deftroy wooden houfes and fences; Ants, which deftroy provifions; Cockroaches and Crickets, which deftroy clothes, linen, and more efpecially leather; Mufquitos, Sandflies, Scorpions, Tarantulas, and Centipedes; alfo wild Bees, which furnifh plenty of wax and honey. The Vermes are little known; the Barnacles are very large, and injurious to veffels not copper-bottomed.

FISHES are in great variety, both in the fea and the river. The Spermaceti Whale has been occafionally found at Sierra Leone, but it is met with more frequently down the coaft. Befides the Whale, as well as the Shark, Stinging-Ray, and Porpoife, there are Eels, Eels, Horfe-Mackarel, Tarpoons, Cavillos, Mullets, Snappers, Yellowtails, Oldmaids, Tenpounders, and fome other fifhes, all of which, except the Eels and Tenpounders, are efteemed fine eating. Oyfters are found in great abundance. There is alfo another fhell fifh, which the natives ufe for food. Among the Zoophites none is more worthy of notice than the common Spunge, which covers all the fandy beaches of the Sierra Leone river, particularly thofe on the Bulam ihore. This Spunge would fetch a high price in Great Britain.

VEGETABLES.

OF efculent vegetables Rice occupies the first place, as it is the chief of the plants cultivated at Sierra Leone, and the ftaple commodity of the country, forming, when boiled and feafoned with pepper, the principal food of the inhabitants, the lower class of whom fubfift almost entirely upon it. Although this plant profpers beft in low and inundated places, it will thrive alfo on elevated land, though in common with other plants of the aquatic kind, it will in that cafe grow fmaller and thinner, producing at the fame time better and more nutritious grain. Of this quality is the rice now found on the eminences of Sierra Leone. while on the plains of the Bulam fhore, and other fuch tracts, it grows as luxuriantly as in Carolina, and if a proper apparatus were employed, it might by equal care, be ren-P 3 dered dered equally white; but at prefent, through the negligence of the natives, both the rice intended for their own confumption, and that for trade, retains part of the brownifh bran, or rind. The Rice fields are prepared during the dry feafon, and receive the feed in the tornado feafon, which is antecedent to the rains; but the feafons varying in different years, the time for fowing is irregular. In the year 1792, Rice was fown in June, and reaped in October.

2. Caffava, or Caffada. This conftitutes, after Rice, the chief food of the inhabitants, and the culture of it requires time and care. It fucceeds beft in fandy and open places. In the courfe of three or four months after it has been planted the roots grow fit for ufe, and are often eaten in their raw flate. The natives do not reap the whole harveft at once, but dig up a few roots as they want them; but after the approach of the fucceeding rainy feafon they clear the whole field, never extending their plantations beyond the fuppofed exigencies of a fingle year. The natives fometimes make cakes of Caffada, which though dry, are well tafted and extremely white : they also boil or roaft this article. A kind of ale might poffibly be prepared from it, as is done by the Arawasks of Surinam.

3. Yams. Thefe refemble potatoes, and are a good fubfitute for them, being dry, farinaceous, and nutritious. Though elfewhere there are many species of Yams, there is is but one in Sierra Leone; the largeft root in the Company's gardens weighed only about four pounds, the foil being probably too hard for it. The natives do not beftow fo much pains on the culture of Yams as on that of Caffada. The only way in which they, as well as the fettlers, prepare them for eating, is by boiling and fometimes roafting them; but Yams might be made either into flour or flarch; perhaps even a good fpirituous liquor might be diftilled from them.

4. Sweet Potatoes. Thefe are good and ufeful roots, in no particular, however, refembling the true potatoes. The natives boil them, but in the colony they are roafted, and they are alfo made into a kind of bread, which is nutritious, and of a tolerably good tafte. Sweet Potatoes thrive beft in a loofe foil, but the natives are as inattentive to the manner of cultivating them as to that of Yams. The leaves boiled make a good difh on the table, and afford an excellent nourifhment for fheep, goats, or pigs.

5. Ground Nuts. Thefe are eaten by the natives, either raw or roafted.

6. Eddoes. Though abundant they are not fo much ufed as they deferve to be; the leaves, if they are young, are as good as fpinnach; and the roots, when boiled, refemble chefnuts. They are fit for ufe when three months old, but are beft after four or five months growth.

7 and 8. Country Potatoes of two different P 4 forts; forts; namely, first, Ajuck, a round root, fomewhat bigger than a hazel nut, found in abundance in low places, with a long stem, which creeps round it on the ground; its taste is better than that of sweet potatoes, and it is less folid. And secondly, Abunck, which grows on the branches of the tree in a strange manner, and is a singular excression of an irregular, angular, and tuberous stape. It tastes fomewhat like Sweet Potatoes.

9. Oil Palm. A common, handfome, and uleful tree, indicating a good foil. It fupplies the inhabitants with oil, wine, and food. The wine in appearance perfectly refembles whey, has a good tafte when fresh, but is apt to ferment and grow four, and to change in three or four days to the ftrongeft vinegar, of a difagreeable fmell. It is collected by tapping the tree. The oil is obtained from the fruit, which is of the fize of a hazel nut, confifting of a hard kernel, enclosed in a thick, fat, and oleaginous matter, covered with a thin fkin, which diffolves and yields the oil, which is used by the natives by way of butter to their rice. This oil, though liquid at first, in a short time hardens, and turns rancid: a fuperior oil is made, though in fmall quantities, by bruifing and boiling the kernels in water. The interior and medullary fubftance of the top of young Palm trees being boiled in water, forms a difh refembling Cabbage: the leaves ferve the natives for bafkets.

10 and 11. Plantains and Eananas. Thefe grow very commonly, and are two ufeful trees, nearly related to the Palm. The fruit of the Plantains is larger than that of the Bananas, more regular, bent at the bafe, and fewer in each clufter, harder, and lefs lufcious; it is eaten raw, boiled, or roafted. Bananas are among the fuperior fruits of this country, foft and fweet, and generally eaten raw: above one hundred grow in a clufter. The leaves are employed for various economical purpofes; and the fibres of them are ufed in fome places for thread.

12. Papaw. A fine fruit of a deep green, but when ripe of a yellow colour. This is eaten raw, but makes a good difh when boiled; the leaves are used for washing instead of foap, the hollow stalks for pipes, and ropes may be made of the bark.

13. Guavas. Some green fruit of this kind has been difcovered in a neighbouring bay.

14 and 15. Orange and Lime Trees. Thefe are very common in their wild flate, bearing ripe fruit throughout the year, though not in equal abundance at all feafons. The Oranges are excellent, and better, at leaft larger, than those brought to Europe. Some Lemons, planted a long time ago by the Portuguese in the neighbourhood of the settlement, have degenerated fo much as almost to refemble Limes.

16. Pumpions or Pumpkins. Thefe are to be found wild wherever the ground is loofe; loofe; fome of them grow to the length of fifty feet, but the fruit, on an average, do not attain to the fame fize as in Europe, though they are more folid. They are ufed for pies and puddings, and may be had throughout the year. 17, 18, 19, 20. Squafh, Water Melon, Cucumber, and Mufk Melon. Thefe four

17, 18, 19, 20. Squafh, Water Melon, Cucumber, and Mufk Melon. Thefe four fpecies arrive at the greateft perfection, and by proper care might be made to furpafs those of European growth. The first fettlers found on their arrival no Water Melons, but took the feeds with them.

21. Pine Apples. These are far better flavoured than those of Europe, but tougher in the middle. They are to be found all the year growing wild in the woods, and on declivities in the neighbourhood of water; they are also planted by the natives near their towns.

22. Pigeon Pea. This is a good wholefome pulfe, and is dreffed in the fame manner as Englifh peas or beans. Thefe peas grow wild in the fkirts of woods, and in old Rice and Caffada fields, and may be had throughout the year.

23. Maize or Indian Corn. This is cultivated more on the Bulam fhore than near Freetown; it requires but three months to ripen it, fo that feveral harvefts are afforded in one year. The grain is boiled in falt water, or roafted in the ear and eaten with butter, but fometimes it is eaten raw. The natives natives of the Gold Coaft bruife it and make puddings of it. Goats and cattle eat the leaves with avidity.

24. Millet of two kinds. This is found wild and ufed for poultry; the ftalks of the larger fort contain a fweet and refreshing juice.

25. Cocoa Trees grow in Sherbro, where they have been planted. The fruit is either eaten raw or made into pies.

26. Cafhew Nuts, according to Lieutenant Matthews, were introduced by the Europeans, but none have been feen at Sierra Leone, except those brought over from the Bulam shore. 27. Okras. The fruit of a little tree refembling the English Seatree Mallows, very common at Sierra Leone. The pods put into soup render it gelatinous and highly nourishing; the leaves boil like Spinnach.

28. Sugar Canes. Thefe have been found, though not in great quantities, in the neighbourhood of Sierra Leone; they are fuppofed to be of a good quality, and probably will thrive exceedingly, as foon as the land in which they have been planted fhall have been fome time in cultivation.

29. Butter and Tallow Tree. This is common in low lands about Freetown; it abounds with a juice refembling Gamboge in taint and durability, which exudes after the leaft laceration, and becomes more coagulated, vifcous, and of a darker colour. The wood of this tree is firm, and feems adapted to

to various economical purpofes. The fruit is nearly oval, about twice the fize of a man's fift; the rind is thick, pulpy, and of a pleafant acid; in the infide are found from five to nine feeds, of the fize of a Walnut, containing an oleaginous matter, extracted by the natives, and ufed with their rice or other food.

30. Tamarinds. Of these there is a great variety. The Velvet Tamarind and common Tamarind grow plentifully on the island of Bananas. Besides these there are White Tamarinds, which being of an indifferent taste are much neglected, but the tree is valuable for many purposes. There are also Brown Tamarinds, which are sweet and highly esteemed. There is also a hard and insipid fruit refembling a Tamarind, eaten by the natives, which they call Massino.

31. Figtree. The fruit of this tree, which fcarcely exceeds a hazel nut in fize, is agreeable like other figs, but it can hardly be eaten, owing to the number of fmall infects with which it is commonly filled.

32. Country Figs. Thefe in no refpect refemble the true Figs, except in the number of their gritty feeds. This fruit is of the fize of an apple, nearly round, and agreeable to the tafte; when fufficiently ripe refembling the European Strawberry. The tree is new and non-defeript; it is found growing in the beft foil in the woods.

Hog and how with a tree as and so Hog

33. Hog Plums. Thefe are rather fmaller than European Plums, of a yellow colour, and not unpleasant flavour, though somewhat infipid : the natives are very fond of them. The tree on which they grow has, in fome respect, the appearance of the Ash.

34. Country Plums. Of these there are many kinds, befides those just mentioned. They contain generally one or more kernels; they are commonly of the fize of an hazel nut. As the difference in the feveral forts is inconfiderable, it may be fufficient to mention the names of feven fpecies, which are, 1ft, Befabis—2d, Drap—3d, Abooke—4th, Machai, or Mackanter—5th, Magint—6th, Malinta—7th, Wanibé. There are certainly many more not yet particularly known.

35. Country Grapes. Thefe are round and black, of an acid and acrid tafte; they might certainly be improved, but never fo as to refemble grapes, for they belong to a genus totally different.

36. Sorrel. This contains an acid fimilar to that of real Sorrel, but refembles it in no other refpect. The plant is common enough.

37. Calceloo. A plant which affords the best fubstitute for Spinnach, if properly dreffed ; it grows in cleared grounds, and an abundance of it indicates a good foil: natives. Europeans, and fettlers agree in commending it. it. 38. Purflain.

Sil:

38. Purflain. A very common plant of hills near the fhore. It appears above ground three days after having been fown. It is faid, when bruifed, to have been applied to fresh wounds with fuccefs.

39. Maunnee Apple. There is a well known and much efteemed fruit of this fort in the Weft Indies; but that of Sierra Leone is of a different fpecies, though no way inferior in fize or flavour to the Weft Indian Apple of the fame name.

40, 41, 42. Cainito, Bumelia, and Icaco or Pigeon Plums. Three Weft Indian fruits. The laft is rather infipid, but improves greatly by cultivation.

43, 44. Antidefma, of the fame tafte with Red Currants, and Mantanka, being alfo tolerably good.

45. Country Cherries. These furpass all the fruits of Sierra Leone; a fine Nectarine is the fruit to which a Country Cherry can best be compared.

46. The Bread Fruit Tree. This has, at a diffance, the appearance of an old Appletree. A fpecies of it grows plentifully on the Bulam fhore, and in low and fandy places. The fruit is about the fize of an Apple, and when frefh is exceedingly good and nutritious, having almost the fame tafte as gingerbread, but it loses much of its flavour when old.

47. The Cream Fruit. This is still larger and quite round : there are always two of the the fruits united together and hanging down at the end of a fmall branch; when wounded they yield a quantity of fine white juice, refembling fugar, or the beft milk; the natives are very fond of it, and ufe it to quench their thirft. The tree is very lofty, and grows in abundance, particularly on the Iflands of Plantains.

There is a fet of plants called by the Botanists Amomum, which all partake of a fpicy nature, in a different degree, and are of three divisions. To the first belongs that fpecies, the virtue of which is contained in the roots, and generally called Gingers. To the fecond, that of which the virtue lies in the fmall feeds, fuch as Grains of Paradife. or Malaguetta Pepper. The third is that fpecies which has an aromatic flavour in its feeds, and called Cardamoms. The true Ginger grows in the Sufee country, though not yet found in Sierra Leone. Malaguetta Pepper is found of four different forts; 1ft, Maboobo, the feeds of which are pretty large, oblong, and of an agreeable but weak flavour. 2d, Maffaaba, fmaller than the preceeding, but otherwife much like it; the pulp in the pod, when fresh, is of a fine 3d, Maffa Amquena, the feeds of acid. which are of the fame nature as those laft mentioned, but rather more angular and pungent; the leaves and ftems are endowed with the fineft aroma, both in respect to fcent fcent and tafte. 4th, Toffan, which is the native and true Malaguetta Pepper of Africa, and Grains of Paradife of the fhops. It excels all other kinds in pungency.

A new species of Nutmeg, different from all others, has been discovered; but whether it is as good as the common fort it is at this time difficult to afcertain.

Coffee trees are found of two different fpecies, both non-defcript; but whether of any use is not yet afcertained.

Piper Ethiopicum. A well-known fpice, grows on lofty trees, in great abundance on the mountains. It is used both by fettlers and natives inftead of Black Pepper.

Mabeck. A fine fpice, though not very pungent, the virtue of which is principally in the hufk, is ufed by the natives for many medicinal purpofes. The tree is high and valuable.

Barreliera. A fmall plant with the fame fcent as Thyme, and might be used for the fame purposes.

Tomatos, with which the natives feafon their rice, are angular and red. It is thought that Capficums grow wild, and that from the great demand for them in England, they might be worth cultivation.

Medicinal Plants.——Cola is a famous fruit, highly efteemed by the natives, to which they attribute the fame virtues as to Peruvian Bark. It is ufed for the fame purpofes pofes by the Portuguefe, who fend out fmall veffels along the coaft to collect all the Cola they can get.

de ande

Peruvian Bark. Of this a new fort has been difcovered, which may perhaps prove as ufeful as the other : the natives ufe it for the fame purpofes.

Caftor Oil. The bufh which produces the nuts from which this oil is expressed, grows every where in Sierra Leone.

Caffia of the Cane. The African fpecies is nearly related to that of the Weft Indies, and will not, it is thought, be found lefs ufeful.

With refpect to Dyes, Yellow may be extracted from the Butter fruit tree, and Blue from Indigo. Black and Red may alfo be obtained from other plants. Gum Copal and Gum Senega, ufually fold in the fhops for Gum Arabic, are among the chief gums on the coaft.

The True Cotton grows plentifully in Sierra Leone, as does the Silk Cotton among other Cotton fruits.

The natives use the back of the Mahant for ropes and whips, and the roots of the famous Mangrove for bas in making mats.

Common Tobacco grows at Sierra Leone, but the natives do not cultivate it.
