

Vujaški napisi iz Celeje in njene okolice

Julijana VISOČNIK

Izvleček

Avtorica predstavi vojaške napise iz Celeje in okolice; beneficijski napisi, ki so že bili predmet raziskave, so navedeni le tabelarično. Napisi so zbrani v katalogu (delitev mesto - ager), kjer transkripciji sledi še prevod. V osrednjem delu so vojaški napisi analizirani glede na vojaške funkcije in enote, ki so izpričane na napisih. Avtorica opozarja tudi na druge posebnosti: imena, ikonografijo, jezikovne značilnosti ... Velik del vojaških napisov predstavlja nagrobniki, votivni so trije, počastitvena dva. Največ celejskih vojakov je svoje služenje opravilo v Drugi italski legiji, torej v edini norički legiji. Na napisih so izpričani predvsem navadni vojaki in veterani, srečamo pa tudi pretorijsance in centurione.

Ključne besede: antika, rimski imperij, Norik, Celeja, rimska vojska, vojaške enote, funkcije

Abstract

The author presents military inscriptions from Celeia and its surroundings except the inscriptions of beneficiarii; they are listed only in a table since they were analysed elsewhere. The inscriptions are collected in a catalogue (division town - ager). In the commentary they are analysed according to the military functions and units attested on them. The author outlines various other peculiarities: names, iconography, linguistic and other characteristics. The majority of the military inscriptions from Celeia are funerary monuments; there are only three votive altars and two honorific slabs. Many of the Celeian soldiers served in the legion II Italica, the only Norican legion. The inscriptions mostly attest common soldiers and veterans but praetorians and centurions are also documented.

Keywords: antiquity, Roman empire, Noricum, Celeia, Roman army, military units, military functions

UVOD

Članek E. Pochmarskega o vojakih iz Flavije Solve¹ je bil spodbuda za pripravo tega prispevka. Odločila sem se, da obravnavaam tiste celejske vojake, ki so izpričani v Celeji sami oziroma v njenem agru, ne pa tudi napisov celejskih vojakov, najdenih drugje po imperiju. V večini primerov gre za vojake, ki so v Celeji umrli. Njihov origo je praviloma izpuščen, tako lahko o njihovi pravtvi domovini samo ugibamo. Ločiti je treba med "celejskimi" vojaki, ki jim lahko sledimo na širšem prostoru Celeje, in tistimi, ki so izpričani po raznih delih rimskega imperija – njihov origo (Celeia) je v tem primeru naveden. Ker je slednjih vsaj 30 in tvorijo zaokroženo celoto, se zdi smiselno, da se predstavijo na drugem mestu.²

Analiza vojaških napisov Celeje bo pokazala prevladujočo obliko spomenikov, izrisale se bodo vojaške enote, v katerih so omenjeni predstavniki opravljali svojo službo, njihove funkcije ter morebitne razlike med situacijo v agru in v mestu. Vojaški napisi Celeje kot celota še niso bili obravnavani, izpuščam pa skupino napisov beneficiarijev,³ ker so jih že večkrat preučevali.

nationis expeditionem (ne expeditionum), prim. še Galdi 2004, 249-250. Ta razлага se zdi najverjetnejša tudi zaradi konteksta, v katerega lahko postavimo pretorijance. Iz samega napisa pa bi lahko sklepali tudi na drugačen scenarij. Barbij Finit naj bi se namreč vrnil v sveto mesto (beremo lahko tudi in urbem sacram), zaradi opravljenih vojaške službe pa postavil oltar. Zakaj bi pretorijanc postavil oltar v provinci in se potem vrnil v sveto mesto, ni jasno. Prevod in razлага napisa brez konteksta, ki narekuje branje po "pesniškem" besednjem redu, ni niti logična niti smiselna.

Sl. 16: Nagrobna stela za Avrelija Viktorja in njegovo soprogo (CIL III 11700)

Fig. 16: Funerary stele for Aurelius Victor and his wife (CIL III 11700)

Prevod: Viben, Vindonov sin, je za življenja postavil (nagrobnik) sebi in Sekoniji Vetuli, najbolj predani ženi, stari ... , in sinu Sekoniju Vibiju, vojaku Druge pretorijanske kohorte, staremu ... let, in Sekoniju (?) Viktorju, staremu (?), in Senekijanu, Vibenovemu sinu, staremu ..., in konjskemu hlapcu Ursu ter vojaku Severju ...?¹⁰

¹⁰ V osmi in deseti vrstici sta v širini vrstice vpisani besedi Eqis [-?] / Urso[-?] in Sever[o-?] / mil[it]i? -], ki sta bili najverjetnejše vgravirani naknadno. Prim. Visočnik 2006, 368, št. 4. in Šašel Kos 2001, 200.

Datacija: 2. pol. 1. st./2. st.

Vojaški kipi

22. Torzo vojaškega oficirja (sl. 18)

Opis: Odlomek kipa v oklepnu je slabo ohranjen, a še razpoznaven. Dimenzije ohranjenega torza govorijo o njegovi nadnaravnih velikosti, vendar je ohranjen le oklep z okroglim izrezom (brez glave in vrata).

Objava: Kolšek 1994, 31–33 (sl. 1–4).

Datacija: natančna datacija ni mogoča, vendar lahko sklepamo, da gre za zgodnji izdelek domačih kamnoseških delavnic.

23. "Noriški vojak" (sl. 19)

Opis: Primer plastike v oklepnu, ki lahko predstavlja noriškega visokega oficirja in/ali visokega uradnika. Oklep je skoraj brez okrasja, kar govori o poznam nastanku plastike.

Objava: Kolšek 1994, 33 (sl. 6).

Datacija: konec 3. st./začetek 4. st.

24. Torzo vojaškega oficirja iz Zagrada (sl. 20)

Opis: Kip iz marmorja v naravnih velikosti upodablja nižjega vojaškega oficirja (centurio ?), ki je oblečen v tuniko, čez ramena in hrbot pa mu sega težek vojaški plašč. Prsi mu pokriva spodaj listasto narezani oklep, ob levem boku nosi meč, ki je pritrjen na širok službeni pas. Na prsih je vidno tudi odlikovanje.

Objava: Djura Jelenko 2006, 352–353, št. 10 (sl. 9).

Datacija: najverjetneje sodi v konec 3. st.

Beneficiarski napis

31 beneficiarskih napisov, ki jih navajam le tabelarično (tab. 1 in 2), precej spremeni podobo vojaških napisov v Celeji; močno se poveča odstotek predstavnikov Druge italske legije zaradi konzularjevih beneficiarijev. Beneficiarije v Celeji delimo na dve veliki skupini: na prokuratorjeve (do markomanskih vojn) in konzularjeve, ko provinco ni več upravljal prokurator, temveč legat.

Sl. 19: "Noriški vojak"
Fig. 19: "Norican soldier"

Sl. 20: Torzo vojaškega oficirja iz Zagrada
Fig. 20: Torso of an officer from Zagrad

Beneficiarski napisi v Celeji, od tega jih je dve tretjini iz prvega obdobja, potrjuje poseben položaj mesta. Zanimiva je primerjava s številom tovrstnih napisov v Virunu, noriškem glavnem mestu, kjer jih je le tretjina.¹¹ Vloga beneficiarjev v rimskem imperiju (v upravi in vojski) še ni popolnoma pojasnjena, vendar ni sporno, da so opravljali upravno-policisce naloge.¹²

¹² Prim. Ott 1995, 113–155 (za naloge beneficiarjev).

Obstoj njihove postaje ter število ohranjenih napisov v Celeji gotovo nista brez pomena. Povezati bi jih mogli s pomembno vlogo Celeje predvsem v prvi fazi romanizacije (1. st. in prva pol. 2. st.).¹³ Morda bi na osnovi tega lahko sklepali na izreden pomen Celeje v 1. st. in možnost, da bi v tem obdobju imela vlogo glavnega mesta. Tudi po prestavitevi sedeža prokuratorja v Virun ne bi bilo izključeno, da so v mestu ostali pomembni uradi, ki bi jih lahko opravljali beneficiariji.

OBLIKA NAPISOV (AGER IN MESTO, PRIMERJAVA)

nagrobnih plošč, pojavljajo pa se tudi stele in v agru en sarkofag (št. 19). Nagrobnih stel kot oblike bolje izdelanega nagrobnika z reliefno upodobitvijo je po pričakovanjih več v mestu (tri: št. 10, 11, 12), v agru je namreč samo ena (št. 20). Vojaki, njihove funkcije in enote, v katerih so službovali, se pojavljajo tudi na votivnih spomenikih, vendar gre le za posamezne primere: en primer v agru (št. 13), dva v mestu (št. 8 in 9). Napis št. 13 iz Črešnjevca, ki je posvečen boginji Viktoriji, kraljici Noreji in provinci Britaniji, kaže na vojakovo službovanje v Britaniji.¹⁴ V mestu je en votivni spomenik posvečen Jupitru (št. 8), drugi pa Stanovitni Usodi (Fortunae Stabili) – št. 9. Omenjena božanstva niso bila izbrana naključno, saj se vsa lepo vklaplajo v svet vojaštva. Vojaki in uradniki kot del državnega aparata so se namreč pogosto priporočali prav Jupitru kot vrhovnemu državnemu božanstvu. Vojakova želja po stanovitni usodi – sreči (predvsem v smislu ugodne usode, varovanja na bojnem polju), prav tako ne preseneča. Če bi v obravnavo pritegnili še beneficiarske napis, bi se delež votivnih ar bistveno spremenil. Beneficiariji so namreč pogosto postavljeni oltarje, na katerih so se priporočali uradnim božanstvom, predvsem Jupitru, Eponi, Celeji in Noreji, ki so v večini primerov označeni s pridevnikom augustus.¹⁵ Vojaki pa so izpričani tudi kot posvetitelji počastitvenih napisov (št. 3, 4); št. 3 in 4 bi lahko opredelili tudi za cesarska napis. Lucij Kasij Maksim, centurion Šeste železne legije, je namreč posvetitelj napis za Julijo in Domicijo (št. 3) ter napis za pripadnico višjega sloja, čeprav sicer neznano, Julijo Proculo (št. 4).

Ko govorimo o obliki napisnih spomenikov, je treba omeniti še tri velike vojaške plastike: torzo v oklepnu iz zgodnje dobe (št. 22 – 1. st.), torzo vojaškega oficirja iz Zagrada (št. 24 – konec 3. st.), ter t. i. noriškega vojaka iz pozne dobe (št. 23 – 3./4. st.). Kipom so nekoč pripadale baze, ki so bile zelo verjetno opremljene z napisom in postavljene na javnih mestih.

Vojashi napis v mestu

(tab. 3)

Iz mesta je znanih dvanaest vojaških napisov in dve vojaški skulpturi. Na štirih spomenikih so izpričani veterani, pri tem sta v dveh primerih enoti navedeni (katalog, št. 1 in 6), in v dveh ne (št. 11

¹⁴ Za vojaške vezi med Norikom in Britanijo prim. Birley 1952, 284–297; Birley 1985, 298–303.

¹⁵ Pridevnik augustus je znamenje, da gre za uradno priznan in municipalno pomemben kult, ne glede na to, če so bila božanstva lokalno zelo omejena. Za posvetitelje spomenikov uradnim municipalnim božanstvom je pričakovati, da so polnopravni rimski državljeni, glej Clauss 1999, 280–289.

in 12). V mestu je izpričan samo en navaden vojak (št. 11), oznaka miles pa se pojavi še pri pretorijskemu Barbiju Finitu (št. 8). Izpričana sta še dva pretorijanca: prvi je sodeloval v konjeniški enoti (eques VII praetoriae) (št. 7), drugi je poveljeval izvidnikom (speculatorum) (št. 2).

V mestu se funkcija centuriona pojavi v petih primerih (št. 2, 3, 4 in 9), s tem da je na napisu št. 3 izpričana dvakrat za isto osebo in da se prav ta oseba ponovi še na napisu št. 4. Centurion Lucij Kasij Maksim je namreč svojo službo opravljal v Šesti železni legiji. Na napisu št. 2 sta omenjena dva centuriona, brata Dindija, enega smo že omenili zgoraj kot poveljnika elitne enote pretorijancev, drugi je bil centurion v Trinajstti dvojni legiji.

Dekurioni so v mestu izpričani na treh napisih (št. 5, 6 in 10); samo pri Gaju Juliju Ursinu (št. 5) sta funkcija in enota nevedeni popolnoma nedvoumno: poveljeval je namreč turmi v Prvi ali Komagenov. V isti enoti je vojaščino odslužil Gaj Junij Isej (št. 6). Kot dekurion italske (legije ?) je opredeljen Avrelij Gajan (št. 10). Njegova funkcija in enota sta podani ohlapno, vendar najverjetneje gre za oficirja Druge italske legije, ki je poveljeval konjeniškemu oddelku v tej legiji.¹⁶ Izstopa pa tudi po tem, da je naveden njegov izvor (origo): cives Surus. Družina Avrelija Gajana se je verjetno priselila z vzhoda po markomanskih vojnah.

Med vojaškimi napisi Celeje izstopata počastitveni plošči (št. 3 in 4), ki nista samo počastitveni, ena od njiju je cesarskega značaja. Na obeh je omenjena Šesta železna legija, ki se je bojevala za Vespazijana v Italiji, a se je kmalu vrnila v Sirijo, kjer je bila stacionirana že prej (Raphaeae ali Samosata). V času tega pohoda v Italijo, ko je kar nekaj časa prebila tudi na Balkanu, bi lahko bil rekrutiran centurion Lucij Kasij Maksim. Najpozneje leta 119 se je legija premaknila v Arabijo in od tam leta 123 v Judejo (Caparcotna). Septimij Sever ji je zaradi podpore v boju proti Gaju Pesceniju Nigru podelil naziva fidelis in constans.¹⁷ Kot kaže njegovo volilno okrožje (Claudia), je bil Lucij Kasij Maksim verjetno po rodu iz Celeje. Za postavitev dveh počastitvenih plošč je poskrbel njegov domnevni osvobojenec: Lucius Cassius Eudaemon. Plošči je mogoče datirati razmeroma natančno s pomočjo omemb pripadnic cesarske družine (na eni od njiju): božanske Julije, hčere cesarja Tita, in Domicije Avguste, žene cesarja Domicijana. Spomenik lahko datiramo med leti 90, ko je umrla Julija (zato diva), in 96, ko je umrla Domicija, kar bi potrjevalo čas zgoraj omenjene rekrutacije.¹⁸ Okoliščine, zaradi katerih je ti plošči postavil, niso povsem jasne.

Avrelij Saturnin (št. 12) je bil sodeč po imenih članov njegove družine domačin, ki mu je sin postavil nagrobnik; vojaške enote ni navedel, morda je šlo za noriško Drugo italsko legijo.

Veteran Avrelij Verin (št. 11) je postavil na grobno stelo za svojega sina Avrelija Justina, ki je služil v Drugi italski legiji in umrl star komaj 23 let v eni izmed dačanskih odprav.¹⁹ Tudi družina teh Avrelijev je živelna v Celeji. Oblika Daccisca je nenavadna, saj bi pričakovali običajno, izpeljano iz pridevnika Dacicus, a se je očitno spremenila pod vplivom grških pridevnikov in samostalnikov na -isko ~.²⁰ Katerega pohoda proti Dačanom se je umrli udeležil, ni popolnoma jasno, a se je to moralno dogoditi konec 2. st. ali v 3. st., kar nakazujeta slog spomenika in ime Aurelius. Morda je Avrelij Justin sodeloval v pohodu Maksimina Tračana (236).²¹

Lucius Braetius Publius (št. 1) iz Verone je bil veteran legije Osme avguste, ki je imela po letu 9 po Kr. svoj tabor v Petovioni (Panonija), po letu 45 pa v kraju Novae v Meziji. Leta 69 je podprla Vespazijana in se pod Cerialisom bojevala proti Batavijcem. Zatem je bila nameščena v mestu Argentorate (Strasbourg). Naziv Augusta je najverjetneje posledica neke zmage, ki jo je legija dosegla pod Avgustom.²² Veteranovo osebno ime sicer ni izpisano v celoti, a je najverjetneje, da gre za ime Publius.²³ Izviral je iz Verone, vendar si je v Celeji ustvaril družino, na kar lahko sklepamo na osnovi avtohtonega ženskega imena, ki se nahaja na napisu (Magiona Verulli f(ilia)). Imena ter okrajšave na napisu govorijo v prid njegovemu zgodnjemu nastanku, tako bi ga verjetno lahko povezali s časom, ko je bila njegova legija stacionirana v Petovioni.

Centurion Desete dvojne legije (št. 9) Ulpij Valerijan je postavil oltar Stanovitni Usodi za blagor cesarjev Septimija Severa, Karakale in Gete, katerega ime je odklesano (damnatio memoriae).

¹⁹ Morda še ena družina, ki se je specializirala za vojaški poklic.

²⁰ Prim. Galdi 2006, 295, več deviacij, ki so nastale zaradi vpliva grščine oziroma dvojezičnosti, je mogoče opaziti v Meziji, Daciji in drugih bližnjih provincah, ki so bile grški kulturi bolj izpostavljene.

²¹ Petrovitsch 2006, 196.

²² RE XII.2 1925, 1587–1596; Cotton 2000, 351–357. Za zgodovino legije glej še Kennedy 1980, 283–309 in Dabrova 1996, 277–296 (posebej 285–288).

²³ Prim. Onomasticon III, 169–170: Publicius ali Publilius sta kot osebni imeni še manj verjetni kot ime Publius.

Zaradi omembe cesarjev je napis mogoče datirati, nekako med leti 197, ko je bil Karakali podeljen naziv augustus in Geti caesar, in 211, ko je umrl Septimij Sever.²⁴

Pri veteranu z oznako ex decurione (št. 6) lahko na napisu opazimo več zanimivosti. Gaja Junija sta bila brata in na osnovi njunih osebnih imen (cognomina) lahko sodimo, da sta se priselila z vzhoda, čeprav napis ne vsebuje izrecne navedbe izvora (origo). Zajac za Junije predvideva, da so prišli z vzhoda, konkreten dokaz bi naj bili dve imeni grškega izvora, ki se pojavit na napisu: Nicander in Afrodisia.²⁵ *Isaeus*²⁶ in Nicander sta bila prav gotovo brata, ime očeta pa žal ni več ohranljeno. Oče bi lahko bil veteran v enoti ala I Comagenorum, ki se je okoli leta 72 še mudila na vzhodu, od 106 naprej pa je izpričana v Noriku.²⁷ Prvo alo Komagenov so najverjetnejše v Norik poslali že v času cesarja Domicijana. Stacionirana je bila v Komageni (Commagena - Tulln), ki je svoje ime dobila po tej enoti.²⁸

Pretorijanci v Celeji

V Rimu in Italiji je bilo pod Avgustom nameščenih devet pretorijanskih kohort, ena morda celo v Akvileji.²⁹ Pretorijancem sta načelovala dva prefekta pretorija, posameznim kohortam pa tribuni. V primerjavi z drugimi vojaki so imeli pretorijanci privilegiran položaj, saj so bili bolje plačani, njihova vojaška obveznost pa je trajala samo 16 let.

Od Vespaziana dalje je bilo v Rimu nameščenih deset pretorijanskih kohort pod poveljstvom enega prefekta pretorija. Ker je vsaka štela 500 ali celo 1000 vojakov, so predstavljalni pomembno vojaško silo v glavnem mestu. Politična vloga teh kohort in njihovega poveljnika je bila velika in občasno so celo soodločali pri izbiri cesarja.

V Prvi pretorijanski kohorti (Cohors I praetoria) je služboval Barbij Finit (št. 8), ki je postavil oltar Jupitru, ker se je srečno vrnil s službovanja v svetem mestu. Svojo službo je očitno opravljal kot pretorijanec v Rimu. Rim se sveto mesto ni imenoval pred obdobjem cesarja Hadrijana,³⁰ kar pomeni, da obstaja terminus post quem za datiranje.

Najverjetnejše je v Sedmi pretorijanski kohorti (cohors (?) VII praetoria) svojo službo kot konjenik (eques) opravljal Enij Sekundijan (št. 7), ki je glede na navedeno starost na nagrobniku očitno ni dokončal, saj je umrl star 25 let.

Napis št. 2 sta postavila brata Lucij in Publij, ki sta oba bila centuriona, kar kaže, da je šlo za vojaško usmerjeno družino. Publij je poveljeval elitni enoti pretorijancev; Lucij pa centuriji v Trinajsti dvojni legiji. Ker je oznaki funkcije (speculatores - telesni stražarji, izvidniki) dodan še pridevnik augusti, lahko sklepamo, da je Publij Dindij Sperat služil med pretorijanci, ki so varovali cesarja.³¹ Poveljnik speculatores je imel naziv centurio speculator,³² kar je očitno funkcija, ki jo je opravljal Publij Dindij Sperat. Tristotim pripadnikom posebne enote pretorijanske garde so namreč zaupali še posebej pomembno nalogu cesarjevih telesnih stražarjev.³³ Speculatores pa so lahko bili tudi telesni stražnji upravnikov provinc; izpričani so v številnih provincah, med drugim tudi v Panoniji in Dalmaciji. Gentilno ime Dindius ni pogosto, saj se v Noriku pojavi samo na tem napisu;³⁴ v neposredni bližini so Dindiji izpričani še v Kamniku, Emoni in Akvileji, medtem ko družina prvotno izvira iz mesta Preneste v srednji Italiji. V bližnji Akvileji, od koder so se selili naprej na naše ozemlje, so Dindiji razmeroma dobro izpričani.³⁵ Dindija na našem napisu najbrž predstavlja drugo generacijo priseljenih predstavnikov te družine. Materin gentilicij Gavia je latinsko ime, ki je sicer največkrat izpričan v Italiji, a se pojavlja tudi drugje.³⁶ Osebno ime Viruna, ki je izpričano samo v tem primeru, pa je verjetno izpeljano iz imena municipija Virunum, zato bi lahko sklepalni na avtohtono poreklo.³⁷ Nastanek napisa bi morda lahko povezali z obdobjem, ko je bila Trinajsta dvojna legija v Petovioni, torej z drugo pol. 1. st.³⁸ Po bitki pri Akciju je delovala v Iliriku, od tam so jo prestavili na Ren (9 po Kr.) in končno v Vindoniso (Germania superior). V času Klavdija

(45/46) je prišla v Petoviono, kjer je nasledila Osmo legijo avgusto in tam ostala do okoli leta 90, ko jo je Domicijan poslal v Vindobono.³⁹ Morda se je bojevala že v prvi Trajanovi vojni proti Dačanom, gotovo pa je sodelovala v drugi. Ostala je v novoustanovljeni provinci Daciji, kjer je imela svoj tabor v kraju Apulum. Ko so se Rimljani umaknili iz Dacije (274/275), je bila premeščena v novo provinco Obrežno Dacijo (Ratiaria).⁴⁰

V celejskem agru je izpričan samo en predstavnik pretorijancev, in sicer iz Druge kohorte, ki je omenjen na napisu iz Zgornjih Dovž (št. 21). Njegovo ime Seconius je psevdogentilicij, izpeljan je iz keltskega korena: Secco-. V osmi in deseti vrstici sta v širini vrstice vpisani dve besedi, ki sta bili najverjetneje vgravirani naknadno, povezava z ostalim napisom namreč ni jasna. Oba poznejša vpisa lahko povežemo z vojaškim življenjem; equis lahko stoji namesto eques (konjenik) ali še verjetneje namesto equiso (konjski hlapec), kar se nanaša na osebo z imenom Urso. V drugem primeru je imenu Severus dodana oznaka miles, torej vojaku Severju.⁴¹ Rimske državljanstvo je bilo pogoj za vstop v legijo; pretorijance pa so med drugim novčili tudi iz legij.⁴² Družinsko ime vojaka Druge pretorijanske kohorte ni latinsko, temveč gre za psevdogentilicij, ki je keltskega izvora (št. 21). Ta pretorijanec je bil verjetno avtohtonega izvora (prim. Secco-). Dolgo časa je veljalo prepričanje, da so pretorijance v zgodnjem obdobju rekrutirali le iz Italije, od začetka 2. st. naprej tudi že iz nekaterih provinc, med njimi tudi iz Norika, od Septimija Severa dalje pa so bili predvsem iz Panonije.⁴³ Če je okvirna datacija napisa s psevdogentilicijem točna, so pretorijance iz Norika morda rekrutirali že v 1. st.

Vojaški napisi na območju celejskega agra (tab. 4)

S celejskega agra izvira deset vojaških napisov oziroma deset oseb, ki so opravljale vojaško službo. V treh primerih se srečamo z veterani, pri čemer enkrat enota ni navedena (št. 19). Pri ostalih dveh sta nevedeni še legiji (št. 14 in 18), pri enem celo služba orožarja, ki jo je opravljal (custos armorum)

– št. 18. Za veterane so se uporabljale tudi druge besede ali besedne zveze: dimissi honesta missione, emissi, missici, emeriti, evocati ali exauctorati. Po odpustu so postali honestiores, zato so lahko dobili pomembna mesta v lokalni upravi, udejstvovali pa so se tudi v gospodarstvu, trgovini, nekateri so opravljali svečenijske funkcije.

Tri osebe so na nagrobnikih označene kot miles. Dva vojaka sta svoje služenje opravila v najbližji Drugi italski legiji (št. 15 in 20), tretji je služboval kot pretorijanec v Drugi pretorijanski kohorti (št. 21). Preostali so posamezniki, ki so dosegli nekoliko višje funkcije: centurio in decurio. Med tremi sta dva centuriona, od katerih je prvi deloval v Drugi italski legiji (št. 13), drugi pa je služboval v Deseti dvojni (št. 17), dekurion je poveljeval v Drugi ali Asturov (št. 16). Poleg predstavnikov senatorskega in viteškega reda so bili centurioni (centuriones) v rimski vojski najpomembnejši oficirji. Predvideva se celo, da so centurione povzdignili v viteški red, a je verjetneje, da so bili tega privilegija deležni samo primi pili.⁴⁴

Nabor za pomožne čete so izvajali med peregrini, ki so si z opravljeno službo (25 let) prisluzili določene pravice in ugodnosti, med drugim tudi rimske državljanstvo.⁴⁵ Za poveljnike pomožnih čet, ki naj bi v večini primerov izvirali iz Italije,⁴⁶ in druge višje oficirje v pomožnih četah (auxilia) je rimske državljanstvo pričakovano. Tit Julij Belik (št. 16) je bil dekurion v ali, kjer je poveljeval eni turmi (turma).⁴⁷ Potem ko je Tit Julij Belik svojo vojaško službo končal, je kariero nadaljeval v municipalni upravi, saj je postal dekurion, torej član mestnega sveta (ordo decurionum).⁴⁸ Nagrobeni spomenik priča o bogastvu družine, saj mu je njegov brat in obenem dedič postavil zavidljiv spomenik.

Druga italska legija je bila ves čas obstoja v Noriku; svojo pot je začela prav v celejskem agru, zato na območju Celeje (ager in mesto) srečujemo največ vojakov te legije (št. 10, 11, 13, 15, 18, 20). Poleg pravkar omenjene sta na napisih celejskega agra omenjeni še dve legiji: Peta makedonska (št. 14) in Deseta dvojna (št. 17). Poleg legij je omenjena tudi Druga pretorijanska kohorta (št. 21) ter Druga ala Asturov (št. 16).

⁴⁷ Ott 1997, 133, med noriškimi poveljniki pomožnih čet navaja Marka Belicija Saturnina, ki naj bi pripadal družini, ki je v Virunu obogatela s trgovino. Menim, da so Beliciji iz Viruna stranska veja tistih v Celeji. Kolonizacija in romanizacija sta najbrž najprej dosegli Celejo, od koder se je proces širil naprej.

Drugo italsko legijo je ustanovil Mark Avrelij leta 165 ali 166 med vojno z Markomani.⁴⁹ Kmalu po ustanovitvi jo je poslal v Norik (168/169 ali malo pozneje), kjer je imela svoj prvi vojaški tabor na strateško dobro lociranem kraju v Ločici blizu Celja, da bi lahko preprečila dostop iz Panonije v Emono in naprej. Temu namenu ni služila dolgo, že Komod jo je namreč prestavil v Lavriak. Še v času, ko je bila v Ločici, naj bi si pridobila naziva pia in fidelis, saj so v okolici tabora – na Vranskem – našli opeko s temo nazivoma.⁵⁰ V letih 174/175 so jo prestavili na Donavo, najprej v Albing, nato v Lauriacum, kjer je ostala do pozne antike. Pochmarski navaja, da so ji v času cesarja Septimija Severa zaradi lojalnosti podelili naziv fidelis.⁵¹ Trditev očitno ne drži, saj je naziv izpričan že v Ločici, so ji ga pa pozneje najbrž podelili oziroma potrdili še večkrat.⁵² Pod Karakalo in Elagabalom je bila poimenovana Antoniniana, pod Aleksandrom Severom pa Severiana. Prva generacija legionarjev Druge italske legije izhaja iz severne Italije, kjer je bila legija rekrutirana; izvor naslednjih lahko iščemo v Noriku, še posebej po uvedbi constitutio

Antoniniana (212), s katero so postala vrata legij odprta širšemu krogu ljudi.⁵³

Vojaško službo je v Drugi italski legiji služil Septimij Sekundin (št. 15), ki je očitno ni dokončal, saj je na nagrobeni plošči navedeno, da je odslužil 15 let in umrl pri 40. O razlogu prezgodnjega odpusta ali smrti lahko samo ugibamo, pri obeh številkah pa je očitno zaokroževanje let.⁵⁴ Na tem napisu je mogoče prebrati besedo stipendiorum, kar je razmeroma pogosta oblika, kljub temu da je bolj običajna tista s črko I: stipendiorum. Oblika z U ni nepravilna, gre samo za ohranjeno arhaično obliko. Varon piše, da je bila takšna izgovorjava bolj lastna ljudski (podeželski) različici jezika.⁵⁵ Nihanje v pisavi med i in u je opaziti od avgustejške dobe naprej. Pod vplivom takih primerov se je raba razširila še na primere, kjer sta se i in u izgovarjala podobno.⁵⁶

Veteran Druge italske legije Sakronij Verin (št. 18) je na napisu izpričan s posebno funkcijo orožarja (custos armorum), ki jo je lahko opravljal navadni vojak. Vsaka centurija v legiji naj bi imela po enega, torej naj bi bilo vseh 59 (kot centurionov).⁵⁷

Besedna zveza hoste Gutica pomeni gotskega sovražnika, s katerim se je boril Avrelij Viktor (št. 20), prav tako vojak Druge italske legije. Oblika Gutica je nekoliko nenavadna, saj za Gote takšne oblike doslej še nismo poznali, čeprav se za Gothicus (gotski, Got) na napisih poleg tukaj izpričane oblike najdejo še druge: Gotico, Guttico, Guthicus.⁵⁸ Prvi cesar, ki si je nadel ta naziv, je bil Claudius Gothicus (268–270), ki je leta 269 pri Naisu (Naius, Niš) odločilno porazil Gote. Avrelij Viktor bi lahko sodeloval v omenjeni bitki, saj že sama oblika napisa in celotnega napisnega kamna govori v prid nastanku v tem času. Poleg tega je svojo vojaško službo opravljal v Drugi italški legiji, torej legiji, ki bi se te bitke dejansko lahko udeležila.⁵⁹ Petrovitsch omenja še cesarja Decija, ki se je med letoma 249 in 251 boril z Goti; po njegovem mnenju je verjetneje, da je Avrelij Viktor padel na tem pohodu.⁶⁰ Pri tem pa ne gre zaobiti upodobitve vojaka v reliefni niši, ki je nadvse zanimiva. Poleg ostalih podrobnosti je na tem mestu ključnega pomena okrogel zaključek nožnice meča, ki ga je mogoče uporabiti kot kriterij za datiranje. Tovrstne okrogle zaključke delimo na dve veliki skupini, vendar obe datiramo 2. pol. 3. st.⁶¹ To dejstvo tako bolj potrjuje prvo datacijo (Claudius Gothicus).

Centurion (morda beneficiarij) Druge italške legije Lucij Septimij (?) Tertin (št. 13) je poskrbel za postavitev votivne are Viktoriji, Noreji in Britaniji (sedaj v Črešnjevcu). Noreja je na tem mestu natančneje opredeljena kot regina, kar nakazuje na identifikacijo z Izido. Nenavadna je posvetitev provinci Britaniji, ki implicitira, da je vojak služil v Britaniji. Napis bi lahko uvrstili v vrsto tistih, ki potrjujejo močno povezavo in stike med Norikom in Britanijo.⁶²

Veteran Pete makedonske legije Gaj Vibij Sabin (št. 14) se je po odsluženi vojaški službi verjetno vrnil v svoj domači kraj, na kar bi lahko sklepali na osnovi njegovega gentilnega imena.⁶³ Med letoma 30 pr. Kr. in 6 po Kr. je bila legija v Makedoniji, nato pa so jo prestavili v Mezijo, kjer je imela tabor v kraju Oescus. Leta 61 oziroma 62 so jo poslali v Armenijo, kjer je služila pod Vespazijanom v vojni proti Judom; še pred letom 71 pa se je vrnila nazaj

v omenjeni tabor v Meziji. Ko so provinco leta 86 razdelili, je pripadla enotam, ki so bile stacionirane v Spodnji Meziji. Pod Lucijem Verom se je bojevala v vojni s Parti (162–166), leta 167 ali 168 pa se je preselila v Dacijsko (Potaissa). Ko so Rimljani izgubili Dacijsko severno od Donave (274/275), se je vrnila v Oescus, ki se je zdaj nahajal v novoustanovljeni provinci Dacia Ripensis.⁶⁴ Po odsluženi vojaški službi (ob smrti je bil star 65 let) se je Gaj Vibij Sabin ustalil na manj romaniziranem območju Celeje. Napis je mogoče datirati v 2. st., vendarle se zdi verjetneje, da je Vibij svojo službo opravljal v Meziji in ne v Dacijski.

Naslednja enota je Deseta dvojna legija (predana, zvesta), ki se ji je začasno delovanje v Hispaniji končalo leta 63 po Kr., ko so jo prestavili v Panonijo (Karnunt). Še enkrat se je morala vrniti v Hispanijo; a le za kratek čas, nekaj časa je bila stacionirana v Spodnji Germaniji, kjer si je prislužila naziva pia in fidelis v zahvalo za zvestobo v času revolta L. Antonija Saturnina (med letoma 89 in 96). Okoli leta 103 so jo iz Germanije prestavili v Panonijo; kratek čas je bila v Akvinku. Kdaj natančno je dobila svoj tabor v Vindoboni, ni znano, gotovo pa še v času Trajana, nekako po letu 107.⁶⁵ Na območju celejskega agra je bil njen predstavnik Lucij Apulej (št. 17), ki je po opravljeni vojaščini najverjetneje služboval kot župan v Celeji.⁶⁶ Grobno parcelo zase in za svoje si je najverjetneje uredil v bližini svojih posestev, ki so se morala nahajati v celejskem agru, v bližini Kolacione. Spomenik sodi v 2. st., torej v čas, ko je legija službovala v bližnji Panoniji.

Tit Julij Belik je bil dekurion v Drugi ali Asturov (št. 16). V začetni dobi so bili dekurioni poveljniki najmanjše konjeniške enote, v cesarski dobi (kamor sodi tudi naš napis) pa je decurio poveljeval eni turmi.⁶⁷ Po rangu je bil dekurion ale nad centurionom (pomožne) kohorte in pod centurionom v legiji.⁶⁸ Precejšnje število napisov, na katerih je omenjena ala II Asturum, so našli v Britaniji (na Hadrijanovem zidu), kjer je morala biti stacionirana zelo dolgo.⁶⁹ Po mnenju Wagnerja so Drugo alo Asturov še v času Tiberija prestavili iz Germanije na Donavo. Birley trdi, da je ala najprej delovala na območju Rena, nato so jo poslali v Panonijo in po tem v Britanijo. Krier pa zagovarja nekoliko drugačen vrstni red službovanja: v predflavijskem času naj bi bila ala del noriške vojske, po uporu Batavijcev pa naj bi jo prestavili v Panonijo. V Britanijo je morda odšla z Julijem Agrikolo.⁷⁰

NAVAJANJE STAROSTI NA VOJAŠKIH NAPISIH CELEJE

Večino vojaških napisov Celeje (tako mesta kakor tudi agra) predstavljajo nagrobni spomeniki, pri katerih je običajno navajanje starosti, ki jo je pokopani doživel. Pri predstavnikih vojske bi pričakovali natančno navajanje starosti ob smrti, saj so velik del svojega življenja preživeli v državni organizaciji, kjer je bilo zelo pomembno, kdaj je nekdo v enoto vstopil, kdaj jo bo zapustil, torej njegova službena leta, s tem v zvezi pa tudi njegova starost.

V mestu so leta zapisana na sedmih napisih (št. 1, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11 in 12). Zaokrožena so na: 70, 75 (št. 1); 40 (št. 5); 25, 60, 50 (št. 7); 50, 35 (št. 10); 45, 35 (št. 12), ne pa v primeru vojaka, ki je umrl med dačanskim pohodom star komaj 23 let (št. 11), torej nedolgo po vstopu v vojsko. Na napisu št. 12 je omenjen tudi Avrelij Sekundin, ki je umrl kot otrok, star samo sedem let; pri mladih osebah je navajanje natančnejšega števila let pogosteje. Precizno navajanje starosti je mogoče opaziti še pri dveh osebah na napisu št. 6 (38, 24), na katerem so poleg starosti 25 let zaokrožena tudi leta ob smrti veterana Gaja Junija Iseja (60 let). Na tem napisu je zanimiva navedba starosti ob smrti Ulpije Afrodizije, 25 let in 1 mesec, kar je pri vojaških napisih pa tudi pri ostalih razmeroma redek, vendar razumljiv pojav.⁷¹

Na napisih iz agra se s starostjo srečamo pri petih (št. 14, 15, 18, 19 in 20); izstopa napis št. 19, pri katerem so navedene starosti štirih oseb: pri prvem lahko govorimo o t. i. stoletniku,⁷² njegova žena je prav tako doživila zavidljivo starost 90

⁷¹ To je edina navedba let in mesecev na celejskem prostoru (primera z dnevi sploh še ni).

⁷² O zaokroževanju let, stoletnikih in sploh štetju let najdeš več v Šašel Kos 2006, 175–197, glej tudi pripadajočo literaturo.

let, drugi dve osebi, ki bi lahko bila njuna otroka, pa naj bi obe umrli pri dvaindvajsetih. Pri prvih dveh je zaokroževanje let očitno, druga dva pa naj bi umrla enako stara, kar je malo verjetno. Vse ostale navedene starosti so zaokrožene na 5 oziroma 10: 65 (št. 14); 50, 40, 30 (št. 15); 50 (št. 18); 30 (št. 20).

SKLEPNE MISLI

Na obravnavanih vojaških napisih Celeje so izpričani predvsem legionarji, pretorijanci, centurioni in veterani; samo v enem primeru je veteranu (Sacronius Verinus) dodana še posebna funkcija (custos armorum). Poleg edine noriške Druge italske legije so izpričane še Peta makedonska, Šesta železna, Osma avgusta ter Deseta in Trinajsta dvojna. Slednje tri so v različnih obdobjih sodile v sestav sosednje panonske vojske. Med pomožnimi četami se Prva ali Komagenov pojavi dvakrat, enkrat pa ala Asturov. Obe omenjeni enoti sodita v sestavo noriške vojske, saj sta bili v provinci stacionirani med 1. in 3. stoletjem.⁷³

Noben od treh posvetiteljev votivnih ar ni naveden vojak: Barbij Finit (št. 8) je pretorijanec, Ulpij Valerijan (št. 9) je centurion, L. Septimij Tertin (št. 13) pa ali prav tako centurion ali beneficiarij. Omenjeno dejstvo je mogoče povezati s stroški postavitve oltarja, ki si jih je navaden vojak gotovo teže privoščil.

Med vojaki Celeje ločimo domačine, ki so se po končani vojaški službi vrnili domov, in tuje, ki so delovali v bližini in so se tukaj ustalili. Med prvimi izstopajo pretorijanci (št. 2, 7, 8, 21) in druga generacija vojakov Druge italske legije (št. 10, 11, 12?, 13, 15 in 20). Izrecno je izpričan samo en tujec (št. 1), saj je naveden njegov origo (Verona). V Celeji so najverjetneje rekrutirali tudi vojake omenjene na napisih št. 3 (oziorama 4), 14, 17 in 19. Pri nekaterih natančna opredelitev ni mogoča.

Če primerjamo vojaške napis Flavije Solve in Celeje, je treba upoštevati, da sta obe mesti sicer sodili v provinco Norik, vendar med njima obstajajo zgodovinsko pogojene razlike, predvsem zgodnejši nastanek Celeje. Te so vplivale tudi na vojsko v posameznem mestu, na nabor vojakov in vračanje veteranov v domači kraj. Primerjava pokaže, da je bilo v Celeji vojaških napisov veliko več, okoli 100, v Flaviji Solvi pa 46. Po številu napisov mesti nista primerljivi, sta pa po enotah in njihovem številu. Tako v enem kakor v drugem municipiju je največ pripadnikov službovalo v Drugi italski legiji (v Celeji 11, z beneficiariji vred, v Solvi 7). Funkcije, izpričane v Solvi na eni strani ter tiste iz Celeje na drugi, so podobne: centurioni so razmeroma dobro zastopani. Za obe mesti pa velja, da sta dali enotam pretorijancev (Solva 11, Celeja 12 – upoštevani so tudi tisti, ki so izpričani drugje po imperiju) večje število pripadnikov, ki so izpričani tako v domačem kraju kakor tudi v Rimu in drugje po Italiji.

Opaziti je mogoče pričakovane razlike med mestom in agrom, ki so vidne že v sami obliki spomenikov, njihovem številu, pestrejši zastopanosti vojaških enot in funkcij v mestu.

ROMAN MILITARY INSCRIPTIONS FROM CELEIA AND ITS SURROUNDINGS

Translation

INTRODUCTION

Encouraged by the article by E. Pochmarski about the soldiers from Flavia Solva,¹ I collected Celeian military inscriptions. I decided to consider only those Celeian soldiers who are attested in Celeia itself or within its ager but not those Celeian soldiers that were found elsewhere in the Empire. These are mostly soldiers who died in Celeian territory. Their origo is generally omitted, leaving us to speculate on their native homeland. Since there are almost 30 inscriptions of Celeian soldiers attested abroad, it seems appropriate to present them on some other occasion.²

The analysis of the Celeian military inscriptions will reveal the prevailing form of the monuments, military units in which soldiers served, their functions, and the possible differences in the situation between the town and the ager. As a whole have not been published earlier, even though the *beneficiarii*³ were frequently studied.

CATALOGUE⁴ OF MILITARY INSCRIPTIONS OF CELEIA

⁶ This is just one of the possible translations and thus understandings of this inscription and is based on the incorrect word order. In urbe sacra is not, in fact, dependent on regressus but rather on ob peregrinationis expeditionem (not expeditionem), cf. Galdi 2004, 249–250. This explanation seems all the more possible due to the context into which the praetorians can be set. Nevertheless, the inscription itself could suggest an alternative scenario. Barbius Finitus supposedly returned to the sacred city (the possible reading is thus in urbem sacram) and erected an altar for the completed military service. It is not clear why a praetorian would have erected an altar in a provincial town and then returned to the sacred city. The translation and explanation of the inscription without the context, which dictates a “poetic” word order, does not seem logical.

Translation: To Constant Fortune. For the welfare of our lords emperors Augusti Lucius Septimius Severus Pertinax, Marcus Aurelius Antoninus and Publius Septimius Geta, Ulpius Valerianus, centurion of the legion X Gemina, has erected (the altar).

⁷ The fragmentary inscription from Janževa gora pri Selnici (CIL III 6525) may possibly be another military inscription but its fragmentation is too great for recognition.

⁹ Pochmarski (2007, 271 no. 11) places the inscription into the catalogue of the inscriptions from Flavia Solva since the exact border between Flavia Solva and Celeia is unknown. Nevertheless, the vicinity of Celeia renders it more plausible that Črešnjevec belonged to the Celeian ager.

Military statuses

22. Torso of an officer from Celje (fig. 18)

A fragment of a statue in armour is poorly preserved but recognisable. The dimensions of the statue testify to its supernatural size even though only the armour with a circular cutting (without the head and neck) is preserved.

Reference: Kolsék 1994, 31-33 (fig. 1-4).

Date: It cannot be precisely dated; we can assume that it is the product of a local stone-cutting workshop.

23. "Norican soldier" from Celje (fig. 19)

An example of the statue in armour that could represent a Norican ranked officer and/or high official. The armour reveals practically no decoration, which testifies to the late creation of the statue.

Reference: Kolsék 1994, 33 (fig. 6).

Date: It belongs to the end of the 3rd or to the 4th c.

24. Torso of an officer from Zagrad (fig. 20)

The marble statue in real-life size represents a lower rank Roman officer (centurio?) wearing a tunic, his shoulders and back are covered with a heavy military coat. His chest is covered below with leafily cut armour, he wears a sword along the left side, which is attached to the wide official belt. A medal is also visible on his chest.

Reference: Djura Jelenko 2006, 352-353, no. 10 (fig. 9).

Date: The torso most probably belongs to the end of the 3rd c.

Beneficiarii

31 inscriptions of beneficiarii, presented only in a table (tab. 1 and 2), significantly alter the picture of military inscriptions of Celeia; the percentage of the representatives of the legion II Italica rises immensely due to the consular's beneficiarii. Beneficiarii in Celeia can be divided into two groups: procurator's (up until the Marcomannic Wars) and consular's, when the province was no longer run by a procurator but rather a legate.

The 31 inscriptions in Celeia, of which 2/3 are from the early period, testify to the notable role of the town. It is interesting to compare this number with the number in Virunum, the Norican capital, where there are only one third.¹¹

The role of the beneficiarii in the Roman empire (in the administration and army) has not yet been completely clarified, even though there can be no doubt that they performed duties of an administrative-police nature.¹² The existence of their station and the number of the preserved inscriptions in Celeia thus cannot be without meaning. It could be connected to the important role Celeia bore mostly in the first phase of the Romanization (the 1st and the first half of the 2nd c.).¹³ Thus we could assume that Celeia had an important role in the 1st c.; and possibly it was even the provincial capital in this period. Even after the procurator's headquarters had been transferred to Virunum, it seems that important offices remained in Celeia, in which the beneficiarii were employed.

FORM OF THE INSCRIBED MONUMENTS

The majority of the inscriptions from Celeia and its surroundings are tombstones, mostly funerary slabs and, less frequently, also steles, while one sarcophagus (no. 19) has been discovered in the countryside. As expected, funerary steles as a form of a tombstone more carefully manufactured with a relief are more frequent in the town (3: nos. 10, 11, and 12) as the ager has just one (no. 20). Soldiers, their functions and units also appear on votive monuments but these are only isolated examples (1 example in ager; no. 13; 2 in the town: nos. 8, and 9). Inscription no. 13 from Črešnjevec, dedicated to goddess Victoria, queen Noreia and province Britannia, points to the soldier's station in Britannia.¹⁴ One votive monument in the town is devoted to Jupiter – no. 8, and another one to Constant Fortune (Fortunae Stabili) (no.

9). These deities were not chosen by chance but coincide well with the army deities. A soldier's desire for stable destiny or luck (especially in the sense of favourable fate and protection in the battlefield) cannot come as a surprise either. If we also added the inscriptions of beneficiarii to this discussion, the percentage of votive altars would be considerably changed. Namely, beneficiarii often erected altars dedicated to the official deities, mostly to Jupiter, Epona, Celeia and Noreia, all of whom are mainly characterised by the adjective augustus.¹⁵ Soldiers are also attested as ¹⁴ For military connections between Noricum and Britannia cf. Birley 1952; 1985, 298–303.

¹⁵ The adjective augustus confirms that this is an officially accepted and municipally important cult regardless of whether deities were locally very limited. It is reasonable to expect the the dedicators of honorific inscriptions (nos. 3, 4; of which no. 3 can also be imperial). L. Cassius Maximus, centurion of the legion VI Ferrata, is the dedicator of the inscription for Iulia and Domitia (no. 3) and the inscription for a member of the upper class, although unknown, Iulia Procilla (no. 4).

When discussing the form of monuments with inscriptions, we also need to consider three large military statues: a torso in armour from the early period – no. 22 (1st c.), a torso of a military officer from Zagrad (no. 24 – end of the 3rd c.), and the s. c. Norican soldier from the late period – no. 23 (3rd/4th c.). These statues were once placed on bases, which were most probably inscribed and set in public places.

Military inscriptions within the town of Celeia (tab. 3)

Twelve military inscriptions and two military sculptures are known to date. Four monuments attest veterans, two of which state their units (catalogue, nos. 1 and 6) and two do not (nos. 11 and 12). The town has only one common soldier (no. 11).

In the town, the function of centurion appears five times (nos. 2, 3, 4, and 9): L. Cassius Maximus centurion of the legion VI Ferrata is mentioned twice in the inscription no. 3 and again in the no. 4. Inscription no. 2 reveals two centurions, brothers Dindii, one of whom was mentioned above as the commander of speculatorii, and the other was the centurion in the legion XIII Gemina.

Decurions appear in town in three inscriptions (nos. 5, 6, and 10). With C. Iulius Ursinus (no. 5) his function and unit are stated clearly: he commanded one turma of the ala I Commagenorum. The veteran C. Iunius Isaeus (no. 6) served in this same unit. Aurelius Gaianus was a decurion (of the legion?) Italica (no. 10). His function and unit are imprecisely described but we can assume with a certain degree of probability that this is an officer of the legion II Italica, who commanded the cavalry division of this legion.¹⁶

Honorific slabs (nos. 3 and 4) differ from the military inscriptions of Celeia due to their contents and type, they are not simply honorific, one of them is also imperial. Both mention the legion VI Ferrata, which fought for Vespasian in Italy but soon returned to Syria, where it had been previously stationed (Raphaneae or Samosata). In this time of the legion's campaign to Italy, when it spent some time also in the Balkans, the centurion Lucius Cassius Maximus could have been recruited. The legion went to Arabia in 119 at the latest and from there to Iudea (Caparcotna) in 123. Septimius Severus awarded it the titles fidelis and constans due to its support in his campaign against C. Pescenius Niger.¹⁷ Judging from his voting tribe (Claudia), L. Cassius Maximus must have originated from Celeia. His supposed freedman L. Cassius Eudaemon was in charge of erecting two honorific slabs (nos. 3 and 4), which can be dated fairly accurately with the help of the mention of two female members of the imperial family: deified Iulia, the daughter of the emperor Titus, and Domitia Augusta, the wife of the emperor Domitian. The monument is dated between 90, when Iulia died (thus diva), and 96, when Domitia died; this would confirm the time of the above-mentioned recruitment.¹⁸ The reason why these two slabs were erected in Celeia is unclear.

Aurelius Saturninus (no. 12) was, judging from the names of his family members, a local inhabitant, who had the tombstone erected by his son; his military unit is not stated, it could have been the Norican legion II Italica. The veteran Aurelius Verinus (no. 11) erected the funerary stele for his son Aurelius Iustinus who served in the legion II Italica and died barely 23 years old in one of the Dacian campaigns.¹⁹ The family of these Aurelii also lived in Celeia. The form Dacisca is unusual since the usual adjective Dacicus could be expected here – but under the influence of Greek adjectives and nouns in –isko ~,²⁰ this form obviously changed. Which campaign against the Daci was fatal for the deceased is not completely clear but it must have been at the end of the 2nd or in the 3rd c. according to the style of the monument and the name Aurelius. Aurelius Iustinus could have participated in the campaign of Maximinus Thrax (236).²¹

Aurelius Gaianus (no. 10) probably served as a decurion in the legion II Italica, even though his position is described solely as: dec(urio) Ital(icae). He is also exceptional due to his origin being explicitly stated: cives Surus. His family probably moved from the East after the Marcomannic Wars.

L. Braetius Publius (no. 1) from Verona was a veteran of the legion VIII Augusta, which after 9 AD was stationed in Poetovio (Pannonia), and after 45 AD in Novae in Moesia. In 69 they supported Vespasian and fought against the Batavians under Cerialis. Later it was stationed in Argentorate (Strassburg). The title Augusta is most probably the consequence of a victory achieved by the legion under Augustus.²² The veteran's surname is not written out in full but it seems probable that it is Publius.²³ Even though he came from Verona, he started a family in Celeia, which can be inferred from the autochthonous female name in the inscription (Magiona Verulli F(ilia)). The names and abbreviations in the inscription speak in favour of its early erection, thus it could probably be connected with the time of the legion's station in Poetovio.

The centurion Ulpian Valerianus (no. 9) of the legion X Gemina erected an altar to Fortuna Stabilis for the welfare of the emperors Septimius Severus, Caracala, and Geta, whose name is cut off (damnatio memoriae). The inscription can be dated between 197, when Caracala was awarded the title augustus and Geta the title caesar, and 211, when Septimius Severus died.²⁴

Many peculiarities can be observed in the inscription for the veteran denoted as ex decurione (no. 6). Caii Iunii were brothers and from their surnames (cognomina) we may assume that they came from the East even though their origin is not explicitly stated. Zajac assumes that the Iunii came from the East, he sees a firm proof for this in two names of Greek origin appearing in the inscription: Nicander and Afrodisia.²⁵ Isaeus²⁶ and Nicander were certainly brothers, the name of their father is not preserved. The father could have been a veteran of the unit ala I Commagenorum, which around 72 AD was still in the East and is attested in Noricum from 106 AD onward.²⁷ It was probably sent to Noricum already in the time of the emperor Domitian and was stationed in Commagena – Tulln, the settlement later named after this unit.²⁸

²⁰ Cf. Galdi 2006, 295, several deviations occurring from the influence of Greek or bilingualism can be observed in Moesia, Dacia, and other nearby provinces, which were strongly exposed to the Greek culture.

Praetorians attested in Celeia

Under Augustus, Rome and Italy had nine praetorian cohorts, praetorians were commanded by two prefects praetors and the individual cohorts by tribunes. At least one may have been stationed in Aquileia.²⁹ Praetorians were privileged in comparison to other soldiers since they were better paid and their service lasted just 16 years.

From the reign of Vespasian onwards, there were ten praetorian cohorts stationed in Rome under the command of one praefectus praetorio. Political role of the Guard and its commanders was often of the great importance Cohors I praetoria was where Barbius Finitus (no. 8) served his years. He erected an altar to Jupiter for the fortunate return from the journey to the sacred city. His service was obviously performed as a praetorian in Rome. Rome was not referred to as the sacred city prior to the period of the emperor Hadrian,³⁰ hence this is terminus post quem for dating.

Most probably it was with the cohort VII praetoria that the cavalryman (eques) Ennius Secundianus (no. 7) served his duties that were not completed since the tombstone reads that he died when just 25 years old.

Inscription no. 2 was erected by the brothers Lucius and Publius, both centurions, which suggests a family oriented toward the military. Publius commanded the speculatores and Lucius was a centurion in the legion XIII Gemina. Because his function (speculatores – personal guards, scouts) is supplemented by the adjective augusti we can assume that P. Dindius served among the praetorians who guarded the emperor.³¹ The commander of speculatores bore the title centurio speculator,³² the function performed by P. Dindius Speratus. Three hundred members of a special unit of the praetorian guard were entrusted with the especially important task of being the emperor's personal guards.³³ Speculatores were sometimes also the personal guards of the provincial governor; they are attested in numerous provinces, among others also in Pannonia and Dalmatia. The gentilicium Dindius is not frequent since it appears in Noricum only in this inscription,³⁴ in the immediate vicinity Dindii are attested in Kamnik, Emona, and Aquileia, while the family originated from the town Praeneste in central Italy. In Aquileia, the town from where they moved on to the neighbouring territory, Dindii are relatively well attested.³⁵ Dindii in the discussed inscription probably belonged to the the second generation of the family. The mother's gentilicium Gavia is a Latin name, most frequently attested in Italy but not uncommon elsewhere.³⁶ The surname

Viruna, attested only in this inscription, is probably derived from the name of the municipium Virunum, thus we could assume the autochthonous origin.³⁷ The inscription could possibly be dated to the period when the legion XIII Gemina was stationed in Poetovio, i.e. to the second half of the 1st c.³⁸ After the battle of Actium it was active in Illyricum and was later transferred to the Rhine (9 AD) and finally to Vindonissa (Germania Superior). In the time of Claudius (45/46) it came to Poetovio, where it succeeded the legion VII Augusta and remained there until around 90 AD. Domitian sent it to Vindobona.³⁹ It could have participated in Trajan's first war against the Daci but it was certainly there in the second one. It remained in the newly formed province Dacia and it was stationed in Apulum. When the Romans retreated from Dacia (274/275) it was moved to the new province Dacia Ripensis (Ratiaria).⁴⁰

The Celeian territory reveals just one praetorian of the cohort II Praetoria attested in the inscription from Zgornje Dovže (no. 21). His name Seconius is a pseudogentilicium derived from the Celtic root Secco-. In lines 8 and 10 two words are subscripted that were probably incised later on since there is no clear connection to the original inscription. Both later entries can be connected to military life: equis can stand for eques (horseman) or, even more probably, for equiso (stableman), denoting the person named Ursō. The second entry is the word miles, which seems to supplement the name Severus.⁴¹ Roman citizenship was the condition for acceptance into a legion; praetorians, too, had to have Roman citizenship and they could also be recruited from legions.⁴² The gentilicium of the soldier from the cohort II Praetoria is not Latin but is a pseudogentilicium of a Celtic origin making this praetorian most probably an autochthonous inhabitant (cf. Secco-). It was believed for a long time that praetorians were in the early period recruited solely from Italy, from the beginning of the 2nd c. also from certain provinces – among others also from Noricum, and from the time of Septimius Severus mostly from Pannonia.⁴³ If the approximate dating of the inscription with the pseudogentilicium is correct, the praetorians were drawn from Noricum already in the 1st c.

Military inscriptions in the Celeian ager (tab. 4)

Ten military inscriptions and ten people who performed military offices come from the ager of Celeia. Three of these are veterans, with one his unit is not stated (no. 19), and with the other two we find legions (nos. 14 and 18) and with one even his function of an armourer (custos armorum) – no. 18 explicitly written. Many words and phrases were applied to veterans: dimissi honesta missione, emissi, missici, emeriti, evocati or exauktorati. After their discharge, they became honestiores and were thus able to acquire important positions in the local administration, and were also active in the fields of economy, trade, some even performed sacerdotal functions.

Three persons on the tombstones are miles. Two soldiers completed their service in the legion II Italica (nos. 15 and 20), and the third was a praetorian in the cohort II Praetoria (no. 21). Other persons on the tombstones achieved somewhat higher functions: centurio and decurio. One of the centurions belonged to the legion II Italica (no. 13) and the other of the legion X Gemina (no. 17). The decurion was commanding in the ala II Asturum (no. 16). Centurions were the highest officers in the Roman army below the members of the senatorial and equestrian orders. Some even believe that centurions were promoted to the equestrian order but it seems more probable that such a privilege was accorded only to primi pili.⁴⁴

The recruitment of auxiliary troops was done among peregrines who, after completing the service of 25 years, were awarded certain rights and benefits, including Roman citizenship.⁴⁵ Commanders of auxiliary units and other high officers, who mostly came from Italy,⁴⁶ had to be Roman citizens. T. Iulius Bellicus (no. 16) was a decurion in an ala,⁴⁷ where he commanded one turma. After completing his military office, T. Iulius Bellicus continued his career in the municipal administration, where he was a member of the municipal council (ordo decurionum).⁴⁸ His tombstone testifies to the wealth of his family since his brother and heir erected to him an enviable monument.

Domaszewski, Dobson (1967, 83–90) adds that centurions were generally of Italic origin or from the Roman military colonies.

⁴⁵ Diplomas found everywhere in the Empire testify to that.

⁴⁶ Ott 1997, 133.

⁴⁷ Ott 1997, 133 lists Marcus Bellicius Saturninus among the Norican commanders of the auxiliary units and he supposedly came from the family, who made a fortune by trade in Virunum. I believe the Bellicii from Virunum to be a side branch of those from Celeia. Colonization and Romanization must have reached Celeia first and later spread further on.

⁴⁸ It was not unusual to enter the municipal elite after completing military service.

The legion II Italica was stationed in Noricum for the entire time of its existence; it was first stationed in the territory of the Celeian ager. As can be expected, in the Celeian area we encounter the most soldiers of this legion (nos. 10, 11, 13, 15, 18, and 20). The inscriptions of the Celeian ager feature two other legions, the legion V Macedonica (no. 14) and the legion X Gemina (no. 17).

The legion II Italica was founded by the emperor Marcus Aurelius in 165 or 166 during the war with the Marcomanni.⁴⁹ Soon after its founding it was sent to Noricum (168/169 or just after), where it built its first legionary encampment in the strategically well positioned settlement of Ločica near Celje to prevent access from Pannonia to Emona and further toward Italy. It was not stationed there for long, since Commodus had already relocated it to Lauriacum. Already in its time at Ločica it supposedly received the titles of pia and fidelis, since a brick with these titles⁵⁰ was found in the immediate vicinity of the camp (at Vrasko). In 174/175 the legion was moved to the Danube, first to Albing and then to Lauriacum, where it stayed until late antiquity. Pochmarski believes that due to its loyalty it was awarded the title fidelis in the time of the emperor Septimius Severus.⁵¹ This is obviously not true since the name is attested earlier in Ločica but probably the title was later awarded the legion or confirmed several times anew.⁵² Under Caracalla and Elagabalus it was named Antoniniana and under Alexander Sever Severiana. The first generation of its legionaries originated in northern Italy, where the recruitment of the legion II Italica took place. The origin of the next generations can be found in Noricum, especially after the introduction of constitutio Antoniniana (212), with which legions were open to a wider circle of men.⁵³

Septimius Secundinus (no. 15) served in this legion but died prematurely at the age of 40, after 15 years of service; obviously both names were rounded.⁵⁴ Even though quite frequent, the word stupendiorum in this inscription is somewhat peculiar – a more frequent form is that with an I: stipendiorum. The form with the U is not incorrect but rather archaic. Varro notices that this use was more common in the vulgar language.⁵⁵ The variation between I and U can be detected from the Augustan period on. Under the influence of such examples the use spread to those examples where I and U were pronounced similarly.⁵⁶

The veteran Sacronius Verinus (no. 18) is attested in the inscription with a special function of the armourer (custos armorum) that could be performed by a common soldier. Each centuria in the legion was to have one armourer, thus making them 59 in all (like centurions).⁵⁷

The phrase hoste Gutica means the Gothic enemy, with whom Aurelius Victor (no. 20) fought as the soldier of the legion II Italica. The form Gutica is a little unusual, since such a form had not been known before for the Goths. Nevertheless, the standard form Gothicus (Gothic, Goth) is often replaced in inscriptions by Gotico, Guttico, or Guthicus and the form Gutica is thus just a variation of the adjective Gothicus.⁵⁸ The first emperor to bear this title was Claudius Gothicus (268–270) who decisively defeated the Goths at Naissus (Niš) in 269. Aurelius Victor could have fought in this battle, since both diction of the inscription and the relief depiction on the tombstone speak in favour of the erection in this time. This date is supposed by the fact that the soldier served in the legion II Italica, the legion which could have actually participated in this battle.⁵⁹ Petrovitch believes that it is probable that Aurelius Victor was killed in Decius' campaign against the Goths.⁶⁰ The depiction of a soldier in the relief niche is extremely interesting. Among many other details, the round chape of the sword is here the key component for the dating of the monument. This kind of round chapes is divided into two groups, both of which belong to the second half of the 3rd c.,⁶¹ which confirms the proposed dating under Claudius Gothicus.

The centurion (possibly beneficiarius) of the legion II Italica L. Septimius (?) Tertinus (no. 13) erected the votive altar to Victoria, Noreia, and Britannia (now kept in Črešnjevec). Noreia is called regina, which may point to her identification with Isis. The dedication to Britannia is unusual and implies that this soldier was stationed in Britannia. This inscription could thus be assigned to those inscriptions that confirm connections between Noricum and Britannia.⁶²

After the completion of his services, C. Vibius Sabinus (no. 14), the veteran of the legion V Macedonica, returned to his home town, which could be suggested by his gentilicium.⁶³

⁶³ Cf. Onomasticon IV, 165–166: the name was popular and widely spread in Noricum and Panonnia, which points to the similarity with the autochthonous names in Vib- (Vibenus). The name Vibius was initially the Oscian praenomen but later became widely used in Latin thus being used as the gentilicium as well as the cognomen (Lochner von Hüttenbach, 181–182). Confirmation for this can be found also in the name of the autochthonous deity Vibes (cf. RINMS 115).

The legion V Macedonica was in Macedonia between 30 BC and 6 AD, and was then transferred to Moesia, where its camp was at Oescus. In 61 or 62 it was sent to Armenia, where it served under Vespasian in the war against the Jews; but it returned to its camp in Moesia before 71. When the province was divided in the year 86, the legion was assigned to the units of Moesia Inferior. It fought against the Parthi (162–166) under Lucius Verus and relocated to Dacia (Potaissa) in 167 or 168. When the Romans lost Dacia north of the Danube (274/275), the legion returned to Oescus, which was now located in the newly formed province of Dacia Ripensis.⁶⁴ The inscription belongs to the 2nd c. but it seems more plausible that he served in Moesia and not in Dacia.

In the inscriptions of the Celeian ager we also encounter the legion X Gemina (pia, fidelis), which left Hispania in 63 AD when it was sent to Panonnia (Carnuntum). For a short time it had to return to Hispania once again; for some time it was stationed in Germania Inferior, where it earned the titles pia and fidelis for its loyalty during the revolt of L. Antonius Saturninus (between 89 and 96). Around 103 it was transferred from Germania to Panonnia; it stayed in Aquincum a short while. It is not precisely known when it was permanently stationed in Vindobona but it was certainly in the time of the emperor Trajan, somewhere after 107.⁶⁵ L. Appuleius (no. 17) served in this legion; after the discharge, he was probably a mayor in Celeia.⁶⁶ He probably arranged a grave plot for himself and his family near his properties that should have been located in the Celeian ager, near Colatio. The monument belongs to the 2nd c., thus to the time when the legion served in nearby Panonnia.

T. Iulius Bellicus was a decurion in the ala II Asturum (no. 16). In the early period, decurions were the commanders of a smaller cavalry unit, and in the imperial period (the date of this inscription), they commanded one turma.⁶⁷ The decurion of an ala was superior in rank to the centurion of an (auxiliary) cohort and inferior to a centurion of a legion.⁶⁸ A significant number of inscriptions attesting ala II Asturum were found in Britannia (on Hadrian's Wall), indicating that it must have been stationed there for a longer period.⁶⁹ According to Wagner, it was transferred from Germania to the Danube still in the time of Tiberius. Birley believes that it was first active in the area of the Rhine, later in Panonnia and then in Britannia. Krier, on the other hand, argues a somewhat different order of service: in the pre-Flavian period the ala was supposedly a part of the Norican army; after the Batavian revolt it was transferred to Panonnia. Iulius Agricola could have led it to Britannia.⁷⁰

STATING OF AGE ON THE MILITARY INSCRIPTIONS OF CELEIA

The majority of military inscriptions in Celeia (both town and ager) consists of tombstones, where it is usual to state the age of the deceased. All the more we would expect the precise age of soldiers as they spent the greater part of their lives in a state organization, where it was extremely important when somebody entered a unit, and left it, hence his years of service should be known well.

In the town of Celeia, age is incised on seven inscriptions (nos. 1, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, and 12). The rounding of numbers is evident: 70, 75 (no. 1); 40 (no. 5); 25, 60, 50 (no. 7); 50, 35 (no. 10); 45, 35 (no. 12). The years are precisely stated with the soldier who died soon after entering the army, on the Dacian campaign, at the age of 23 (no. 11). Inscription no. 12 is erected to Aurelius Secundinus, who died as a child at only seven years of age; the precise stating of the years is more frequent with young persons.

The precise stating of age is evident also with the two persons on inscription no. 6 (38, 24 years), in which the age of the veteran C. Junius Iseus (60) upon his death is also rounded. The age of Ulpia Aphrodisia on this inscription, 25 years and 1 month, is also interesting since such precise stating of age is a rare, but understandable phenomenon on the military and other inscriptions.⁷¹

The situation in the ager is similar – age is stated on five inscriptions (nos. 14, 15, 18, 19, and 20). The most interesting is inscription no. 19, where ages of four individuals are noted: the first one is the s. c. centenarian,⁷² his wife was also of the venerable age of 90, while the remaining two persons, who could have been their children, supposedly both died at twenty-two. With the first two, the rounding of the years is obvious, and with the latter two the identical of age is unlikely. All other years are rounded to 5 or 10: 65 (no. 14); 50, 40, 30 (no. 15); 50 (no. 18); 30 (no. 20).

CONCLUSION

Military inscriptions of Celeia attest mostly legionaries, praetorians, centurions, and veterans; the veteran Sacronius Verinus (no. 18) was custos armorum. Among legions, II Italica – the only Norican legion, V Macedonica, VI Ferrata, VIII Augusta, and X and XIII Gemina are attested. The last three belonged to the neighbouring Pannonian army during different time periods. Among auxiliary units, ala I Commagenorum is documented twice and once ala Asturum. Both units belonged to the Norican army and were stationed in the province between the 1st and the 3rd centuries.⁷³

None of the three dedicators of the votive altars are common soldiers: Barbius Finitus (no. 8) is a praetorian, Ulpius Valerianus (no. 9) a centurion, and L. Septimius Tertinus (no. 13) a centurion or a beneficiarius. This fact can be connected to the costs for the monument's erection, which must have been extremely difficult for a common soldier to afford.

In Celeia, we can distinguish between the local people, who returned to their homeland after the completed military service, and the foreigners, who were stationed in the vicinity and settled here. Praetorians (nos. 2, 7, 8, and 21) and the second generation of the legion II Italica (nos. 10, 11, 12?, 13, 15, and 20) are distinctive among the former. Only one foreigner is explicitly attested (no. 1): his origo was Verona. Soldiers mentioned on the inscriptions nos. 3 (or 4), 14, 17, and 19 were most probably also recruited in Celeia, although in some cases the precise data are lacking.

When comparing the inscriptions of two Norican towns Flavia Solva and Celeia, we need to consider the historically conditioned differences between them, primarily the earlier foundation of Celeia, where soldiers are more numerous. These differences also influenced the presence of the army in the town, the recruitment of soldiers, and the return of veterans to their home town. They are approximately 100 in Celeia compared to 46 in Flavia Solva.

Celeia and Flavia Solva are not comparable in the number of the inscriptions but they are comparable in respect of units and their number. In both municipia the majority of soldiers served in the legion II Italica (in Celeia 11, including the beneficiarii, in Solva 7). Functions attested in both towns are very similar: centurions are well attested, and so are also praetorians (Flavia Solva 11, Celeia 12 – including those attested in other parts of the Empire). The expected differences between the town and ager occur, most noticeably in the form of the monuments, their number, and a wider variety of units and functions within the town.
